A CENTURY GOLF GIRL.

Golf, the Great Outdoor Fad of the Season.

Golfing is the outdoor fad of the season. The American girl says so, and her word is law nowadays. The craze for golf is widespread, and is not limited to the girls of any one grade of society.

The golfing girl expert who plays with a "St. Andrew swing," and owns more clubs than her caddy can carry, is wild with enthusiasm over the sport.

And the girl with two "bargain" clubs, who plays on a free course, is an equally loyal golfer.

The golfing girl's vocabulary is full of mysterious golfing lore, and her cheeks are full of golfing roses.

If she is a fashionable young person her golf clothes are so varied that they form in themselves an entire wardrobe and costs hundreds of dollars, and her golfing implements are countless.

But the golfing fad goes far beyond the limits of costume and clubs. The truly enthusiastic golfing girl this year is a golfer in every phase of her social life.

She gives golf luncheons with her club colors and with golfing souvenirs.

She designs the prettiest and daintiest golf favors for dances and card parties.

She has all the toilette articles which adorn her dressing table either fashioned after golfing implements or decorated with golf symbols.

And her jewelry, her hat pins, studs, belt buckles, pins and cuff links all tell a tale of the golfing fad.

The golfing girl's strictly golfing wardrobe shows much that is odd and new this year. Here are the novelties:

Quaint and airy sunbonnets fit for a fluffy picture girl.

Fanciful silk jackets embroidered in thistles and golf clubs.

Gay colored satin knee breeches with jeweled buckles at the knees.

Impracticable all white costumes.

Brilliant green box-cloth coats with revers, collar and cuffs a vivid scarlet.

Soft warm golf caps in the lightest and grightest of plaids.

And silk and loosely woven fine wool stockings with Scottch plaid tops in place of those of heavy wool.

The golfing girl wears her skirts a good two inches longer this year than last. Now they are just four inches from the ground. And whether of stout tweed or cool linen they are all made to fit with prevailing fashionable smoothness at the back and over the hips, though the yard sufficiently wide at the bottom to make tramping over the links a pleasure. Of jackets she owns an interesting collection, and her hats, shirt waists, belts and neckties specially designed for golf almost require cataloguing so great is their variety.

Hints For Comfort of Baby.

Baths, sleep and meals should be at certain hours and a form of regularity followed. However, there are times when rules fail and the general regulations cannot be carried out. When a baby is teething and fretful and really ailing he must be tended carefully and tenderly ,whatever happens.

Milk is the principal diet for all small children, and fruit is equally necessary. Ripe ,sweet fruits are perfectly safe. Unripe acid fruits will disturb the digestion whether milk is taken or not, but with milk, of course, the trouble is worse. The best time to give a chold fruit is before breakfast and the midday meal.

There is no prettier way of making little frocks for a girl baby of two years than than the simple Mother Hubbard style in any of its variations. The main thing is to avoid overtrimming. The wide frills over the shoulders are no longer worn. Everything is tiny tucks, dainty lace and the smallest of ruffles.

It is not wisdom to keep a child awake in the hope that after once going to sleep he wil sleep sounder for several hours. Just as soon as a child is really tired he begins to fret. It takes time then for the nervous system to quiet down.

Housewives, Read These.

It ruins a piano to keep it standing in a draught.

Bruised cloves kept among fur frightens moths away.

Sponge black silk with spirits to revive it.

The busy housewife should get an hour's sleep in the afternoon.

A hot bath taken at night affords refreshing sleep.

When you want to cut whalebone warm it by the fire.

An egg beaten in milk is a good pick-me-up.

Lemons stowed separately in dry sand keep fresh.

Choosing a Flower Queen.

A pretty flower figure for the cotillon is the "Choosing of Proserpine." Sealed envelopes, containing cards, on one of which is inscribed "Queen of Flowers," are distributed to the women. The one who secures the queen card takes her seat in the centre of the room and all the couples dance around her, throwing the flowers which they carry into her lap as they dance past. At the end she ties them up into a bouquet and carries them off, having chosen her partner.

One of the newest lovers' fads is to have minitures on sleeve-links. So long as he and she are bound by betrothal's chain and the figurative binding by golden links is an attractive idea.

Clothing of "Cast Off Ladies."

"Cast-off ladies' clothes bought and sold" reads the sign of a New York shop. This is not intended as a slur on the women who patronize the shop, but is merely the proprietor's peculiar method of expressing himself. So far from meaning any offense, he will assure you that his patrons are the best people in town.

LACE TRIMMED GOWNS.

They Are Fashion's Favorites For Summer and Fall.

Gowns of lawn or linen have very little of either of those materials about them as a whole, for the goods simply serve as connecting tissue to hold together bands of lace insertion, lace motifs or masses of embroidery, which practically compose the costume. Black, white, ecru and cream laces enjoy equal success, being the preferred decoration for skirts, bodices, wraps, hats and parasols.

Entire skirts, made in one piece and shaped to the figure, are composed of renaissance guipure or luxeuil lace and are worn over underskirts of white or light silk or satin. They are of very rich appearance and cost proportionately.

Black lace is immensely worn over a white foundation and is an additional mark of the increasing tendency toward black and white combinations. White muslin trimmed with black valenciennes is also much seen.

The princess gown illustrated is of French blue crepe de chine. The skirt forms three shaped flounces, edged with an application of guipure. The upper part of the bodice and the collar have corded tucks. Over the gown is a sort of pinafore tunic of guipure, closed at the back by little bows and buckles. The guipure sleeves are lined with crepe de chine and have three cords at the top. The beret which accompanies the gown is of flowers, surrounded by a drapery of tulle and trimmed with a curled plume. Pearl gray gloves are worn.

THE MODE.

Prevailing Styles In Gowns, Jackets and Millinery.

Red is in great favor. Garlands of poppies on hats, boleros of cloth or plaited taffeta worn with white skirts and parasols of brilliant silk give the striking red note which is so joyous and pleasing, especially out of doors. In the juvenile wardrobe red reigns triumphant and is always suitable and attractive.

Jackets and boleros are rendered highly elaborate by embroideries of chenille, beads and open designs, often mingled with spangles and lace.

The loose jacket, which is making another struggle for supremacy, meets with greater success for children than for women. Its shape, or rather shapelessness, renders it easy to put on and off, and it does not in any degree incommode its wearer nor hinder her freedom of action. A summer sack of surah or faille, bordered with an application of guipure, is the accepted coat for a very little girl.

The picture illustrates a costume for a little girl. The plaited skirt is of Scotch plaid, the loose jacket of black cloth, fastened in front by a strap and two steel buttons. The sleeves are tucked at the top. The plastron and wide collar of white etamine are embroidered with red. The belt is of fawn kid. The sailor hat of mixed straw has a band of red grosgrain and a little bunch of cherries and black feathers.

FASHION'S LATEST

The Girl of the Period Now Adorns Herself With Barbaric Jewels.

Fashion's latest extreme takes the form of a rage for barbaric jewels. Bracelets and anklets as burdensome in appearance as shackles and heavily linked chains are accepted as the latest mode in jewelry by well-gowned women. The fad was recently introduced in Paris, where massive bracelets were worn exclusively on the ankles with short bicycle skirts that were fashionable.

Two New York women who have just returned from Paris wear them about the ankle or just at the top of the boot when donned in their sporting clothes.

It is said that several other women have already been measured for them. The most beautiful ones are undoubtedly those that are enamelled or the dull gold ones that are studded with uncut stones. But one is admissible and it should be worn on the left foot.

This tendency for massive barbaric jewelry is also noticed in the bands of gold of exquisite Etruscan workmanship which are worn low on the forehead with dinner or evening gowns and in the heavy chains that fall to the knees after being wrapped several times around the throat.

Suspended at the end of them there is often a small, single eyeglass, a diminutive fan or an odd little notebook.

BARBARIC JEWELS.

The revival of the fashion of wearing chains originated in Rome at a fashionable bazaar for the benefit of a convent, when three long chains of cut jets were strung by the nuns and offered for sale.

They were bought by two New York women and one French woman. Afterward a large demand was made for them in Paris.

Dusky New Women.

Many an Arab lady never leaves her house from the time she is married until she is carried out to be buried. A woman of the middle class is allowed more liberty, and occasionally goes out for walks, accompanied as a rule by a servant. The poor creature is enveloped in masses of white drapery, which make her look like a walking bundle, and in front of her face she arranges a large black scarf embroidered with blue, red and white flowers. It falls low in front, and, even by holding up the ends, she cannot see more than a foot or two of the road before her. I often wonder that she does not get run over when she goes out alone, for I am sure she needs a dog to guide her quite as much as any blind man. Servants and other women of the lower classes wear pieces of black crepon wound tightly round their faces, leaving just a slit for their eyes to peep through, and they are equally muffled up in white draperies. Seen from a distance, says Pearson's Weekly, they might be men with masks or thick black beards, as in Arab countries it is by no means easy to tell a man from a woman at first sight. The older and uglier a woman is the more prudish she seems to be about covering up her face, which after all, is rather considerate on her part. Even the greater number of negresses wear the yashmak, but the Bedouin women never do. Indeed, I am told that in the interior there is one Arab tribe whose men wear veils, and whose women go about with their faces uncovered. These are probably the "new women" of Africa.

Things Worth Knowing.

That falling of the hair after illness may be prevented by the frequent application of sage tea to the scalp.

That consumptive night sweats may be arrested by sponging the body, before retiring to rest, with salt and water.

That a tumbler of hot, strong lemonade taken on going to bed will often break up a bad cold. The remedy should be used when the cold is first felt, for if it is allowed to make headway it will have to run its course.

That warm borax water, applied to the scalp, will remove dandruff.

That a little carbonate of soda in water will relieve a sick headache caused by indigestion.

That morning lassitude and headache are usually caused by want of proper ventilation in the bedroom.

That a bag of hot sand will greatly relieve the pain caused by neuralgia.

That a fever patient can be made cool and comfortable by frequent sponging with water in which a little soda has been dissolved.

That uncomfortable fitting boots with high heels not only cause an awkward walk, but are often a source of headache and other maladies.

That a half-pint of hot water taken on rising and before retiring to bed at night will greatly benefit most sufferers from dyspepsia.

TO FINICAL FEEDERS.

Reason Why a Child Cannot Eat a Thing.

The foundation of the habit is almost invariably laid in childhood.

"Tom cannot abide roast mutton," says the mother, with an intonation which fastens the idea in Tom's small mind that the disinclination, once or twice expressed, perhaps when he had eaten too many sureptitious sweets, in some way confers importance upon him. The next time roast mutton is the piece de resistance of the family dinner he refuses it yet more pointedly, and sulks until a tid-bit he can abide is laid upon his plate.

The whim grows by what it does not feed upon. One after another article of food is added to the list of proscribed, and Tom grows into youth and ever he is met with, and at whatever age, he is a terror to the hospitable, an abomination in the sight of the boarding-house keeper and a smoke in the nostrils of sensible, commonplace people who have found other roads to distinction than the display of gastronomic likes and dislikes.

"Eat what is set before thee, asking no questions, for consciences' sake," wrote the gentlemanly apostle. In a day when there is no risk of being set down unawares to meat that has been offered to idols, we may amend the injunction to suit the circumstances. "Eat what is set before you," or pretend ot eat it. Never, except at the last gasp of conscientious regard for the truth, intimate to the maker of the feast that you dislike any dish prepared for her guests.

The needless expression of such distaste is, perhaps, a half degree short of an insult, but in social etiquette we seldom measure grades with such exactness. Like the coachman chosen from his competitors for his shrewd mother wit, we drive as far from the edge of the precipice as we can. If driven to brutal veracity, give some other reason than personal aversion for declining to partake of the dish. It is a matter of no consequence whatever to society at large that you do not eat raw oysters. In fact, one can hardly imagine a fact more nearly infinitesimal. If offered to you with the option of acceptance or refusal you can let the dish pass. If the obnoxious portion be laid upon your plate, and you cannot summon the fortitude to swallow a mouthful, toy with it, or let it alone, and talk as for your life, to avert attention from your lack of conformity to established customs.

In the black book of my memory is written the story of one luncheon to which a business acquaintance of my husband was invited, unexpectedly to me. He called at our country house just at noon, and there was no time to alter the menu, had a market been near. Thus the incident is recorded in the aforesaid Doomsday book—Imprimis—Cream of asparagus soup. Visitor "never ate asparagus in any form." Second dish—Pickerel caught in the lake that morning. Visitor "did not care for fresh-water fish." Third failure—Cold beef a la mode, especially fine, to my way of thinking. Visitor "never tasted spiced or larded meat." Fourth failure—Tomato salad. "Visitor had an unfortunate antipathy to tomatoes." Fifth and final discomfiture—He would not touch the raspberries and cream with which the unfortunate meal was brought to a close. "Raspberries are absolute poison to my system. Luckily I recollected a scrap of cold lamb in the refrigerator; he could eat potatoes, bread and butter, and condescended to a second cup of tea.

The finical feeder was not a dyspeptic. He went out of his way to inform me of that gratifying circumstance. Neither was he a boor in any other respect. Yet I registered a vow to myself when he departed that he should ever invited him to enter it again.

"I fink," remarked an observant child afterward, who had watched the nonperformance with silent gravity while at table—"I fink his mother didn't teach not him to say 'I don't yike it' when he was yittle."

Master Boy struck at the root of the very ugly tree. Early habits, and a great many of them, are largely responsible for a breach of simple politeness, an offense to feeling and taste so common that one hardly dare animadvert upon it in general company for fear of treading upon the toes of somebody present. The mother who frowns down capricious appetite as unmannerly and a thing to be ashamed of drives a nail in a sure place in the edifice of good breeding. The man who has not learned this lesson of unselfish discipline of his whims and humors when young should regret and not indulge fancies hardened into dislikes by time and habit.—New York Herald.

LAST STAND OF TROOP M

A Thrilling Story of a Fatal Fight With the Chirichua Apaches.

A VERY TRAGICAL TALE.

Three Types of the Gallant Soldiers Which Go to Make Up the Army of the United States.

Apaches Waited For Dawn to Make the Attack and Man After Man Went Down on a Murderous Leaden Rain—Another Instance of Bureaucratic Ignorance and Indian Treachery.

The little creek, rudely dammed for bathing below camp, was gurgling on just the same as ever. The tall pines lent their tops as Aeolian instruments to the warm night wind. The two horses at the long stretch of picket line took rest from the labors of the "day herd," but the knowledge of hovering ghastly death was in the heart of every trooper of M of the —th.

The dread war chant of the Chirichua Apaches rose higher and higher, the death chant of the gallant handful of white men camped under the hills should be their destruction—a monotonous horror of sound.

Just another instance of bureaucratic ignorance and blindness and of Indian treachery, that is all, says a writer in the Sketch. "Farm camp" and escort—the one made for savages whose last intention it was to farm, the latter entirely inadequate in case of outbreak. And so Troop M of the —th, armed and silent, was awaiting the oncome of Geronimo's malcontents, the last chance of retreat gone, and the chance of any rider making his way out and to Fort Apache for reinforcements precluded.

Sanford W. Calhoun, first lieutenant and troop commander—tall, lithe, the handsomest man in the regiment, the leader of ball and of social wherever he might be quartered—had been deeply thinking, and had sought relief in low converse with his cosmopolitan first sergeant, a man of infinite possibilities and—a past.

"It's all up with M of the —th this time, Majendie," Calhoun said, and Majendie answered with a short laugh, "Yes."

Calhoun shuddered. The man's blase recklessness had jarred him before. "And you've nothing to regret, nothing to hold you to the life we shall quit—no fear?"

Majendie laughed again, with a sneer on his cynical face. "No lieutenant, neither regret nor fear. I've drained life's cup of nectar, and also her cup of gall, to the dregs. I've had my good time and my bad time, and, if the end is here, I'm ready."

Calhoun sighed. "I wish I was, sergeant, but I am not. Life's sweet, sergeant. It's never seemed so sweet as now, when it's going. You see, I've only tasted the cup as yet. And it's good, sergeant, very, very good—you understand?"

The sergeant smiled inscrutably. He knew why life held so much for his commander, pictured to himself the girl-wife with her first-born back there at Fort Grant, and pitied the brave, selfish man at his side more than her.

"I understand, lieutenant," he said; then he indicated a young trooper close by—a fair, boyish recruit on his first "field" duty.

"You see young Wilson there, lieutenant?" he went on. "Well, you and he and I represent three distinct types of manhood. Wilson is one of the most innocent, pure-minded, kindly lads I've ever come in contact with—a mother's boy. Will he fight for the life that was never yet his, but her's? According to all that has been written in fiction, yes. He says his prayers regularly, and he reads his Bible, and, in his own belief, he is ready to stay or go, at the Master's will. Lieutenant, that boy will die with horror and fear in his eyes. A coward!"

Calhoun shuddered again, but asked the question, "And I?"

Majendie smiled, looking at the fine, clear-cut features of the American aristocrat. "The lieutenant," he said, "will die like the man I know him to be, bravely, but the bitterness of it will seize him and hold him. There will be resentment in his eyes—a grudge against fate."

"And you?"

"And I—Hark! By God, sir, they're opening the ball."

It was dawn. The Apaches had been waiting for it. A bullet clipped Majendie's ear, another spattered dirt in Calhoun's face. The sergeant laughed.

Cynical and sneering, a man whose only popularity lay in his acknowledged smartness. The moment transformed him. One leap landed him at the side of the boy recruit behind a huge pine tree, and then, through it all, through the crashing and yelling, the horror and despair of the last fight, as man after man went down, the long-legged "citizen of the world" cheered the remnant by word and deed.

He saw the lieutenant leap and fall, saw the boy recruit, with the horror of it in his despair-stricken eyes, sink at his feet, and then—

When the squaws of Geronimo's band swooped down on the dead of martyred "M" they came across three men whom they left untouched of mutilating knife—the first, the boy farm instructor, because she who claimed him loved him; the second, because through some strange cause, none desired to touch the young white chief; the third and last, because he, game to the end, was in their sight the bravest of the dead. And in the eyes of the first lurked dread, in those of the second bitterness, but in the eyes of the third there dwelt a wondrous—peace.

And lo! when men came to search the three untouched bodies in after time, over the heart of him in peace they found the stained photographs of his one comrade's mother and of his other comrade's wife.

The mean age of a maiden on marriage was, in 1886, 21.9 years, while in 1897 it had risen to 23.8, or nearly two years older. Among the bachelors who married a corresponding dates the advance in mean age was still more pronounced

EAT RAILROAD MEN

Lions Lunch Off Laborers Constructing Railroads in Africa.

Man-eating lions are delaying the progress of an important railway being built by the British in East Africa to connect Mombasa with Uganda. The voracious kings of the forest have developed a keen appetite for the Indian laborers and have succeeded in decimating the working force from time to time since the enterprise got well under way. The lions did most of their foraging at night.

Now, it is learned, the quarters and houses of the laborers are protected by lion proof stockades, which are fifteen feet high and from six to eight feet thick. Surrounded by these, the men sleep in safety. One of the man-eaters who had dined on seventeen coolies on as many occasions came to grief finally when he attacked the men on a baggage car. They killed him and his skin is preserved as a souvenir to be sent to the British Museum.

Apples as Medicine.

Chemically, the apple is composed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyll, malic acid, gallic acid, lime and much water. Furthermore, the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. This phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter, lethicin, of the brain and spinal cord. It is perhaps for the same reason, rudely understood, that old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body. Also the acids of the apple are of great use for men of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action, these acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters, which if retained would make the brain heavy and dull, or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles. Some such experience must have led to our custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose, and like dishes. The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also a fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe, and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach, rather than provoke it. Their vegetable salts and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity. A ripe, raw apple is one of the easiest vegetable substances for the stomach to deal with, the whole process of the digestion being completed in eighty-five minutes. Gerard found that the "pulpe of roasted apples mixed in a wine quart of faire water, and labored together until it comes to be as apples and ale—which we call lambswool—never faileth in certain diseases of the raines, which myself hath often proved, and gained thereby both crownes and credit." "The paring of an apple, cut somewhat thick, and the inside whereof is laid to hot, burning, or running eyes at night, when the party goes to bed, and is tired or bound to the same, doth help the trouble very speedily; and contrary to expectation—an excellent secret."

A Giant Clock.

An Illinois jeweler has partially solved the "perpetual motion" problem by inventing a clock that will run a year without any attention. The clock is run with a wheel five feet in circumference. From the outside of the wheel hang 120 cups one-third of an inch deep and half an inch in diameter. Each forty of cups hold steel balls three-eighths of an inch in diameter. As the wheel turns by the balls' weight a ball falls from its cup every minute [illegible] a half, rolls down a 20-inch inclined plane, reunites by its weight a broken electric circuit, and is lifted back to its cup by a little car which runs on a steeper inclined plane to the wheel's top. The electric storage battery used does not need replenishing for a year. The clock has been running since Aug. 26, 1898.

A Fair Cannibal.

My love attended at the cooking school
Learned to make bread and cakes and pies by rule,
Studied the science of the stew and roast,
And solved the mysteries of quail on toast.

I found her when I went to call that day,
Cook-book in hand, absorbed in "Consomme;"
And, jesting, I much doubted if she knew
What was required to make a first-class stew.

A week had passed; another call I paid;
"I've learned since then," she said, "how soup is made;"
And when my questions took a tender bent,
I found that I was an ingredient.

"How did you enjoy the banquet?" "Great," answered the young man with the red tie and yellow vest. "I got away with three spoons, a salt shaker and a sugar bowl."—Indianapolis Journal.

The need of additional facilities by South Orange, Vailsburg and Irvington requires that this work be done with all possible dispatch, and I trust that there will be no delay in granting us the necessary permit requested.

Signed,
Very respectfully,

One night he had an accident. One of the flues in the boiler of his pet engine blew out and he was stalled, blocking the main line. He reported the matter to the division superintendent unwittingly as follows:

"Engine two blew out a flew; what'll I do?—Bill Blue."

Then he sat down to await instructions. This is what came over the wires from the superintendent's office twenty minutes later:

"Bill Blue: You plug that flue in engine two and pull her through in time to get out of the way of twenty-two."

This order is stuck up in the cab of Engine 2.

Sorting Walnuts

Recently two walnut shippers of Anaheim county, California, found that many of the walnuts in their possession were light and empty, and they cast around for some means to rapidly handle the goods, as it was an almost endless job to do it by hand. They finally evolved the machinery to do it with, consisting of a four-foot blast fan, twenty inches wide, propelled by a three-horse power gasoline engine. The fan is set revolving very rapidly and the nuts are precipitated into a trough leading down to the fan, whence the heavy nuts drop into the bin made to receive them, while the light ones are blown into a receptable arranged for them further on. The force of the wind is sufficient to blow the lighter nuts aside, while the good ones fall straight down.

Broke Into Prison.

At last a man has literally broken into prison. We are always hearing of men who break into it figuratively by committing a crime which lands them there, but Jefferson City, Mo. boasts of a man who broke into prison just as many another man has broken into a house or a store. No one knows why he did it just the same. When discovered he had scaled the wall and was ready to drop down on the inside, and in spite of the sentry's challenge he did drop down.

Practical Philanthrophy.

A young Philadelphian went to a millionaire friend and asked pecuniary aid to start him in business. "Do you drink" asked the millionaire. "Once in a while." "Stop it! Stop it! Stop it for a year, and then come and see me." The young man broke off the habit at once, and at the end of the year came to see the millionaire again. "Do you smoke?" asked the successful man. "Now and then." "Stop it! Stop it for a year, then come and see me again." The young man stopped smoking, but he did not go back again. "He'd have told me," he said, "that now that I have stopped drinking and smoking I must have saved enough to start myself in business, and I have."

THEY SUPPRESSED A RIOT.

General Wood and a Sentry Quelled an Incipient Disturbance at Santiago.

A GOOD GENTLE LESSON

The Cubans Were Greatly Incensed that Gen. Wood Had Kept Several Spaniards in Office.

Leisurely Folding His Papers the General Accompanied by a Sentry Strolled to the Scene of Disturbance—Crowd Subdued by Two Men, One Rifle and a Riding Whip.

While the Americans were cleaning the streets and courts and houses and jails of Santiago, and were taking care of the sick and wounded and starving, and were administering all the affairs of the city—working sixteen hours each day—the Cuban residents held aloof, neglecting even to call and pay their respects to the occupants of the palace. There were no public meetings, no contributions, no private offers of assistance, no movement for the aid of Cubans by Cubans, save by a few members of the local Chamber of Commerce. The church, represented by an archbishop, whose salary under the old regime had been $18,000 a year, and by a number of Spanish priests and different orders, did not turn a hand for the relief of the city or of the province. There was some activity, however, but of a different kind. Among the Cubans the fact that certain Spanish officials had been retained in office by the Americans—very wisely retained, too, as subsequent events have proved—had created a feeling of positive discontent and antagonism. This came to a climax on the evening of Supt. 22, the day on which General Calizto Garcia paid his memorable visit to Santiago.

Surrounding the Plaza de Armas are four prominent buildings, the cathedral, the palace, the Club San Carlos, which was the Cuban stronghold, and the Spanish Club. The two latter occupy corners triangularly opposite, with the plaza between them. On the night in question, about 8 o'clock, General Wood was writing in his office in the palace. At the outer door stood a solitary sentinel, armed with a rifle. Suddenly there burst across the plaza, from the San Carlos Club, a mob of Cubans—probably 500. Within a few minutes a shower of stones, bricks, bottles and other missiles struck the Spanish club, smashing windows and doors. A man, hatless and out of breath, rushed up to the sentry at the palace entrance and shouted: "Where's the general? Quick! The Cubans are trying to take the town!"

General Wood was leisurely folding up his papers when the sentry reached him. "I know it," he said, before the man had time to speak. "I have heard the row. We will go over and stop it."

He picked up his riding-whip, the only weapon he ever carries, and, accompanied by the one American soldier, strolled across to the scene of the trouble. The people in the Spanish club had got it pretty well closed up, but the excited Cubans were still before it, throwing things and shouting imprecations, and even trying to force a way in by the main entrance.

"Just shove them back, sentry," said General Wood quietly.

Around swung the rifle, and in much less time than is taken in the telling a way was cleared in front of the door.

"Now shoot the first man who places his foot upon that step," added the general in his usual deliberate manner. Then he turned and strolled back to the palace and his writing. Within an hour the mob had dispersed, subdued by two men, one rifle and a riding-whip. And the lesson is still kept in good memory.

Wounded Nineteen Times.

Frank Kennedy was wounded nineteen times in the battle of Santiago de Cuba. He says:

"I was sergeant in Troop F of the First volunteer cavalry, commanded by Col. Wood. On July 3, the second day of the battle, I was serving as mounted orderly for Gen. Lawton. Early in the afternoon, while carrying a dispatch for him to Gen. Wheeler's headquarters, ran into a Spanish skirmish line and before I knew it there were Spaniards all around me yelling like Comanches. It was too late to turn back. I put spurs

Somehow the brilliancy of the cut glass and bric-a-brac is dimmed after the washing. It's the fault of the soap, most of which contains rosin and alkali. Ivory Soap contains neither; makes foamy suds. Rinse thoroughly with clean water and the glass will sparkle with a new brilliancy.

A WORD OF WARNING.—There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory';" they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

The performance last Saturday on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Associationby A.C Vail's remarkable trotter, "Kenelm," has attracted widespread attention from all lovers of good horse racing in this vicinity. When it is known that this horse trotted a mile with a road wagon weighing 125 pounds in 2:26¼, it will also be known that Mr. Vail has a horse that has his equal in only a very few cases. Mr. Vail drove his horse in the exhibition mile race and handled him in a masterly fashion. Not once did he break, his action being superb. This horse has done even better than 2:26¼. In 1897 Mr. Vail purchased "Kenelm" from W. F. French, of North Anson, Me. He has given exhibition miles over a half-mile track in time all the way from 2:24½ to 2:30. Mr. Vail purchased the horse when he was six years old, with a record of 2:24¼,which he got in a seven-heat race at the Lewiston, Me., State fair. That same time the horse made a mile in 2:21 and a fraction. On the statement of the Turf, Farm and Home, a sporting paper, "Kenelm" is one of the best horses ever raised in the section from which he came. He is now in the pink of condition and can trot a very fast mile. Mr. Vail prizes him highly and takes great pride in his performances.

Next Saturday there will again be some fine racing on the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association track, and some speedy horses will be entered.

CYCLING COMMENT.

Some of the Westfield cycling enthusiasts are talking of arranging a bicycle meet to be held on the Cresent Oval in the near future.

G. H. Kenyon's fifteen-mile road race is scheduled to be held Saturday afternoon on Park avenue. It was to have been held last Saturday but was postponed so as not to conflict with the race at Scotch Plains. A valuable prize list is offered.

G. H. Kenyon's fifteen-mile road race that will be run off next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock over the Plainfield-Pumptown course, will be a handicap event, open to amateurs only. There will be a time prize, and first, second, third and fourth prizes. The entries will close tomorrow with Mr. Kenyon, 315 West Front street.

Many cyclers are bothered a great deal with porous tires, and a Plainfielder recently discovered a cure. Put a small quantity of water inside the tire with a pump and the difficulty is remedied. The water cannot injure the tire to any extent; besides, if the tire is porous there is no hope of saving it otherwise, and the water will make it possible to use the tire for some time.

The officials for the big fifteen mile road race to be run on South avenue between Westfield and Netherwood on Labor Day have been appointed as follows: Refere Dr. Fred A. Kinch; Starter, Joseph Vought; Handicapper, R. M. Stickle; Scorers, Charles Sorter, Louie E. Hendrickson, R. C. Pearsall, John Goltra, Alex. Anderson, Emil Rust; Timers, John H. Darvall, Edward Francis, Addison Clark, Fred Slater; Marshall, John M. C. Marsh; Managers Embleton & Goltra. The prizes are now on exhibition in the show window at Condit's drug store in Westfield. Entrees close next Monday with William K. Embleton, of Westfield, N. S.

ROD AND GUN.

The regular bi-weekly shoot of the Central New Jersey Trap Shooters' League was held on the grounds of the New Brunswick Gun Club, Saturday afternoon. In the club shoot, the Brunswick Gun Club won, making a score of 107 out af a possible 125. The scores of the other teams were Reservoir Gun Club, 95; Climax Gun Club, 92; Dunellen Gun Club, 91; Columbia Gun Club, 81.

Letter-carrier Patrick Reville went to Amboy on Saturday and tried his luck at fishing. It is said that he hired T. A. B. Hall Saturday evening where he invited his friends whom he wished to remember.

DUMMY LOVERS FOR HIRE.

The Chronik der Zeit of Berlin Says That Americans Have Them.

WAS JUST DISCOVERED.

Chance for a Young and Good Looking College Student to Make Money in His Vacation.

Papa Would Take Dummy as Traveling Companion and Keep Him Until the Girl Becomes Interested in Him, Then He Goes and the Right Man Appears.

The Chronik der Zeit, of Berlin, has made a most remarkable discovery concerning the ways of Americans. We are accused of harboring a school for turning out "dummy lovers."

"There is a new occupation for young men of pleasant appearance and manner and educated for the purpose in the land of the dollar," says the Berlin Journal. "The daughters of American millionaires, being of eccentric and often of a romantic turn of mind, in many instances show a tendency to favor the suit of some college-bred but impecunious young man.

"This, of course, gives any amount of worry to 'papa,' who, if he does not succeed in turning his daughter's mind by sensible and financial views expressed, resorts to the novel scheme of taking her for a tour on the continent 'for the sake of her health.' And it is here where the services of the 'dummy are enlisted.

"A bright nd handsome young man is selected from the school that prepares them, and he accompanies the family party in the capacity of traveling companion. He plays the part of the 'man of the world,' and in his society the young woman soon forgets her poor Jack or Jim.

"Just as soon as the foxy parent sees that the cure works the young man receives his pay and is suddenly asked to disappear, nd then the rightful choice of 'papa' appears on the scene. This may be a nobleman or a wealthy financier, or any one in whom the old gentle man has perfect confidence that his reputation will not be injured financially."

His Iron Grip.

Frederick R. Farrow, a young drug clerk of Philadelphia, has got himself into $25,000 worth of trouble becuse of an "iron grip." He tried his grip on Miss Edith Boone, a dainty young

EDITH BOON.

Quaker miss of eighteen, and as a result she has lost one hand and it may be necessary, says the surgeons, to amputate the other.

Farrow is an exhuberant chap. When he caled one evening on Miss Boone he was so delighted at seeing her that he took both her hands in his and gave them what Mr. Farrow thought was a "worm shake." The young woman yelled with pain. Mr. Farrow was slightly embarrassed. He tried to apologize, telling the young woman he would not intentionally injure such pretty little hands.

Since then the strong young drug clerk has not had the visiting privilege of the Boone house.

He didn't feel so strong when Miss Boone's lawyer served him with the papers in a suit for $25,000 damages as the result of the squeeze he gave her hands.

A Pathetic Story.

Another more pathetic example was that of an old woman whose huband was incapacitated from further work. He belonged to a friendly society, but for six months of the year was only entitled to draw from it two shillings a week, says the London Spectator. As it was impossible for the aged pair to live ont his sum the wife asked for outdoor relief. Her application was refuseil, because in the opinion of the guardians, though a dwarf, deformed and the victim of a painful internal malady, she was not yet absolutely worn out. Day after day she dragged herself to field work as long as she could manage to crawl, earning from sevenpense to ninepense per day by tying barley under the harvest sun. Out of this miserable pittance she religiously set side the payments that she had begun in more prosperous times for her funeral. She died a pauper, after terrible suffering borne with marvelous patience; she was buried at her own expense, with money earned by the sweat of her brow amid sharp bodily anguish.

Canine Vanity.

Miss Prism—Don't let your dog bite me, little boy.

Boy—He won't bite, ma'am.

Miss Prism—But he is showing his teeth.

Boy (with pride)—Certainly he is, ma'am; and if you had as good teeth as he has you'd show 'em, too.

Misplaced Sympathy.

He (exhibiting sketch)—It's the best thing I ever did.

She (sympathetically)—O, well, you mustn't let that discourage you!—Stray Stories.

"'Contribution Box.' What a funny name for a baby!"

"Yes'um! Dad nicknamed him that 'cause he swallows so many buttons."

DEMOCRATS TRYING TO GET TOGETHER.

Internal Discord Being Replaced by Harmony Efforts.

BUSY JERSEY POLITICIANS.

HARD AT WORK ON SLATES DESPITE TORRID WEATHER.

The Arrival Home of General Sewell Has Added Much Zest to the Republican Situation — Democrats are Seeking for Harmony So as to Put Party in Working Order for Fall.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, August 24 —Midsummer heat has no terrors for the politicians. They are as busy as bees making slates and otherwise preparing for the campaign for the Legislature and county offices which will eventuate this fall. The arrival home of General Sewell has added much zest to the situation, and his cottage at Cape May will be for several weeks the mecca for his confidential friends and followers.

It is admitted even by some Democrats that even if their party became united next year on men and measures that they would find it a difficult task to carry the State over a ticket on the other side containing the name of Garret A. Hobart for the second highest office in the gift of the people. Still there are other Democrats who say that personal magnetism will not count in the campaign of the next year. They contend that the people will decide the contest on the issues affecting their welfare and not on the personality of the men who are nominated for office. They admit the great popularity of Mr. Hobart, but they decry the cause which he represents and which they insist is not in accord with a majority of the citizens of the nation.

It would seem that the Democrats are making earnest efforts to unite their forces. The Bryan men are not so tenacious over the enforcement of their ideas as they have been. While they insist that the Democrats of New Jersey shall send a solid delegation to their next national convention in favor of the nomination of William J. Bryan, yet they are willing to place the silver question in the background. They will feel satisfied with the nomination of their favorite statesman and his standing upon a platform composed mainly of anti-trust and anti expansion planks.

To bring the Democratic party together once more requires a deal of hard, persistent work. Its disorganized ranks, its lack of good leadership and other things which need reformation present a task for the performance of which much patience, perseverance and wisdom are absolutely required. And there are men in the party who are qualified to undertake the accomplishment of that important and indispensable work. No doubt the Asbury Park conference served as an entering wedge for a reorganization of the forces, and under the skillful leadership of "Bob" Davis efforts in that direction may be successful and satisfactory to all concerned.

With a united party there is no reason why the New Jersey Democrats should not give the Republicans a fight worthy of the name. Of course under the brilliant leadership of General Sewell, the Republicans have an organization which is among the best in the country. He is an intrepid leader, and he and his organization are hard to beat.

SAYS WHEEL ISN'T GOOD ENOUGH.

Prize Winner of Westfield Bicycle Road Race Not Satisfied.

Charles Embleton, who won the fifteen-mile bicycle race at Westfield on Fourth of July, complains because he has not received the prize, which it was stated would be a racing bicycle of the value of $75. Embleton has been offered a bicycle by Wellesley Robinson, who had charge of the race, but he refuses to accept it, as he says it is a wheel made up of miscellaneous parts put together by a Cranford blacksmith. There is likely to be legal trouble over the matter.

A Church Festival.

One week from today the Ladies' Aid Society of Monroe Avenue church will hold a festival at the church. The grounds and edifice will be used for the occasion and there will be a grand display of fireworks in the evening. The affair will commence at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and continue until late in the evening.

BALL GROUNDS GONE.

SO NATIONAL GAME HAS BEEN ABANDONED IN BOUND BROOK.

Manager Wade, of Pierce Property, Gave Permission to Use It But His Successor Objected and Tore Down Grand stand.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, August 24—The baseball season has ended in Bound Brook. It has ended because the local team has lost its grounds. The remains o the fence that surrounded the field and grand stand are now a heap of wreckage and there isn't even a base left to steal. As they haven't any place to play it was thought best that the team should go out of business and so it has.

Baseball has been played in various parts of Bound Brook during the history of the game in this town. This year the local team began to play on a level field in East Bound Brook on the Pierce property, near the old Sanitarium.

E. B. Wade was then looking after the real estate interests of Dr. R. P. Pierce in and near Bound Brook. He gave the team permission to play there. A fence was erected around the ground and the old grand stand moved from the old grounds and set up there.

All went well until August 1st. Then Mr. Wade was succeeded by A. R. Johnson. A short time after the new manager had been in office, he wanted to know why they played baseball there. A short time after that the trustees of the club were notified to remove the fence and stand. They failed to do so, although baseball came to a summary halt. A few days ago a gang of workman, under the direction of Mr. Johnson, tore down the grand stand and fence. The team played its last game at Flemington last Saturday afternoon and was defeated. Dick O'Connor is manager.

SHARP CUT ON INSURANCE.

A Rate War in Jersey Which May Spread Disastrously.

A fierce insurance rate war is in progress in this State and it is attracting a deal of attention in other States. Because of its occurrence at a time when the stability of rating organizations in other sections of the country is threatened, demoralizations of a serious nature is feared. Managers are saying today: "Why should we try to restore rates in New Jersey when the situation is critical at other centres, and our pamps may go for nothing if rates are finally suspended in the West? Rate wars are always difficult to overcome (it took the companies months to get together after the last break in Trenton,) and if the companies that are fighting in Newark today are to renew the struggle in other fields later on, so that demoralization becomes general and a larger territory is threatened, little will be gained, it is argued, by an agreement at this time. However this may be, rates in Newark have about reached the level of supply and demand, and business has been "protected" by the companies at a loss of thousands of dollars in premium income.

With premiums cut from 10 to 50 per cent. of the old rates, the companies will have difficulty in making much of a showing under even the most favorable conditions as regards loss records, etc. While the Newark territory has been, on the whole, a profitable field, the companies have sustaind heavy losses of late, 426 alarms having been sounded during the first six months of 1899. The total estimated loss for the same period was $139,800—an increase of about $19,000 over the same period last year.

A Defective Sidewalk.

There is a defective sidewalk on the west side of Somerset street, extending across the county line. The walk is sadly in need of repair and in its present condition is dangerous. Whether it is the duty of the officials of this city or those of the borough to repair the walk is not known; but it should be attended to at once. Should an accident occur it is believed that a good cause for damages would result. Last night a women slipped into one of the excavations, which time has made in the concrete pavement of which the walk is composed, and was thrown down. Fortunately the woman did not sprain her ankle, though she was slightly hurt.

BODY OF J R RUNYON FOUND IN FERRY SLIP

He Lived in Plainfield For Many Years.

ACCIDENT OR SUICIDE?

STUDIED LAW WITH JUDGE RUNYON AND C. L. MOFFETT.

Strange Career of Young Man Finally Ended in a Tragic Manner—Studied Law, Was an Actor and Hotel Keeper and Was in the Real Estate Business at Time of His Death.

Joseph R. Runyon, who studied law in this city and spent several years here, was drowned in one of the ferry slips of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Jersey City and his body was found Thursday. The Jersey City police believe he committed suicide but the relatives of the young man declare that he must have made a misstep and met his death in an accidental manner.

Many Plainfielders will remember Runyon who lived alone with his widowed mother on Orchard place. They were in reduced circumstances. As soon as Runyon was old enough, he went to work. He was at one time, clerk in Mallisne's Pharmacy. April 1st, 1894, he began to study law with Former Judge Nelson Runyon and remained in his offices until November 1st, 1895. Then he entered the office of Charles L. Moffett and continued his studies. Two years ago, he was prepared to take his entrance examinations for the New Jersey Bar but, for some reason, never went to Trenton to take them.

Soon after that, he went to Portland, Me., with the intention of beginning a career as an actor. He did not find the career satisfactory and returned after a week's trial. He then went to South Plainfield where he ran a hotel for several months. He then moved out of this neighborhood and tried hotel keeping in another place. He also worked in Elizabeth. At the time of his death, he was living in New York and was in the employ of a firm of real estate agents on Broadway, New York.

He was twenty-four years old, of middle height and were eyeglasses. Since he left Plainfield two years ago, he has not been back here.

He has an uncle in Elizabeth, Dr. George L. Gidney, who conducts a livery stable there. He said that Runyon had been missing for a week. His body was identified by those who knew him. The burial was at Snake Hill, Jersey City, but the body will be removed to the family plot in this city as soon as the necessary formalities can be gone through with.

Funeral of Late Benjamin Singer.

The funeral services of the late Benjamin Singer were held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the residence of his daughter, 18 Steiner place. Rev. WITNESS OF KILLING IDENTIFIES MURDERER

Lisbon Pierson, of New Market, Sees William Darling.

STORY OF THE SHOOTING.

COLORED MAN AN IMPORTANT WITNESS FOR PROSECUTION.

He Witnessed the Fatality and Heard the Words That Led up to It—Darling and Pierson Did Not Speak to Each Other—Murderer is Taking Life in Jail as Easy as it is Possible for Him.

Lisbon Pierson, of New Market, visited the Middlesex County Jail yesterday and identified William Darling as the man who shot and killed Harry Dunham at that place four years ago. Pierson, who is a highly respected colored resident of New Market, was brought to New Brunswick by Detective John R. Ferguson. Pierson says that he witnessed the shooting. In conversation with a Home News reporter Pierson said.

"The shooting took place in the pool room of the Lake House, at New Market, which was then owned by a Mr. Danz, who has since died. In the room at the time of the shooting besides myself, were Edwin Mitchell and Peter Campbell. Campbell has also died since the affray happened.

"Dunham, the man who was shot, Mitchell and myself were sitting in the pool room talking when Darling came in and asked us to shoot a game of pool. The three played a game and Mitchell won out. I did not play. Darling and Dunham played the game off and Darling got stuck. More games were played and in each case Darling was beaten. After we had something to drink Darling, Mitchell and Dunham had another game of pool and again Darling was stuck.

"Darling then challenged Dunham to play with him alone. Dunham played him two games and beat him both games. Then Darling challenged Dunham to play for $1 a corner. Dunham did not want to play for money, but finally agreed to play for 25 cents a corner. Darling then stepped out for a minute and returned. When he did a coversation arose over how long the men had known each other. Darling said to Dunham that he had known him ever since he (Dunham) was knee-high to a grasshopper. Dunham replied that he had known Darling before he was born. Dunham took offence at the remark and said to Dunham:

"'Do you mean that, Dunham?'

"'Why, certainly,' answered Dunham.

"'Well, you take that back, Dunham, or you are a dead man,' said Darling, who was then becoming quite angry."

"'Not today, I won't take that back,' replied Dunham.

"As Dunham said that Darling whipped a pistol from behind his back and fired a shot at Dunham, who was standing up, leaning against the wall in the pool room. The thing happened so suddenly that we all became afraid and began to make a break for the doors. I started to run for the door and before I got there another shot rang out. I saw Dunham topple over and drop, but did not stop, as things were getting to warm. I ran out of the building.

"Upon returning I found Dunham lying upon the sofa and called him, but received no answer. He was not yet dead, but passed away twenty minutes afterward. A physician had called, but nothing could be done for Dunham.

"I did not see what became of Darling, but people who were in the bar room said that he passed through there and jumped on a bicycle, which he had outside, and started off. Charles Day, who was near, started on a wheel in pursuit toward Bound Brook, but he could not find Darling. That is all I know of the shooting."

Pierson did not have anything to say to Darling when he saw him in jail, but merely took a good look at the prisoner while Mr. Ferguson talked with him. Pierson says that Darling had side-whiskers when he saw him last, which was when the shooting took place, but remembers him by his hair, which is black, thick and rather curly. Darling did not have anything to say to Pierson. Pierson said that Darling and Dunham had been friends ever since childhood almost, they having worked in Potter's Printing Works together.

Darling keeps as quiet as ever and seems fairly contented. He is locked up in the murderer's cell while the other prisoners are in the corridor and let out when they are kept in their cells. His father has called on him and furnished him with small sums of money at times, which Darling uses for getting extra dishes and such things. Darling wrote yesterday to his counsel to get some more money for him.

LAST TROLLEY LINK ON PRIVATE PROPERTY.

Right of Way Between Scotch Plains and Weetfield.

ROUTE THAT IS PLANNED.

NEW EIGHTY FOOT WIDE BOULEVARD TO BE OPENED.

Private Right of Way Runs Through the Property Owned by J. G. Cook, Mrs. Warren Ackerman and Dr. J Ackerman Coles, Commencing at Westfield Avenue and Westfield Road.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, August 24 —The efforts which the trolley people have made for several months to form a connecting link between this borough and Westfield are about to result in something more tangible than mere newspaper talk. It was found almost impossible to obtain the consent of property owners along the highway between here and Westfield. The gentlemen interested in the trolley road have found a way out of their difficulty.

They now propose building the trolley line over private propery. Through the efforts of Col. Hine and others a new route has been secured. The promoters have been successful in buying from J. G. Cook, Mrs. Warren Ackerman, Dr. J. A. Cole and others a sufficient amount of land to secure the right of way for the road.

The new route starts from the junction of Westfield avenue and Westfield road and runs through the property of J. G. Cook, opening up a boulevard 80 feet wide. It then crosses the Sheelan track of land cutting through the Osborn farm to the junction of Jerusalem and the Morse roads into Fanwood township. From the Jerusalem road the route will extend to Brightwood avenue, to Prospect street and again over a private right of way to the head of Elm street in Westfield, to which point the road bed is at present constructed.

This route is said to be somewhat shorter than the one proposed over the highway between Scotch Plains and Westfield.

While the entire right of way over the private property has not yet been fully secured a sufficient guarantee has been given that no obstacle will be placed in the way of building the road over the new route.

Col. Hine and H. C. VanEmbugh, the civil engineer of the road, were at Scotch Plains yesterday. They went over the route and it was surveyed and the stakes driven. The work of building the road will be begun at once, the legal formalities having been arranged for. It is expected that the road will be in operation by October 1st.

When this road is completed it will give a through trolley line from New Brunswick to Cranford, and eventually to Elizabeth. Work upon that end of the line is at present under way.

Too Much Excitement, B'gosh.

William Jerolaman, of Liberty Corner, came to town yesterday and before he completed his visit he imbibed too freely, and he became very noisy and troublesome. His actions were so disorderly that Marshal Campbell was obliged to arrest him. He was placed in the lockup and Mayor Smalley will give him a hearing this afternoon.

COLD PLACE IN TOWN.

COLD STORAGE HOUSE OF PLAINFIELD BEEF COMPANY.

Addition to It Just Completed—A Well Equipped Establishment — Everything is Clean and in the Best of Order.

Think of it. Only five minutes' walk from the North Avenue station there is a place where the thermometer just hovers over the freezing point these August days. Men work there in heavy overcoats and feel thankful that that they have them while the rest of humanity is sweltering under the tropic rays of the noon sun. The pace of this unseasonable cold is the cold storage house of the Plainfield Beef Company, which represents the Swifts in Plainfield.

An addition to this rather remarkable place has just been finished and makes the establishment one of the most perfect and complete of its kind outside of the very large cities.

The Plainfield Beef Company has its headquarters on East Third street, near Washington street. It is a substantial brick structure of two stories. The lower floor is devoted to the storage of meat with the offices in front. The walls are very thick and lined with felt and paper to keep the interior temperature even. A regular system of overhead track carry the little wheeled trucks to which the meat is hung and enable it to be easily moved about. Every week in the neighborhood of 50,000 pounds of meat is received and disposed of among the local butchers. The temperature in this room always remains at about 38 degrees above.

The second floor is devoted to the cooling room where two hundred tons of ice is stored, accounting for the low temperature below. Every two weeks the cooling room is refilled with ice.

The addition just completed is a provision room where canned goods, bacon and sausage are stored. The temperature there is kept at 60 degrees. The whole place is kept as clean as soap and water can make it and everything has its proper place. H. S. Taylor is manager of the receiving and sales departments while Arthur A. Cannon has charge of the books and accounts. Each is responsible alone to the head of his department in the Swift Company.

MAYOR HEARD THE STORY.

James Burns Became Crazy From Effect of Rum Last Night.

This morning Mayor Rockfellow was entertained with a long-winded account of the experience of one James Burns from Phillipsburg. He was going to Elizabethport, he said, and stopped off to see his brother's children at 438 East Front street. There he began to drink. His brother's wife went to Patrolman Myers last night complaining that Burns was wild with rum, but Burns fled before the officer could find him.

The Mayor thought the best thing for Burns to do was to leave town without delay and never come back again. As his sister-in-law had expressed a wish never to see him again, the Mayor advised Burns to keep away. Sentence was suspended.

MRS EYLER TOO SICK TO SUBMIT TO ARREST.

Her Husband Outwitted the Constable in a Race.

TO LEAVE IT TO GRAND JURY.

BONDS FOR HER APPEARANCE WILL BE FURNISHED TODAY.

Mrs. Eyler Masqueraded as a Stranger With the Constable Till the Proper Time Came for Him to Disclose His Identity—New Trustees for the School Appointed by the Governor.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, August 24—Mrs. Eyler, principal of the State Industrial School, has not been arrested by Constable Branin because Rev. Clarence Eyler, her husband, confronted the constable with a physician's certificate to the effect that Mrs. Eyler was too ill to be disturbed when he appeared with a warrant.

There was a merry chase between Constable Branin and Rev. Mr. Eyler to determine whether the warrant or the protecting certificate of the physician should be at the girls' school first. This chase took place about noon yesterday.

Constable Branin thus describes the race—"When I reached the Philadelphta and Reading Railroad station to take the train for the State school a gentleman whom I did not know was loitering about the station evidently watching for me. Upon my taking the same train he also boarded it and took the same car.

"Upon reaching the school station I observed the gentleman disembark. He immediately joined me, entering into a general conversation. Arriving at the school, I was admitted, and my companion also entered. Here I was met by a lady, who asked me if I wished to see Mrs. Eyler. I said I did, and she left the room. My companion then turned to me and announced himself as Mr. Eyler. I informed him that I held a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Eyler, and desired to see her. Mr. Eyler replied that she was ill and confined to her room, and could not be seen. He then took from his pocket the certificate from Dr. Witt."

Constable Branin says he has been instructed as to his duty in the premises, and that an arrest will result, which will be deferred only until Mrs. Eyler is sufficiently restored to meet the charge against her. Rev. Mr. Eyler later called on Justice Mills and asked how much bail would be needed for his wife, and he was informed that $300 would be required. He said that his wife would waive examination and let the matter go before the October Grand Jury.

Constable Branin has placed a watch on the school, so that Mrs. Eyler can not leave the institution or get out of the State. Mrs. Eyler offered bail today.

Governor Voorhees says he has received the resignations of all the members of the board of trustees of the State Industrial School for Girls, and that he has appointed as trustees former Senator John D. Rue, Republican, of Trenton, and former Assemblyman Howell C. Stull, Democrat, of Trenton, and both men have accepted.

ARMY OFFICERS TESTIFY.

None of Them Able to Give Real Evidence Against Captain Dreyfus.

GOSSIP AND SUSPICION.

Esterhazy Called as a Witness But the Prisoner's Persecutor Failed to Put in an Appearance.

Gen'l Gonse Contradicts Statement After Statement Made By Esterhazy—Other Witnesses Give Them the Lie—Labori Looking Better and Stronger.

Rennes, Aug. 24.—The third session of the third week of the second trial by court martial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus on the charge of treason began at the Lycee at half-past six.

Maitre and Mme. Labori were present.

The session opened with the testimony of minor witnesses, Roy and Durbieul. The latter deposed that Dreyfus, while with the General s staff, could have had access to documents unperceived during certain hours of the day.

Dreyfus, when he arose to reply to this witness, spoke in a quiet, convincing voice, denying that he had any relations with a German Attache, Military or Civil.

M. Laberi finished with M. Durbieul by asking for the production of his record in the Law Court, which counsel hinted was discreditable.

The prisoner was very indignant during M. Durbieul's deposition and once tried to interpose, but the President of the Court, Col. Jouaust waived him down, telling him he might reply when M. Durbieul had finished, which he did as the witness uttered his concluding words, requesting an inquiry, saying:

"Because it must be known here who is lying and who is speaking the truth."

The statement of the prisoner caused a deep impression.

The next witness, Captain Valdant, testified to seeing Maitre Labori in Col. Picquart's office at the beginning of 1896, and Capt. Le Rond, of the Artillery, who followed him, spoke of the notorious ignorance of Esterhazy in artillery matters, and saying that, thus, the latter could not have divulged what was promised in the bordereau.

Esterhazy was called as the next witness, but there was no response, so the Court ordered the reading of the evidence as given before the Court of Cassation.

When Esterhazy's deposition had been finished M. Labori asked that Esterhazy's letters to the President of the Republic be read, in which Esterhazy is said to have threatened, if the scandal continued, that his sovereign, the Emperor, would intervene.

Gen. Gonse here asked to be allowed to respond to Esterhazy's testimony, as given before the Court of Cassation, and declared in a loud voice that Esterhazy's testimony, as given before the Court of Cassation was an absolute lie. The General traversed Esterhazy's evidence, contradicting statement after statement, and declaring Esterhazy could only have had relations with Major du Paty de Clam and the late Lieut-Col. Henry. The General absolutely denied having had any relation with him.

Leading counsel then submitted to General Gonse a number of searching questions on Esterhazy's relations with the General Staff.

The General, however, was much disvery excited, especially when he asked if there was not an intrigue in favor of Esterhazy, and if he did not take part in it.

"It is false! It is false!" shouted the General, and, from his manner, one would imagine he spoke sincerely, unless he is a fine actor.

The eneral, however, was visibly disconcerted at several of M. Labori's questions. The witness's voice grew so faint that it was scarcely audible.

Finally counsel asked why Esterhazy was not arrested after the inquiry, and Gen. Gonse replied: "Because Gen. Saussier deemed it proper to leave him at liberty."

"Yes," retorted M. Labori, "but Gen. Saussier must have been deceived by the General Staff."

This abrupt declaration, accompanied by an expressive gesture, was in counsel's best style and caused a sensation in court, amid which the General returned to his seat looking very ill at ease.

Major Gendron was recalled after Gen. Gonse and supported the latter's statements.

Gen. Deboisdeffre then jumped to his feet and denied in the most formal manner Esterhazy's statements, adding that had he been present he would have "given him the lie with all the contempt he deserves.'

A PETITION TO CONGRESS.

Labor Unions Object to the Injunction System.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—The "Record" says: Chicago central labor organizations will unite in a petition to Congress and the various State Legislatures to enact laws which will restrict the rights of judges to issue injunctions without hearing evidence from both sides. The petition will recite that numerous injunctions have been granted on ex parte evidence which have worked hardships on innocent persons aganist whom they have been directed.

The labor unions do not wish to restrain the judges from exercising the full power of their courts where there has been damage to property, loss of life or injury to body, but they will insist that where there has been neither of these conditions the judges have no right to issue restraining orders. It is claimed that the injunction rule has placed men in jail in the past who were doing all that was in their power to prevent violations of the law.

A Chicago attorney is now at work on the draft of a bill that will be presented to Congress.

Mrs. Wm. H. Ludlow, of Jackson avenue, says:-" I was troubled with kidney complaint, backache and a sort of dull pain across my loins for several years. If I sat for any length of time and tried to rise I had a sharp pain in the kidneys. Walking any distance or much standing aggravated the difficulty. I could not rest well at night from the fact that I had to be constantly changing about from one position to another trying to free myself from pain. I used quite a number of remedies but got no permanent relief. I was prevailed upon to get Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store. In justice to them I must say they did me a great deal of good. It is seldom that I feel any pain in my back and when I do a few dosee of this remedy never fails to relieve me. I know others who have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results. From my experience I can honestly recommend to all who suffer from Kidney troubles."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no substitute.

HAS FOUNDERED AT SEA.

Wreckage Coming Ashore Indicates That Steamship Has Been Lost

SHIP'S NAME NOT KNOWN

Details of the Loss of Vessels in the Vicinity of Cape Hatteras Continue to Come In

The Beach Strewn With Portions of Cargoes and All Sorts of Wreckage From Stranded Ships—Many Boats Destroyed Whose Names Are Not Known.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 24.—Further details of the loss of many ships in the vicinity of Cape Hatteras continue to be learned. The survivors now here, who at first were too much excited to talk coherently, are now able to tell of the peril they passed through when their vessels went ashore.

When the barkentine Priscilla was being driven before the hurricane into the breakers, the mate, whose mother, the wife of Capt. Springsteen, was aboard, attempted to save her, and with her upon his back plunged into the breakers. Just before the mate jumped he shouted to the captain that he would take care of his mother or die with her. They died together and their bodies, which came ashore later, were buried there. Another son of Capt. Springsteen, a boy of 14, and a companion of his, Fitzhugh Lee Goldsborough, attempting to swim ashore, were drowned.

Capt. Oscar Wessel and four of the crew of the schooner Aaron Rippard, the first of the vessels to go ashore, were drowned and their bodies also were buried near the scene of the wreck. The schooners Aaron Rippard, Minnie Bergen, Florence Randall and Robert W. Dasey, Lightship 69 and the barkentine Priscilla went ashore as well as others whose names have not been learned with certainty.

The cotton, wine, rum and all sorts of wreckage coming ashore on the beach are believed to indicate that a steamship has foundered at sea, and there is a rumor that a British steamship is ashore and is going to pieces near New Inlet. Capt. Henry Seymour, manager of the Merritt Wrecking Company, who has investigated these stories, declares that he is certain that no steamship is on the beach, although he says that the wreckage indicates that one has foundered at sea or had thrown her deck load overboard to lighten ship. The wire to the coast, save only to Cape Henry, is still down.

A portion of the cabin of a large steamship has been washed ashore but there is nothing on the wreckage by which the vessel to which it belonged can be identified. A diligent search is being made for some article that will give the name of the large boat that there is every reason to believe, went down during the fierce hurricane. The wreckage has been coming ashore for the past three days and during the past twelve hours it has increased considerably in quantity, and covers a distance of nearly two miles along the beach.

The company's papers state that the capital actually paid in is $1,000,000 and that the debts and liabilities amount to $6,796,167.

The Ship and 100 Miles of Cable Will Be a Total Loss.

Manila, Aug. 24.—The United States cable steamship Hooker which is stranded on a reef in Corregidor Harbor, has been thrown on her beam ends by the heavy seas and abandoned.

There is only the smallest possible chance that the 100 miles of cable on board the Hooker can be taken off the ship by the gunboat Espana. The Hooker is pounding hard upon the rocks and the chances of saving her are regarded as hopeless.

The transports Zealandia and Valencia have sailed for San Francisco.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler and his daughter have visited the hospitals in Manila. They expressed great satisfaction at their condition. It is the intention of Miss Wheeler to devote herself to hospital nursing.

The Secret Service authorities are on the trail of the reported Japanese filibusters along the coast.

The Mayor of San Pedro Macati, with five accomplices, was arrested in a brickyard near the town. There is abundant evidence that they were recruiting for the Filipino army.

Three Spaniards who have been held as prisoners by the Filipinos for the past year have arrived at Colamba. They relate a thrilling tale of their escape and their pursuit through the jungles. They say that they were constantly compelled to perform the hardest kind of work in digging trenches and grinding rice, with armed guards standing over them. These men say that the Filipinos have one regiment fully equipped with Japanese rifles, but the supply of ammunition for these weapons is limited.

More Trouble in Holland.

Amsterdam, Aug. 24.—The disturbances at Hilversum, fifteen miles from here, where martial law has been proclaimed, still continues. The mob stoned the troops who are occupying the town, and the cavalry charged on the rioters with drawn swords. Finally the infantry fired on the mob, killing one person and wounding two others.

Cotton Crop is Damaged.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 24.—The hot winds which have prevailed for the past month have destroyed all chance of a large cotton crop in Texas. TO MOVE HEADQUARTERS.

Democratic Press Bureau Will Be Taken to Washington.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—The "Chronicle" says: Senator Jones, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has closed the Devlin incident that disturbed the peace and harmony of the National Committee at St. Louis last May and again at Chicago in June by ordering the removal of the Press Bureau to Washington and authorizing the selection by ex-Gov. Stone, of Missouri, of a new editor.

Devlin will be out just as soon as Mr. Stone can find the right man to succeed him. That will be within the next ten days. It is reported that Samuel B. Cook, chairman of the Missouri Democratic State Central Committee, may be the next editor of the bureau. Mr. Cook is general manager of the Ways and Means Committee at the present time. Ex-Congressman Hinrichson, of Jacksonville, has been urged for the place by Illinois Democrats, and he may receive the appointment.

Boers Concede Many Points.

Cape Town, Aug. 24.—From an excellent unofficial source of information it is ascertained that the substance of the Transvaal's communication to the British Government, in reply to England's demands, is a concession of a five years' (retroative) franchise, a share in the election of the President and an increase in the representation of the gold fields—probably eight additional seats—and a stipulation that all other questions are to be submitted to an arbitrator, but not a foreign Power; that Great Britain shall not use the present interference as a precedent, and that the British Government shall relinquish all suzerainty rights.

Three Killed By Train.

Seabright, N. J., Aug. 24.—While the family of Charles W. Trippe, an inspector in the New York Health Department, were out driving, a New Jersey Southern Railroad train dashed into their two-seated surrey, instantly killing Mr. Trippe's son, 7 years old, and his two sisters-in-law, and injuring seriously Mrs. Trippe, their two-months old baby and the nursemaid. The dead are: Miss Louise Terry, 22 years old, Juanita Terry, sisters of Mrs. Trippe; Charles W. Trippe, Jr., 7 years old. The injured are: Louise Farr, nursemaid; Mrs. Charles W. Trippe, and Baby Trippe, two months old.

A Print Cloth Combine.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 24.—The offer of the Searles syndicate, of New York, for the local print cloth mills, came from the office of Nelson G. Green, of New York, and was to the effect that Mr. Green desired to appear before the Board of Directors of each mill and make an offer to purchase the plants, either for cash or stock in a corporation now being organized for the purpose of controlling the coarse and fine cotton cloth manufacturing of the United States. The trade is more upset than ever since the receipt of the offer.

Riotous Cubans Shot.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 24.—Five men are dead and ten wounded as the result of a fight between gendarmes and disappointed Cuban soldiers in Cuevitas, three miles from Santiago, where the payment of the Cuban troops is going on. Five thousand Cubans had gathered there to receive pay, and after three days only 580 had been paid. Fears that the paymaster was going away without paying them was the direct cause of the trouble.

More Join the Revolution.

Cape Haytien, Aug. 24.—General Victorano Torres, commander of San Jose de las Matas, San Domingo, has declared for the revolution, and it is reported that Santago also has pronounced in favor of it. The British third-class cruiser Prosperine, Captain John L. Marx, belonging to the North American West Indies fleet, has arrived at Santo Domingo.

Congressional Candidate Arrested.

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 24.—William A. Roberts, of this city, who made the announcement that he was a Democratic candidate for Representative to Congress in the First district to succeed Thomas B. Reed, has been arrested on a warrant charging him with embezzlement. In the Municipal Court Roberts pleaded not guilty and the case was continued.

President is a Delegate.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 24.—President McKinley has been elected to represent the local encampment No. 78, Union Veterans' Legion, at the National Encampment, to be held in Baltimore, September 13, 14 and 15. The President is a member of the local organization.

Joe Patchen the Winner.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Joe Patchen was the winner of the $2,000 match race with John R. Gentry here yesterday afternoon. After a dead heat in the first heat, at 2:08, the second and third were won by Patchen in 2:09 and 2:15¼. The winner broke twice in the final heat.

New York Veteran Gets a Job.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 24.—Francis Redmond, veteran of New York City, has been appointed State Detective Agent by Comptroller Morgan at a salary of $100 per month.

Two Meteors Fall.

Two meteors fell at Vincennes, Ind., recently, says the Scientific American. One struck a slab of stone on a Baltimore and Ohio freight car just as the train had crossed the Wabash bridge, and the slab was shattered by it. The other meteor struck a pile of bricks, with a loud noise, and broke it into small fragments. Judging from newspaper accounts they appear to have been of a rocky rather than a metallic nature.

Automobile Gun Carriage.

The English intend experimenting with an automobile gun carriage for army use. A tricycle, driven by electricity, forms the carriage, and upon it is mounted a service pattern Maxim gun. The weight of the gun and carriage is only about 140 pounds, permitting quick movements and early readiness when in position.

TO CHANGE HOUSE RULES.

An Effort to Be Made to Secure a Revision When Congress Meets.

OF MUCH IMPORTANCE.

Proposition to Restore to Members Much of the Power Lately Exerted By the Speaker.

One of the New Rules Will Enable a Majority of the House to Control the Proceedings—The Committee on Rules to Be Permanently Abandoned.

Washington, Aug. 24.—On the meeting of Congress an effort will be made to secure a revision of the rules of the House which will restore to the members on the floor much of the power which has rested in the hands of the Speaker during the past several sessions. It is understood that the plan will not be resisted by Gen. Henderson, who will be the Speaker, but, on the contrary, will meet with his approval. The most active advocate among the Republicans of a change of the rules so as to increase the power of a majority on the floor of the House is Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa. He tried without success to secure such a change during the incumbency of Mr. Reed. It has been thought by some that the selection of his friend, Gen. Henderson, to be Speaker might dispose him to abandon the project, but this is not the case, and the fact that he is close to Gen. Henderson, and had charge of his canvass for the Speakership, is accepted as indicative of the latter's willingness that the change should be made.

The plan agreed upon contemplates the abandonment of the present Committee on Rules, of which the Speaker of the House is chairman, and which is controlled by him, and the substitution in its stead of a new committee, consisting of seven members to be chosen by the majority of the House, and to which the Speaker shall not be eligible for membership. This committee is to be composed entirely of members of the majority party and will have charge of the forms of procedure.

A very important proposed change in the rules relates to the recognition of members claiming the floor. For the past several Congresses it has been entirely optional with the Speaker to recognize or to refuse to recognize any member seeking to take the floor. During and prior to the Forty-sixth Congress the rules required the Speaker to recognize the member first claiming the floor, or in case of two or more members claiming the floor at the same time the Speaker could recognize any one of those making the demand, the others to be recognized in order after the one first recognized had taken his seat. It is now proposed to return to this rule, which will insure to every member a hearing if he desires it. The effect of this will be to enable a majority of the House to control the proceedings of the body, without depending upon the individual will of the Speaker, and to insure to every member the right to be heard. It is expected to prevent the pigeon-holing of measures which have the support of a majority, but which are opposed by the Speaker.

Planning to Rush Campaign.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 24.—Secretary Root returned to the city from his visit to the President at Lake Champlain. He went at once to his rooms in the Arlington Hotel, and spent some time with General Corbin and Acting Secretary Meiklejohn. The Secretary was reticent in speaking for publication of his conference with the President. The matters discussed, he said, were such as ordinarily would be taken up at a Cabinet meeting, and involved no great departures from the policy already in force respecting the Philippines.

That the campaign in the Philippines is to be pushed vigorously and promptly is evident from a remark the Secretary made to the reporters. He was determined, he said, that every man belonging to the twenty regiments of volunteers now being recruited shall eat his Christmas dinner in that country.

They Fear End of World.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 24.—Reports from southern Russia say that a current rumor of the approaching end of the world is causing a panic among the uneducated classes. At Kharkov, the capital of the government of that name, workmen are leaving the city in large numbers, wishing to spend what they consider their last days at their village homes. The factory owners have asked the police to stop this emigration in order to prevent the ruination of business.

Colored Women Bring Suit.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 24.—Suits have been begun here by Mrs. Virginia A. Jackson and Mrs. Edith B. Miller, of Cincinnati, delegates to the recent convention of the National Council of Colored Women's Clubs, against the owners and managers of a theatre in Chicago for an alleged refusal to allow the complainants to occupy seats they had purchased for a matinee performance. Three suits are brought, $500 damages being asked in each. The suits are brought under the civil rights law of 1885.

Stage Held Up By Bandits.

Dillon, Mont., Aug. 24.—The stage between Salmon City and Red Rock was held up half a mile inside the Idaho line, eighty miles from here, by four men. H. T. Reilly, manager of the dredge company working on the old McNutt property, near Salmon City, was a passenger. He had more than $5,000 in gold dust, which he was bringing to Dillon. The robbers took it. They then mounted horses, which were concealed in the timber, and escaped.

COMING EVENTS.

August 27—Rev. Thomas Houston will again speak and sing at the Y. M. C. A. men's rally at 4:15 p. m.

A Washington correspondent says that some friends of Representative Fowler in Washington are confident of his assignment by Speaker Henderson to the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Committee of the House. One of them said yesterday: "Since Brosius is out of it, by being content with the chairmanship of the Civil Service Committee, which he held in the last Congress, the contest has been between Fowler and McCleary. It is now well understood that the former is to be chairman of the committee on Banking and Currency. He was not only the first man in the east to write and declare himself for Henderson, but he has had support from all sections of the men who take most interest in finance and know most about it."

An observant merchant looking about for the means of extending his trade will not fail to keep in mind the fact that it is necessary for him to arouse the interest of the home circle in his wares, says the Philadelphia Ricord. Having once attracted the family's attention to his establishment, he is sure to secure its patronage. To obtain this desired result the only really effective means is the judicious use of the advertising columns of a reputable newspaper whose circulation extends into multitudes of homes. There his business announcements will be read, and through them the patronage of the family will be secured.

FLOODED BATTLEFIELDS OF LUZON.

It was thought there would be a cessation of hostilities in the Philippines until after the rainy season was over and its effects had, to some extent, passed. The resumption of the fighting around Manila, when the country thereabouts is half under water, means unpleasant campaigning for the American soldiers. Through mud and water they are chasing the Filipinos who do not appear to be greatly annoyed by the conditions. The heat is also almost unbearable at this season.

President Harper, of the Chicago University, having prohibited the students of the institution from singing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," has now ordered that they shall drink none but boiled water, which leads an exchange to remark that "possibly Dr. Harper's next step will be to order the boys to use none but hemstitched handkerchiefs."

During the absence of Recorder Long from the borough Mayor Smalley is acting recorder. His first case proved a profitable one for the borough. He secured $40 from five offenders, and the borough's expense was about $2, the cost of keeping them for a day. The fines will almost pay for the new wheel recently purchased for Chief Marshal Campbell.

The Syracuse Post-Standard has an editorial pointing out that "the man with the school books is for expansion," and adds, "The Cuban, the Porto Rican, the Hawaiian and the Filipino will be given no rest until the man with the school book has them at work at his desks and blackboard."

The value of the corn crop of Kansas will be more than that of all the gold and silver mined in the United States this year. The present estimate of the unprecedented crop is $100,000,000.

THEATRICAL.

That the summer is rapidly coming to a close is in evidence at the F. F. Proctor continuous performance theatres in New York city — Proctor's Twenty-third Street and the Pleasure Palace—where the programmes that are being arranged for next week assume a regular midwinter rating. Visitors to the Proctor theatres always are assured an enjoyable entertainment of the very best vaudeville talent obtainable, and at no continuous house in the metropolis is such a varied assortment of novelties presented as at the two theatres of Mr. Proctor's. The Twenty-third Street Theatre, located in the heart of the shopping district, is just the place to rest after a couple of hours at the bargain counters.

The company presenting the mammoth farce comedy at Music Hall Monday night "In Greater New York" which will appear here, is practically a cast of head liners, a powerful singing and attractive chorus. The comedy contains sufficient plot to sustain the interest and is clean, pure and wholesome in tone, free from anything savoring of suggestiveness and is equal if not superior to any similar attraction touring the country. It overflows with catchy music, bright specialties, witty repartee, ludicrous situations, clever comediens and pretty girls; in fact, a show to talk about.

* * * * * *

"Teddy Maguire, the Irish Duke," was the bill last evening at Music Hall and was given an excellent production. The audience was enthusiastic and warmly applauded the good work of the company. Mr. Kennedy as usual kept the audience in a continuous roar of laughter. Tonight "At the Mercy of Crooks" will be the attraction, and as it is a particularly strong piece it should draw a good audience.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A big blacksnake and a large tomcat had a deadly battle in the bushes near the New Jersey Jockey Club grounds, at Elizabeth, a couple of days ago, which resulted in the combatants both being killed. Their bodies were found yesterday by some boys. The snake's coils were tightly wound around the cat's body, while the feline's teeth were sunk deeply into the snake's neck. From the trampled appearance of the ground it was a battle royal between the pair before they both succumbed. It is believed the snake first crushed the life out of the cat, but was then unable to free itself from the deadly hold on its neck, and slowly perished.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Feltville Water Company, that now supplies parts of Scotch Plains, has increased its capital from $10,000 to $500,000. This means that the Union Water Company is to have a rival, and if Westfield should fail of obtaining its own plant it may obtain water cheaper than at present.—Westfield Leader.

It is just such little ways, and in such matters of every day and commonplace action, conduct and manner, that God is always testing us, and deciding wheher we are fit or unfit for the greater work for which He is seeking men.—J. R. Miller.

To have right notions and tempers with relation to this world is as essential to religion as to have right notions of God. And it is as possible for a man to worship a crocodile and yet be a pious man as to have his affections set on the world, and yet be a good Christian.—Law.

Full Dress Suitings

Double-faced plaid golf suiting will be almost universally worn. Splendid, warm, durable and economical goods they are. Require no lining. We are showing some exceedingly choice patterns already, with many others to come as the mills are able to fill orders. Heavy Plaid Sackings also for Golf Capes. They make remarkably stylish garments and are not extravagantly expensive.

Black Crepons

In our opinion no more beautiful goods were ever made from Mohair. Heavy, rich patterns, bright lustre, absolutely fast color, elegant beyond description. The patterns we are showing were selected early and are the best obtainable. Prices 75c to $1.98, the last mentioned we will guarantee to be worth $2.50, or money will be refunded.

Black Goods

Our line of black goods is always complete. Ladies who desire black goods should by all means see our goods. We have a special 46-inch Black Henrietta at $1 per yard, that is exceptional value. French Serges, Broad Cloths, Cheviots, Cashmeres, Velours and Fancy Weaves in variety. Extreme novelties in colored dress goods we carefully avoid, but Broadcloths, Cashmeres, Coverts, Henriettas, Granite Cloths, Cheviots, Storm Serges, Diagonals, etc., we have in the best shades.

New Wash Goods

Flannelettes. The name is very attractive, but the goods are far more so. Rich, warm colors, fine, soft fabrics. We predict for them a very large sale; certainly we know of nothing else so beautiful for inexpensive house dresses.

Outing Flannels

More perfectly finished than ever, and two beautiful to describe. They are pre-eminently the goods for the masses, for everybody from the most humble to the grandest people use them.

About Table Linens

The last large purchase of ours has served simply to whet the appetite of our people for more and has stimulated us to greater efforts along this line. Another large purchase of these goods includes five patterns of 70-inch pure linen damask the actual value of which is 75c per yard. While they last we shall sell them at 50c per yard. We are not sure of being able to get more of the same. If interested BUY NOW. In the same purchase we secured 51 dozen, all hemmed, Huck Towels, 17 x 35. They are selling at 10c each. They are worth 15c each. We show a line of Plaid Glass Towelings that rivals that of any we have seen.

All Summer Goods including Shirt Waists, Crash Skirts, Pique Skirts, and wash goods in general are being shamefully sacrificed to get them out of the way. We have no further use for them and need the room for newer goods.

Come in and get acquainted with us. This is your store as well as ours. With your help we are going to make it an establishment that we may all be proud of.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, August 24.—When the good citizens of the borough awoke Tuesday morning and came down town they were surprised to find the sidewalk in front of Dr. Brakeley's drug store covered with blood. The big stone flaggings were besmeared with gore. Some people expressed the opinion that a man had committed an assault upon a defenseless woman. Others reported that they had heard a row during the night. And so the rumors flew. During the day, however, it developed that William H. Carman's setter dog "Prince" had been struck by a trolley car the evening previous. The dog was not seriously hurt, but its head was cut quite severely.

Fred Stellinger, who is working for John Smalleys, had a narrow escaped on Tuesday afternoon from being killed. Stellings is engaged drawing refuse from Hand's brick yard to be put on Lincoln avenue. He was driving along Church street about 5 o'clock when his team became frightened by a dog running out and barking. At that time the team was near the Presbyterian church. Sterlings realized his danger but the team had started on a wild run. In some manner the seat became detached from the heavy wagon and the driver was thrown off, landing between the horses' feet. Fortunately the horses did not kick nor the wheels run over him. His only injuries to speak of were a few bruises about the legs. The team ran back to the brick yard. The wagon was not damaged any.

The street fakirs, who were here Monday evening, were successful in catching enough of the gullibles to rake in about $16 before being compelled to stop on account of the storm. They claimed to be selling a sarsaparilla, which would cure all the ills the flesh is heir to.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

WOMAN MILL OWNER.

MISS JUDSON HAS BECOME A SUCCESSFUL MILL OPERATOR.

Andrew Judson Had Built a Flourishing Lumber Business for Himself, When He Died. His Sister, a Cornell Graduate Took His Place.

Miss Amelia Judson became a sawmiller all in one day. Six or seven years ago her brother, Andrew B. Judson, left St. Louis and went to Arizona (having inherited a considerable fortune from an uncle at his birthplace, Gulton, Mo.), and convinced that there was money in developing the sugar pine forests in Coconino county, between Williams, Ari., and the Grand canyon of the Colorado River. Inside of a year he invested $38,000 in timber lands and built a sawmill and established the Judson lumber camp, twenty-two miles nötheast of Williams. He made a specialty of timber suitable for boxes for the California fruit trade and from the start was successful.

In June, 1898, young Judson's mother and sister came to visit him. Miss Amelia Judson had just finished a course at Cornell University and expected, after leaving Arizona, to go to Paris to study art.

But misfortune prevented. Only a week before she and her mother intended to return to St. Louis Andrew Judson became suddenly ill with typhoid fever and died. That was last October.

There was but one thing to do. Three important contracts for lumber and box material were in course of fulfillment when the ambitious young lumberman died. Both mother and daughter realized that thousands of dollars of their money was tied up in the lumber camp, and that the only way to save it, avoiding the sacrifice of a forced sale, was to keep the plant in operation.

And so it was that the college-bred Amelia Judson became a sawmiller in the heart of the Bill Williams mountains of Arizona.

She went to the office and took charge. The rough men who saw her wondered at her temerity and hardihood; then they admired her pluck and determined to help her in every possible way. She went into the woods with the logging teams and learned every detail of the work of converting a standing tree into lumber for fruit boxes. She got out her brother's contracts on time, took further orders and prospered at every turn.

"Running a sawmill has passed the experimental stage with me," said Miss Judson. "The fact that we have made money every month since February, or since I got the run of the work, is no credit of mine, but the result of my brother's establishment of the business. I like the work very much, and I shall no doubt continue it. I am never lonesome out here in the camp, for the work so occupies all my waking hours that I never have time to dwell on sentimentalities."

Big Ben Silenced.

In order to save the life of a very rich woman, Big Ben, the tremendous bell in the British House of Commons, was silenced for ten hours recently. Such a thing was unheard of among Westminster householders. The big bell was silenced in mercy to the sufferings of an American woman, Mrs William George Cavendish Betinck who was lying at her home seriously ill.

A serious surgical operation had been performed upon her, but her nervous system was left in a shattered condition and sleep was absolutely essential Her surgeons feared the worse for her if she could not sleep the night of July 1, and sleep was impossible with the vibrations of Big Ben sweeping through her room as the bell tolled the hour. Her husband sent a message to the sergeant-at-arms of the House of Commons of which he was a member for years, asking him to silence the bell. He wrote: "Else the sound of the bell may cause my wife's death." It was ruin to English custom, but Big Ben was silenced, and for ten hours the wife slept through the crisis of her illness. When she opened her eyes Big Ben bell rang again, but she was out of danger. Worthy Londoners who religiously set their watches by Big Ben's time signals were completely upset by

The "Yale Pillow."

The "Yale pillow" has hit the popular fancy, and young women, North, South, East and West, are phenomenally busy tearing old letters and manila wrapping paper into bits for the stuffing of one of these pillows.

"It's an awfully nice way to dispose of your old love letters," declared a young matron a few days ago. "One hates to burn up all these fervent protestations of undying love, and yet one can't keep them all stored away. If you tear them into bits and make a pillow for your head, the sentiment remains, and, though you can't continue to read them. It is romantic to feel that your head is pillowed on them."

All papers excepting newspapers find their way into these pillows, which, though heavy, are soft and cool. For the hammock or piazza suite they cannot be surpassed, while they are the most effective weapons in the pillow fights and other hard usage to which college pillows are subjected. They are usually covered with plain denim or other stout, servicable material.

VARIOUS NOTES.

Pretty Costume Accessories of Divers Kinds.

A charming little cape is composed of black taffeta or of colored mousseline de soie. It is a sort of stole, with long accordion plaited cords falling in front, while about the shoulders it forms a capuchon, shirred all around the neck. Little ruches of mousseline de soie compose the decoration.

Incrustations of black lace are the favorite ornamentation of parasols of colored taffeta. Little ruches of mousseline de soie, embroidered garlands and the narrowest of ribbons drawn through the open passages of lace are also employed, and a large, fluffy choux is often placed on the stem of the parasol above the handle.

Scotch plaid parasols are new for seaside and country, and also parasols of stamped foulard of odd designs.

The toilet illustrated is of mauve cashmere. The redingote skirt is bordered with white galloon and soutache and opens over a front similarly trimmed and also enriched with incrustations of guipure de venise. The bodice shows a sort of bolero effect, the upper part, bordered with white galloon and fastened at the left side with gold buttons, being cut away to show an inverted corselet of guipure. The edge of the front is cut in tabs, beneath which appears a frill of lace. The sleeves are adorned with galloon and guipure applications, and the belt is of green velvet, fastened by an old silver buckle. The hat of moss green tulle is trimmed with brown speckled feathers.

Old Fashioned Lace Shawls Again Coming to the Front.

There was a time, in years now long past, when everybody had a black chantilly lace shawl. These were packed away when they dropped out of fashion, but now they are being disinterred and used for long pointed tunic draperies upon skirts covered with deep plaited flounces of mousseline de soie, liberty satin or even moire, for silk moire is now mingled with all sorts of thin, sheer fabrics, a part of its heavy, stiff effect being thus lost.

Reed green is extremely fashionable and assumes the lead among those light tints which are employed under lace. It is a subdued green.

Guipure coats are in high favor. They have a basque long at the back, but rounded in front, the form which prevails with jackets of all sorts. An attempt is being again made to introduce the loose sack, but it will probably fail, as it did last time.

The costume shown in the sketch is of pastel blue cloth. The skirt closes at the side and is adorned with rows of stitching and applications of Irish guipure. The crossed bodice is gathered at the waist and has a wide collar and revers incrusted with guipure. The plaited plastron has a yoke and high collar of guipure. The sleeves are encircled by corded plaits and are adorned with guipure motifs. The belt of pansy velvet is fastened by a gold buckle. The hat is of sky blue straw, trimmed with fans of blue tulle and white feathers.

WAS ABSENT MINDED

The Result Was, That He Now Thinks Gloomy Thoughts About Himself.

There's a certain very disconsolate young man over at the Treasury Department, says the Washington Post, who bends perspiringly over his desk all day long and thinks gloomy thoughts about himself. It came about, this state of downheartedness of his, because he happened not to have a lead pencil with him one afternoon of last week. After the toil of the day was ended for him he was riding out to an inn in the suburbs. Next to him in the electric car sat a girl whom he had seen but once before, but whom that once had made him long to see again. He had met her at an entertainment of some kind last winter and he knew she lived in Baltimore. Overjoyed to see her again, he fairly bubbled with delight when she bowed.

He talked to her and she talked to him till, timidly enough, he ventured to insinuate that he would be only too grateful for permission to call. Graciously she gave it. She was staying, she said, with her aunt, in Blank avenue, at such and such a number. Now, the young man is as absent-minded a being as ever you met and he never trusts his memory for a moment.

He searched his pocket for a pencil, but pencil he had none. He is, however, a young man of resources. He took out a postal card and registered the address, which had four figures, by tearing little slits in the four sides of the card, each one representing one figure. The name of the avenue he trusted himself to remember, as it is named for the State of his birth.

The world was very rosy for him for several days till the evening on which he was to make his first visit arrived. Then he dressed himself with great care and consulted the postal card. The little gashes were still in it, but he couldn't remember which side he held next him when he tore them, nor at which corner he began. The adddress may be one of the dear only knows how many combinations four figures can be made into. He has consulted the city directory. The girl's surname appears for half a column, but nobody of the name lives in Blank avenue. The aunt's name, evidently, is not hers. She is lost to him—lost for the want of a lead pencil, and until the relenting fates permit him to meet her again he can only think, self-reproachfully, the gloomy thoughts to which I have already referred.

How to Treat the Hair.

The hair has a very great deal to do with one's appearance; almost as much as the teeth. Yet many persons who take care of the teeth neglect the hair woefully.

The very best thing to do in order to keep the hair in good condition is to massage the scalp daily. This systematic manipulation keeps the skin from tightening and prevents the head from becoming, as it were, hide-bound.

Hair cannot grow on a stiffened, glassy skin which has gotten into such a dry state that it, so to speak, no longer breathes.

If your hair shows signs of lifelessness, or the scalp feels sore to the touch, go to a good masseuse twice a week. If you cannot conveniently do that take a lesson or two—learn, by all means, to manipulate your scalp yourself. It is no great task and it will keep what hair you have and encourage more to come.

At all events don't drag the hair off your head by brushing. It is a pretty well exploded idea that brushing the hair is beneficial.

Above all things, never attempt to free the head or hair with a "fine comb"—that is death to the hair, as is too much washing. Five or six times a year is quite often enough for a shampoo. One of the reasons why more men than women are bald-headed is because men, having short hair, are apt to wet the head daily, which practice carries off the natural fertilizing secretions. Too much water rots the hair.

Queen's Letter Sold.

An autograph letter from Queen Victoria, addressed the emperor of the French, dated Osborne, June 29, 1855 (in French), was sold at Southeby's auction rooms, London. The letter, which deplores the ministerial crisis at that time existing and apprehends others to follow, assures the emperor that no change of government would ever compromise that good understanding existing between the two countries. The price realized was 2 guineas.

A Bright Young Man.

A bright young man in this town, so bright that it would be wrong to mention his name, lost a gold watch the other day, says the Buffalo News. The most unfortunate part of it was that the watch did not belong to him. A bright young woman—also too bright to be mentioned by name—loaned the timepiece to him.

Her father gave it to her three or four years ago. It was not a bad timepiece. Any watch that costs $250 cannot be bad.

"Now, the case of this is not very valuable," said the father when he handed it to her the morning of this particular birthday. "It is worth something, but the value of the watch is in the works. I had them put in a cheap case, because I know you are so careless that you are just as likely to ruin a good case as not, and a cheap one will do. But be careful of the works, for they are valuable."

Of course she was careful, careful like all girls. She never carried the watch except in a chamois case, and occasionally breathed on the works and let a little dust blow on them. Then she loaned the watch to this bright young man, and he lost it. He advertised, and two days later a modest looking young man, whose looks evidently were not indicative of his qualities, appeared at the bright young innas place of business with the watch.

"Ah, that's it!" cried the bright young man. "Yes, that's it! Here, honest man, take $10 reward."

The honest man took the $10 reward and left. The bright young man wasted no time in reaching the home of the bright young girl and handing the watch to her.

"But, Henry, what makes it so light?" she asked.

She opened it. The works were gone.

The "Dinner Taster."

The "dinner taster" is the latest example of the "ultra" type of Parisian refinement. The Parisian palate, you know, is the one thing worth living for, according to the idea of a certain class of people whose pleasure in life depends upon the enjoyment of the senses.

This "dinner taster" makes it her business to visit the fine houses and taste the dishes intended for dinner. She suggests improvements, and shows the cook new ways of preparing dishes That the business is a profitable one may be judged by the fact that she invariably rides in a cab.

In the East End of London a lucrative trade is followed by some score or so of women. The pawnbrokers there are very numerous and never lack for clients. Among the latter, however, are some who do not relish the idea of being brought into personal contact with "uncle."

It is for the special benefit of these that the pawnbroker's agent exists. She goes several times a day to the pawnshop with articles belonging to the bashful ones, for whom she gets the highest sum procurable on the items pledged.

Beauty.

Never mistake fads for fashions.

Gloves and shoes too small are decidedly bad form.

Ripped garments and frayed edges are fatal to smartness.

Good grooming is the necessary preliminary to smart dressing.

A sense of appropriateness in attire is more desirable than riches.

Never tie a necktie hastily or overlook a spot on a collar or a rip in a glove.

Learn how to carry the body correctly if you expect to carry your clothes well.

Well-brushed skirts, well-cleaned shoes and a trim waist line cost nothing.

Fresh linen is an essential to the smartly dressed girl as to the correctly dressed man.

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL.

HISTORY OF THE NOBLE ORDER WHICH BEARS HIS NAME.

It Is the Greatest and Most Unostentatious Charitable Organization In the World, and It Was Founded In Paris In 1833.

The work of the St. Vincent de Paul society is so quietly, so unostentatiously done that no one not intimately acquainted with it can form an adequate extent of the good results obtained. It is a society organized solely for the purpose of alleviating the physical sufferings of the poor without regard to color or creed. Its members all work without salary, and it is one of the unwritten and fundamental rules of the society that no member shall receive any aggrandizement out of his connection with the society. It is an organization composed solely of men. Not that the women do not help along indirectly in its work, but the membership is composed entirely of men.

This is the history of the St. Vincent de Paul society:

In the year 1833 a number of Catholic students, among them the celebrated writer, Frederic Ozanam, attending lectures in Paris, were brought into contact with students of various ways of thinking—materialists, deists, Fourierists—with whom they discussed subjects of common interest in a historical club. The freethinkers taunted their companions with the assertion that the ancient spirit of Christianity had fled and that great political enterprises could no longer owe to it either their inspiration or their vitality. Ozanam and a few others exchanged ideas on the subject, and at last, at a meeting attended by five or six friends, after much had been said as to the benefit that works of charity, would confer both on themselves and on the poor, some one—it has never been ascertained which of them—cried out, "Let us found a conference of charity."

After some debate over the particular way in which to begin their operations, it was decided to go to Sister Rosalie, superioress of the sisters of charity, and obtain the names of some poor families whom the members could visit. This was done, and M. Bailly, a pious layman, who was on intimate relations with many of the Paris clergy, consented to act as their president and gave them rooms to meet in. Here Ozanam, Devaux, Letaillandier, Lamache, Lallier, Clave and two others held the first conference, in May, 1833, and this was the foundation of one of the greatest organizations of true philanthropy that the world has ever seen.

The conference chose St. Vincent de Paul for its patron, and M. Bailly, after a time, drew up a series of rules for the conduct of the meetings and the administration of relief with appropriate "considerations." The objects of the organization were stated to be: "First, to encourage its members, by example and counsel, in the practice of a Christian life; second, to visit the poor and assist them when in distress, as far as our means will permit; third, to apply ourselves, according to our abilities and the time we can spare, to the elementary and Christian instruction of poor children, whether free or imprisoned; fourth, to distribute moral and religious books; fifth, to be willing to undertake any other charitable work to which our resources may be adequate, and which will not oppose the chief end of the society."

In two years so many members had joined the "conference" that it was decided to divide it up into sections which should serve as new centers, whence the work of charity might be carried on more effectually among the swarming poor of Paris. These new sections were after a time also called "conferences," and the aggregate of sections formed the now worldwide "Society of St. Vincent de Paul." The movement originated among laymen, and the administration of the society has always been in lay hands, but in union with, and subordinate to, the clergy. Soon after the division of the first conference the presidents of the various sections began the practice of meeting in council, and from this grew the "council general."

So fast did the society grow that in 1853, 20 years from its foundation, the members of the Paris conference were 2,000 in number, with 5,000 poor families on their relief lists, and branches had already been established in England, Ireland, Spain, Belgium, America and Palestine. Indulgences were granted to it in very ample terms by Pope Gregory XVI and Pius IX. The last named pope, in 1853, made Cardinal Fornari its cardinal protector.

The office of the council general is in Paris. The English speaking councils are numerous all over the world. In Ireland there are 6 "particular—i. e., distinct—councils" and 132 conferences; in England, 10 councils and 116 conferences; in Scotland, 17 conferences. In Canada there are 9 councils and 81 conferences, and there are councils in Calcutta, India; in Bombay, Shanghai, Hongkong, Sydney, Australia (10 conferences); Adelaide, Cape Town, South Africa; Grahamstown, Port Elizabeth, Port Louis, Mauritius and New Zealand. On the continent of Europe, outside of France, there are 14 councils, and others have also been established in Mexico and in Quito, Rio de Janeiro, Bahia, Buenos Ayres, Montevideo and other cities in South America. In the United States there are four general divisions, or "superior councils," of the society—New York, St. Louis, New Orleans and Brooklyn.

The society is composed of active and honorary members. The latter class assist the former by their efforts and their influence, and by their offerings and prayers supply the absence of actual co-operation in charitable works. The unity of the society is cited as a model of Christian friendship. Large numbers in the conferences are not so much sought for as small and select bands of practical and zealous almoners. All good young Catholic laymen are eligible for membership, and when several members meet in a locality it is called a "conference." Should several conferences be formed in the same place, each takes the name of its separate parish, and all united form the "particular council," which takes the name of the town or city. These may again be subordinate to the superior council, which, in turn, is dominated by the council general at Paris. Each conference has a president, a spiritual director, one or more vice presidents, a secretary and a treasurer, who constitute the council of the conference. There may also be in each conference, if necessary, a librarian, a keeper of the clothes room and other officers. The president is elected by the conference; the other officers are appointed by the president, with the advice of his council. In a town or city where there is a particular council the presidents and vice presidents of the conference are appointed by the president of the council. The spiritual director is always appointed by the bishop of the diocese. No work of charity is regarded as foreign to the society, although its special object is to visit poor families. Its members are expected to embrace every opportunity of affording consolation to the sick and to prisoners in the jails, of instructing poor, unprotected or imprisoned children, and of procuring the consolations of religion for those who need them in the hour of death.

Relief is extended to the worthy poor, irrespective of race, color or religious belief. A small contribution is given by each member every week, constituting the ordinary revenue of the treasury. This is added to by the donations in the poor boxes at the churches, by special donations, church collections and proceeds of lectures and entertainments, etc. The donations to the poor are given in cash, for rent and funeral expenses, in groceries, fuel and clothing. Only the worthy poor are relieved, and their condition is discovered by the personal visitation of the members, who go in pairs and make weekly visits to the distressed families. Often in the missionary rounds of the clergy their charitable zeal prompts them to look up the erring and poverty stricken. From this source the lists of the conferences are continually recruited. When the case is reported, it is carefully considered by the conference and the amount of aid determined upon, or the matter is left to the discretion of the visitor thereupon appointed. It would be almost impossible in a limited space to outline the ramifications that charity invents for the work of the conferences of the St. Vincent de Paul society.

But, notwithstanding its magnitude and incalculable benefits to humanity and society at large, the good work of the society must remain comparatively unknown. A fundamental rule requires the utmost secrecy for all the meritorious acts of charity performed. The record in the book of eternal life is all that is deemed sufficient. Only what is necessary to report to the supreme council is published, and that only to discover where there is need for assistance rather than where most good was accomplished. Even the collections at the weekly meetings of the conferences are always taken up so that each shall contribute secretly. The rules forbid money to be raised by balls, theatrical performances or lotteries.

The "particular council" of a city is charged with these works and important measures that interest all the conferences of the place. It allocates the common fund to meet the special wants of the place and to sustain the poorer conferences. The general meetings of the society are held every year on the 8th of December, the feast of the immaculate conception, on the first Sunday in Lent on the second Sunday after Easter, and on the feast of St. Vincent de Paul, July 19. At these the reports of the district are received, and the measures taken for the accomplishment of the work of the society devised and announced. The weekly meetings of the conferences are opened with prayer. The relief work is then considered and its details allocated. A collection is made, and a prayer closes the proceedings. Love of our neighbor and zeal for the salvation of souls is the very essence of the conference.

No one who has the interests of humanity at heart can but wish that its sphere of usefulness may be daily widened, and the words of one of its presidents may be realized in the hope that its members ever continue to go with willing footsteps into the desolate homes and hovels of the poor; that they speak tenderly to them of their lives and their immediate wants, that they regard them not as outcasts, but that they see in the very faces of the most outcast and lowly and despised the image of a most merciful God. And then will the stream of human charity flow on. Dynasties crumble, empires pass away, states die and are forgotten, but as long as there is woe and suffering and want in this world of ours, so long there will be work for the disciples of St. Vincent de Paul.

The last census of the society, taken about a year ago, showed that there are 5,500 conferences in the world, with a membership of about 100,000.—Brooklyn Citizen.

The Virtues.

There is not any virtue the exercise of which, even momentarily, will not impress a new fairness on the features; neither on them only, but on the whole body. The moral and intellectual faculties have operations, for all the movements and gestures, however slight, are different in their modes according to the mind that governs them.

The Boy Was Not the Fool.

The other day a little boy was sent to a shop for a penny worth of cobbler's wax. The shopman, thinking of quizzing him, said:

"Won't shoemaker's wax do?"

"Aw dooan't know," replied the lad. "Aw'll go an' see."

He returned again directly, and, addressing the shopman, said:

"Mi faither says that shoemaker's will do."

The shopman handed it to him, smiling, and said:

"What is the difference?"

"Well, said the lad, going toward the door, "mi faither says the's same difference as there is between you and a donkey, and that is, they're booati alike."

A GIGANTIC EGG.

Was Supposed to Have Been Deposited By the Roc.

Here is the picture of an egg which, in its natural size, measures a yard in circumference! It holds nearly two gallons. In bulk it equals four ostrich eggs, or six eggs of the cassowary, or 150 hen eggs. It would take nearly 2,000 humming bird eggs to equal in bulk this one egg.

With such an egg one might give a banquet on Easter morning to seventy-five persons and to each give a portion of the egg equal in amount to two hen eggs, or to 150 persons an amount equal to one hen's egg.

The sketch of this gigantic egg in Paris was made from the only specimen in the world.

The two halves of the egg would make two splendid punch bowls out of which twenty men could drink all they wanted.

It was discovered in Madagascar by a famous French naturalist, and many people were made to believe at the time of its discovery that the egg of the famous roc itself had been found, and no wonder, for the farfamed bird of the "Arabian Nights" was supposed to have lived on this very island.

However, after careful investigation, it was decided that the egg was that of a giant extinct bird named aepyornis. To-day it is one of the greatest treasures of the museum in the Jardin des Plantes, in Paris.

Plants Tinted By Bacteria.

Sittings of the Paris Academy of Sciences are not often interesting. A recent one was an exception, although the topic was a discovery made by M. Matrouchot about such insignificant creatures as bacteria. But it appears that these little beings do many things besides the dissemination of maladies. They produce coloring stuffs, for instance, and this is how that talent has been discovered. A few years ago flowers of paradoxical colors appeared in windows and at button holes—green carnations, blue roses and other horticultural monsters. This was the result of either plunging the leaves into a chemical dye or else placing the stalk in a solution of aniline salts of the hue desired, whereupon the liquid ascended in virtue of capillary attraction. In all this there was nothing esthetic, but useful results may be obtained for the anatomy and physiology of plants. For in the world of bacteria and bacilli there are organisms which possess the property of secreting coloring stuffs. They called chromogenous bacteria. Now M. Matruchot cultivated one of these together with a fibrous fungus, and found that the pigment or coloring stuff secreted by the bacteria impregnated and tinted the substance of the fungus without affecting its vital qualities. This natural coloring process is only partial. It is invariably restricted to certain regions of the protoplasm. Thanks to this discovery, it will now be possible to bring out clearly and expose to view certain of the structure of the cell which were heretofore unknown. It is also confidently hoped that what has been done for the simple cell may be speedily rendered possible for complex organisms. This is the conclusion drawn by M. Matruchot from his discovery, and he intends to turn his efforts in that direction.

Why the Doctor Disappeared.

An English doctor attached to the court of a rajah made himself almost indispensable to his neighbors. He had, fortunately, also made a friend of his prime minister. On one occasion his highness, being slighly indisposed, had taken, by the doctor's advice, a seidlitz powder, with which he expressed himself delighted. Its tendency to "boil and fizz ready to blow your nose off" seemed to him to "scatter coolness;" and he seemed so much better after taking it that the doctor felt justified in joining in a hunting party.

Presently a horseman from the palace, in the confidential employment of the grand vizier, galloped up to him.

"My master bids me tell you," he said, "that his highness has broken open your medicine chest, and taken, first, all the white powders and then all the blue."

"Gracious goodness," cried the doctor, "there were twenty-three of each of them."

"My master adds," continued the messenger, "that you had better make for the frontier without one minute's delay."

The doctor put spurs to his horse, and never drew rein till he was "out of the jurisdiction of the court."

Chicago Post: "I understand she gave you a piece of her mind."

"That's where you're wrong. She gave me all of it. I should judge."

Granger—"How are you all getting along at your house?"

Timson—"Pretty well, on the whole. We are nearly out of everything but debt, and in time, if things go on as they have been going, we ought to be out of that."—Boston Transcript.

BIG MEN IN BEAUFORT S. C.

The Chief of Police Is 6ft. 9 in. and There are Others.

The little town of Beaufort, S. C., a few miles from Port Royal, and one of the earliest settlements in this country, has produced more men of exceptionally great height than any other place of double the inhabitants in the world. Her tallest representative was in the Confederate army. He is in Columbia now, and according toa authentic records obtainable, he was the tallest soldier in modern armies of the world, having an advantage of one inch over Capt. Oswald Ames, of the second light guards of England, who was 6 feet 8 inches, and headed the queen's jubilee procession. The tallest man in the United States army, regular or volunteers, in the war with Spain was 6 feet 6 inches. Jacob Eberhardt of Columbia, 6 feet 6 inches, voluntered, but the surgeons said he was out of proportion, and would not accept him. Under army regulations, he would have been required to weigh 210 pounds.

Eldred S. Fickling, formerly of Beaufort, and for many years after the war chief of police at Columbia, and still on the force, is 6 feet 9 inches in his stockings. A man of medium height can walk under his arms extended horizontally. Mr. Fickling's father, an eminent lawyer, was 6 feet 5 inches, while other members of the family are exceptionally tall. When he was fifteen years old Mr. Fickling says he went with his father to Charleston. They were in the lobby of the old Mills House, when several other Beaufort men came in. Some one remarked that it was the largest gathering of Beaufortonians he had seen that day, and suggested that they try how far they could walk up King street. Six of them started out, but before going half a dozen blocks up the street, had to enter stores and separate. The crowd following blocked the street. "I was not nearly grown then," says Mr. Fickling, "and only measured 6 feet 6 inches, but the tallest man was 6 feet 7 inches. Two were 6 feet 6 inches and the shortest 6 feet 3 inches.

E. S. Fickling entered the Confederate army in 1861 in the famous Hampton Legion, going with it to Virginia. It may be remarked here that the Hampton Legion of 1,200 men furnished the Confederate army before the close of the war with seven generals, as follows: Wade Hampton, colonel; Stephen D. Lee, captain; Mart W. Gary, captain; G. M. Logan, second lieutenant; Johnson Pettigrew, private.

On returning from Virginia, Lieut. Fickling entered the Beaufort artillery and thereafter was at Fort Sumpter participating in many of the eventful incidents of that time. On a beautiful drinking fountain, erected on the battery in Charleston by the women of Charleston to the men, living and dead, who first used the torpedo boat in Charleston Harbor, and so in the world appears the name of Eldred S. Fickling—of all those names he is the only one living.

When the nameless confederate ram attempted to sink the union Ironsides in Charleston, Lieut. Fickling was in command of the fighting men of the boat. The anchor chains of the Ironsides entangled the torpedo of the confederate vessel, and the Ironsides was struck by a slanting and harmless blow.

Speaking of Beaufort men, Mr. Fickling says that when he was a boy Mr. Cuthbert of Beaufort told him that he was the centre file of the old Beaufort artillery when that organization turned out in 1825 to meet Lafayette. Mr. Cuthbert was 6 feet 1 inch, and there were seventy-four men of greater height in the artillery, whose membership was 150.

Some big men lack courage, but that has never been charged in this case. Fourth of July, 1881, Chief of Police Fickling, armed with a baseball bat, went to the rescue of one of his men, being beaten to death by a mob of drunken negroes. He did rescue him. Then the negroes came at him with knives drawn. The leaders were two giants; they were laid low when they entered a six-foot circle. The others halted, and a bloody riot was averted.

Columbians still talk of a wagon yard riot of sixteen years ago, when white desperadoes swore they would not be arrested, and had punished half a dozen policemen before the arrival of the chief. He stalked in with a club, broke heads right and left, collared the two wanted and brought them out. There are many similar incidents of great courage and gigantic strength related of him in peace and war.

A Novel Timepiece.

Henry Block, of Brooklyn, N. Y., had the photographs of his children put on the dial of his watch in place of the figures which ordinarily appear there. The fact that he has twelve children suggested to him this novel way of keeping their pictures always in sight. To get all the photographs on the dial he had to have a watch made to order larger than those usually found in the jewelry stores. Then the reduced photographs of his children, the oldest one representing the numeral one, were placed on the dial in the order of their birth. Mr. Bloch is proud of his novel timepiece.

Was Looking Ahead.

"No, we couldn't agree," sighed the man. "I said I wasn't worthy of her, and she said I was. For the sake of harmony I yielded my opinion and said I was worthy of her, and she, not to be outdone in generosity, I suppose, yielded her opinion and said I wasn't."—Detroit Journal.

ANCIENT INVENTIONS

APPARENTLY THERE IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

The Romans and Etruscans Were the First Users of the Safety Pin and Othes Household Articles Generally Supposed to Be Modern.

The Smithsonian Institution has a collection made up exclusively of ancient inventions that are commonly supposed to be very modern. Take, for example, the safety pin. It was in in common use in ancient Rome. In fact, it was a familiar article of domestic usefulness in Italy long before Rome obtained her glory. Safety pins similar in all respects to those now employed have been obtained in quantities from the tombs of the Etruscans, whose civilization long antedated that of the kingdom founded by Romulus and Remus. They were of bronze and utilized the familiar principle of coiled spring and catch.

Some of these old-time safety pins took the form of ornaments. Occasionally they were quite large, ten inches or so in length, and hollow, as if designed to be attached to the gown in front and possibly to contain something or other.

INVENTIONS OF ANCIENT TIMES.

The belt of thin copper worn by the ancient Roman soldier was fastened to a strip of cloth, for lining, in a very simple way—namely, by a series of those little clamps which to-day are commonly employed for holding a number of sheets of paper together. Indeed, the well-known McGill paper-fastener, out of which the patentee has made a large fortune, is nothing more or less than an exact reproduction of the device described in common use at least 2,500 years ago.

In the collection referred to are a number of fishhooks, not less than 3,000 years old, obtained from Swiss lake dwellings. They are of bronze, and as to shape are exactly like modern patterns; they have the same curves and the same barbs, with a similar expansion at the top of the shank for the attachment of the line. But for the metal of which they are composed they might have been made yesterday. The very fact that they are of bronze is a proof of their great antiquity, referring them to a prehistoric epoch. All of European history belongs to the post-bronze or iron age.

Other curios from the ancient Etruscan tombs are strainers, ladles, spoons and knives of bronze. There is a fine-tooth comb of ivory, in shape precisely like the fine-tooth combs of today. Not less interesting are bronze mirrors which have the same shape as the modern toilet glass with a handle. Of course, they have long lost their polish which made them serviceable, but one is able to distinguish the figures of human beings and animals etched on their backs.

Such articles of bronze, as well as daggers and other weapons and utensils, were cast when practicable in molds that were carved out of hard stone, a pair of stones being required to produce the object, which was afterward polished and otherwise elaborated. The collection described is rich in needles, bodkins and thimbles. These last had no tops like modern thimbles, but were provided, nevertheless, with the same sort of indentations to catch the head of the needle.

There are razors, also of bronze, which may have been well enough in their day, though it must have been pretty hard work to shave with them. Their shape was very different from the modern, being that of a crescent, with a small handle.

Among the most plentiful of the objects got from the Etruscan tombs are great pins with big round heads which in shape are exactly like the modern hatpins. Indeed, there can be no question that the hatpin of to-day is derived from this source. It is popularly imagined that the button with a perforated shank is a comparatively new invention, but it is not so at all, as is proved by the fact that bronze buttons of similar make were in use fully 2,500 years ago, and probably much more anciently. The collar stud is equally old. The ancient Etruscans and Romans used hairpins, but the latter were single wires of bronze, the notion of doubling and bending them being unthought of in those days.

Humor of the Day.

You will see him in a hurry,
He will pass you in a flurry,
Brushing this and that one out the way;
You will think his child is dying
By the way you see him flying,
But—"Time's money!" is all you'll hear him say.

No thought of ever stopping,
A-running—almost hopping—
Not even taking time to catch a car;
You feel his elbow fouling,
He smiles at you a-scowling,
And rushes, rushes on, a human shooting star

But just let a truck horse stumble
And take a sudden tumble,
Or a colored man start splashing blue and lime;
And he'll forget about his flurry,
Forget it in a hurry,
And "rubberneck" for thirty minutes' time.

—Chicago News.

A few years ago an eminent London physician, on my mentioning to him tomatoes as an aricle of diet for myself, said, "Why do you eat tomatoes?" I said, "Why not?" He said, "Well, I think that there are grave reasons for thinking it possible that eating tomatoes increases, if it does not produce, the liability to cancer. I do not say positively that it does so."

It strikes a layman as a fact, that the consumption of tomatoes has increased as much in England of late years as has cancer.—Pall Mall Gazette.

IMPROVED FORM FOR POSTAL MONEY ORDERS.

Important Notice That Postmaster Bird Has Received.

THE SIZE TO BE SMALLER.

NEW FEATURES TO PREVENT MISTAKES THAT NOW HAPPEN.

The Design is an Artistic One, the Color Being Blue—Will be Introduced in Postoffices Throughout the Country September 4th—Growth of the Money Order System Has Been Phenomenal

Postmaster Bird, of this city, has received from the Postoffice Department at Washington a notification of the adoption of a new form of domestic money order which will be introduced gradually, or as the supplies of the old form become exhausted, at the various postoffice throughout the country after September 4th.

The new form is somewhat smaller than the order now in use. Its dimensions are about those of the ordidary bank draft. It has two adjuncts. The advice, or notification to be sent by the issuing to the paying Postmaster, is a reproduction of the order through the use of carbonized paper (the manifold process,) and a receipt for the amount, to be furnished by the issuing Postmaster to the remitter.

On the back of the order a separate space has been provided for the stamps of banks through which it may be passed for collection.

In color the order is blue, having a light blue ground, with fine, closely interlaced, tinted lines of geometrical lathe work, of darker shade. In the centre is an escutcheon bearing the words "Postal Money Order" in shaded capital letters of the same two tints of blue. The tint of the order and the lathe work will serve to prevent imitations; but, as an additional safeguard against counterfeiting, a horizontal water-mark, composed of the initials U. S. M. O, in broad capital letters, has been wrought into the paper on which the new forms are printed.

Discrepances between order and advice, which, by entailing additional correspondence and causing delay in payment, have heretofore been a source of annoyance to the department and Postmasters, as well as to remitters and payees, are prevented, and absolute uniformity between the order and advice insured. The dispatch of advices, which hitherto have not been made out until after issue of the orders, will also be accelerated.

The receipt which is to be furnished by the issuing Postmaster to the remitter, showing the number and date of the order and the amount for which issued, is also, in the main, a reproduction, by the carbon process, of the writing and stamping of the order. The adoption of a receipt has not hitherto been practicable.

The postal money order system, from a small beginning in 1894, when the number of money order postoffices established in the United States was 419, has grown to be one of the great agencies of exchange. There are now about 30,000 such offices. The number of domestic money orders issued tn the United States during the past year was 30,000,000, amounting to $21,000,000. The system is used most extensively for remittances from places where bank exchange is not so readily obtainable. It is expected that on or about Jan. 1st next the fee charged for orders will be materially reduced.

One Man Permitted to Go to Work.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, August 25—The strike of the boilermakers in the Nixon shipyards is still on, and the situation remains about the same, with the exception that in a meeting of the strikers, in Mitchell's Hall, Alfred T. Ingham, foreman of the boilermakers, was permitted by the strikers to go back to work, in order that a contract on one of the boats might be completed on time.

THE SELLS AND SELLERS.

THEY ARE CLOSE NEIGHBORS, BUT IN A BITTER FEUD.

In Trouble Over Fowls—Two Courts Appealed, but the Whole Set Will Have to Answer to the Grand Jury.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, August 25—Judge Clark's and Judge Schick's courts were both kept busy last night, airing the troubles of the Sells and Sellers' families who live neighbors on Farlee avenue. Trouble has been brewing in the two families for sometime, over a few chickens and geese.

A short time ago Mrs. Sellers had Mr. Sells before Judge Clark's court for damages done by his chickens. Judge Clark tried to settle the trouble at that time, but it broke out anew yesterday and more furious than ever. Blows were struck and Sells claims Thomas Sellers paraded before their house with a loaded revolver and in no gentle tone of voice invited them all to come out and get a little of it. It is also alleged that before Thomas started his procession in search of blood his mother had assaulted Mrs. Sells, striking her with fist and stones.

Judge Clark listened very patiently to both sides but found the evidence very conflicting, as each was ready to swear the other was perjuring themselves. After hearing both sides the Judge held Mrs. Seller's under $100 bail to appear before the October Grand Jury on the charge of assault. Thomas, her son, who acknowledged that he carried a revolver, but never kept it loaded, was held under the same amount to appear at the same time.

Judge Schick's court had a counter charge against the Sells of assault upon Mrs. Sellers and her son. After hearing the conflicting stories his honor thought he would hold the accused under $100 bail for the October term of the Grand Jury and let the trouble be settled there.

As the matter stands each one think they have the best end of the case, but it will be a long time before the mills of justice will be so busy in town again.

MAYOR IS NOT WELL.

Severe Attack of Hay Fever May Compel a Short Vacation.

Plainfield is minus both its Mayor and City Judge today. But Mayor Rockfellow will return this evening. The Mayor is a regular sufferer from hay fever. That affliction made its appearance yesterday in so severe a form that the Mayor was compelled to leave his business this morning and seek a day at the seashore. If it affords him any relief, he will probably leave again tomorrow to remain at the shore for a few days.

If the Mayor is compelled to go away for his health, President of the Common Council F. H. Andrews will act as Mayor and also perform the duties of the City Judge. That will be a new experience for Mr. Andrews, who has never been called upon before to exercise judicial duties for the city.

CHURCH WAS DEFENDANT

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SUED FOR INSURANCE PREMIUM.

Justice Moffett Renders a Decision in Favor of W. H. Abbott, Who Insured the Church Against Loss by Fire

The action brought before Justice Mosher by W. H. Abbott, the well known insurance agent, to recover the amount of an insurance policy for $132.6 against the First Church of Christ of North Plainfield was tried yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff claimed to have issued a policy insuring the church building against loss of fire, at the request of one of trustees. The church records were placed in evidence to show that the authority had been given to have the church insured. After keeping the policy for several months it was returned and the trustees refused to pay the premium. Justice Moffett considered that sufficient evidence had been produced to substantiate a case for the plaintiff and he rendered a judgment for the full amount claimed. The defendants gave notice of an appeal. Isaac P. Runyon for plaintiff; S. S. Swackhamer for defendants.

SLEPT IN THE GUTTER.

So Patrolman Myers Gave Thomas Jefferson a Cell In City Jail.

Thomas Jefferson sat on the curb last evening and dreamed. He dreamed that there was no such thing as work and that beer and "Jersey lightning" flowed at every street corner. Then there came a sudden interruption. A strong hand was laid upon his shoulder and a stentorian voice bade him return to the stern realities of life.

An hour later Thomas Jefferson sat on the rude cot in the city jail and dreamed again. This time, hideous thoughts seemed creeping over him. He awoke this morning to find that it was the creeping and crawling ones that kept him company. Mayor Rockfellow heard the story of Patrolman Myers who made the arrest for drunkenness and decided that one night of it was punishment enough. Sentence was suspended.

The horse was harnessed in the stable, but grew balky and refused to be driven out. Michael Kiely, the coachman, started to lead the stubborn animal out of the doorway. At the entrance the animal sprang forward, throwing Kiely down, and ran down Seventh street to LeGrande avenue and out to Netherwood. After smashing the vehicle there and leaving its wreck behind, the horse came back to town and finally brought up in Blair's stable on West Sixth street, from where it was afterwards taken home.

HIT BY A TRAIN AT NETERWOOD STATION.

S. J. O'Sullivan Will Be Laid Up for Several Weeks.

ILL LUCK SEEMS TO BE HIS.

HE DID NOT SEE HIS DANGER UNTIL IT WAS TOO LATE.

Had Been in the Habit of Standing on Track No. 4 for His Regular Train, But This Morning He Did Not See That the Train Was on that Track—Seriously, But Not Fatally, Hurt

Sylvester J. O'Sullivan, vice-president of the Maryland Surety Company, of New York, seems to be ill-fated. When the Windsor Hotel fire occurred in New York last spring, he resided in a house next door and had most of his furniture destroyed. His wife suffered a severe shock to her nervous system by the scenes she witnessed at the fire, and the first of June last she came to the Hotel Hunterston, at Netherwood to spend the summer and recuperate her health. The last day of June she stepped on a match in the dry goods store of Crosby & Hill, in this city, and her flimsy summer gown was ignited. In a few moments she was a living torch, and later in the day died from the affects of the burns she received. After passing through this fatality Mr. O'Sullivan found his health impaired and he decided to spend the remainder of the summer at the Hunterston. He went back and forth to New York every day, but this morning while waiting for a train at the Netherwood station his misfortunes were added to by being struck by the train he expected to board, and now he lies seriously injured in his aprartments in the hotel.

Mr. O'Sullivan has been in the habit of leaving Netherwood at 8.30 o'clock, but today he decided to go on the train that passes Netherwood at 10.01. The train that he usually takes runs on track No 3, and Mr. O'Sullivan generally stepped out onto track 4 as the train rolled into the station. The 10 01 runs on track 4, but as Mr. O'Sullivan did not notice the difference this morning he walked on the track directly in front of the oncoming train without apprehending his danger. When the locomotive was almost upon him he saw his predicament. He jumped back, but it was too late. He was struck with great force by the side of the engine and thrown several feet on the hard ballast of the roadbed. The engine came to a stop without striking him again, and the witnesse of the accident rushed to Mr. O'Sullivan's aid. He was lying half conscious from the shock. His face was cut and bruised, bleeding profusely, and his clothes badly torn. He was carried to the depot platform and a delivery wagon pressed into service to carry him back to the hotel. While being carried to his apartments Mr. O'Sullivan, who weighs 320 pounds, suffered excruciating pain.

By this time Drs. J. B. and Norman Probasco had arrived at the hotel. They called Dr. Long in consultation and made an examination of Mr. O'Sullivan's injuries. They found his left hip badly sprained, his left arm broken near the shoulder and the upper part of his body badly bruised. It is not thought that he suffered internal injuries. Though the injuries are very painful and will confine him to the bed for several weeks, they are not sufficient to cause fatal results.

Dr. Fritts, the railroad's surgeon, called, but his services were not required.

MRS. EYLER STILL FREE.

HAS NOT BEEN ARRESTED OWING TO HER SICKNESS.

Justice Mills, Who Issued the Warrant, Says That There Will be no Private Hearing if She is Well Enough to go to Court.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Aug. 25—Mrs. Eyler, principal of the Girls' Industrial School, has not been arrested on the warrant charging her with cruelty, and there is no explanation of the delay, for which the authorities here are much criticised on the ground that the constable and W. J. Crossley, prosecutor of the pleas, have not ascertained her actual condition. Dr. Witte, who gave the protecting certificate for Mrs. Eyler, is warmly in sympathy with her. Justice of the Peace Mills was asked to give a private hearing, and told that if he would consent Mrs. Eyler would at once enter her appearance, but the Justice says she must appear in public unless he be convinced thet she is too ill to answer the summons of his court.

A. W. Bishop, of Paterson, who is prosecuting Mrs. Eyler on behalf of several organizations with which he is connected, wrote to Justice Mills that he would go to Trenton to testify as soon as a time was set for the hearing. He says he has received many letters praising his course and denouncing the Governor and Mrs. Eyler. He accused Dr. Witte, of the City Hospital, who refused to let him see Katie Barlow, as being in a scheme to defeat justice.

When the warrant was about to be served Constable Trayno found the woman had been arrested on the same charge last week and the case tried in Westfield. The Justice of the Peace discharged her for lack of evidence. The same complainant, who was an Italian, came before the Judge and made the complaint. The Judge threw the case out of court and gave the complainant some good talk about making his court a place fer petty spite work.

A grandson, 3 years old, saw the young girl with the poison. He did not notice her empty the contents of the package into the coffee, but saw her throw the parcel away. ROBERT DAVIS NOT OPPOSED TO BRYAN.

Hudson Leader Explains His Position on National Politics.

PLEDGED TO NO CANDIDATE.

THINKS THE NEBRASKAN IS THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

Refutes All the Alleged Previous Interviews With Him, and Says That Bryan is a Friend of the Masses as Against the Classes—Cautious Issue in Reference to Expansion.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, Aug. 25—What is declared to be an authorized statement of Leader Robert Davis's position as to the Democratic candidate for President in 1900 was issued yesterday. Mr. Davis is in the Catskills, but the statement was left behind when he departed and Joseph Noonan was instructed to give it out to the press. The result is the following statement from Mr. Noonan, which may be taken as containing the latest opinions of Mr. Davis.

"During the past two or three weeks certain newspapers have been pretty busy publishing and commenting on alleged interviews with Robert Davis in regard to the next Presidential campaign. In those interviews Mr. Davis is represented as declaring himself opposed to the renomination of Bryan. Newspapers that are hostile to Bryan have applauded these reported utterances; newspapers friendly ty Bryan have regretted them.

"It may tend to clear up the situation to say that these 'interviews,' as far as they attribute to Mr. Davis language indicative of any opposition on his part to Mr. Bryan's renomination, are pure fabrications. I am authorized by Mr. Davis to say that he has never uttered a word to any one against Bryan's candidacy, nor has he in any way said or done anything to justify any one in believing or supposing that he is opposed to Bryan. He has simply said nothing, so far, for or against any candidate. Mr. Davis's conspicuous and commanding position in New Jersey politics makes whatever he may say important. It will therefore gratify his friends to learn that the announcement that he has expressed himself as hostile to Bryan is entirely lacking any foundation of truth.

"Mr. Davis admires Bryan's honesty, ability and courage. These are the qualities which the people recognize in Bryan and because of which he is admired and beloved by them. He stands for the masses against the classes. He is the man of the people, the man of the hour. There is no other Democratic candidate in sight. The talk about VanWyck and Gorman is mere poetry. You might as well nominate Grandfather's Clock, with the Old Oaken Bucket for running mate.

"When the next Democratic National convention meets the Chicago platform will undoubtedly be reaffirmed and some intelligible and definite policy will be adopted respecting expansion. The wisdom or folly of the policy of expansion which seeks its development by the acquisition and retention of the Philippines should not be too precipitately determined. Able men in all parties differ respecting it. The problem is one that calls for the most careful and studious solution.

"To those Democrats who in 1896 bolted the regular ticket, we ought to extend a hearty greeting on their return to the true political fold. They are welcome, and perhaps their coming back merits the fatted calf. But they should evince a proper sense of their relation to the Democratic party. They are not its head; they need not feel offended if they are sometimes reminded that they are a part—and undoubtedly a valuable part—of its tail."

Not Much Work for the Steam Roller

The city steam roller is now and then used in different parts of the city, but there is no no great demand for it at present, as little macadamizing is being done.

He had been pastor of the Hilton church about two years. He is a graduate of the Drew Theological Seminary, of Madison, and a host of friends bade him farewell on the steamer.

The Union County Democratic executive committee has appointed Patrick Gunn and David Jeakens as the Democratic members of the Springfield Election Board.

IN AN UPROAR AT RENNES

Gen. Mercier Again Cornered by Labori and Refuses to Answer.

FIERCE SCENE IN COURT

Captain Dreyfus Makes an Explanation of How He Spent His Time at Military Manoeuvres.

Confession Dragged from Col. Maurel by M. Labori Creates the Greatest Excitement — The Alleged Bribery Letters Written By Dreyfus' Brother Have Been Distorted.

Rennes, Aug. 25.—The court-martial of Captain Alfred Dreyfus was resumed at the Lycee, with the reading of the deposition of M. Penot.

True to his statement that he would "have some more questions to put to General Mercier," M. Labori got Mercier again on the stand, and drove him to such a pass that it looked for a moment as though a personl encounter would take place between the man who convicted Dreyfus and the brilliant lawyer for the defense

The General was driven into a fury over questions relating to secret evidence.

At M. Labori's request a new witness, George Leloir, was called. Leloir said he knew the Bodsons at whose house Dreyfus, according to the testimony of a De Beaurepaire witness yesterday, plotted with a German officer. M. and Mme. Bodson were greatly astonished at the arrest of Dreyfus and said they thought him incapable of treason.

Leloir's testimony was a flat contradiction of De Breine's evidence yesterday.

Colonel Maurel, who was president of the court-martial which convicted Dreyfus in 1894, next testified.

Maurel said he was sure then, as he is now, that Dreyfus was guilty.

Then the witness made a statement that stirred the benchful of witnesses for the prosecution and soon brought General Mercier to his feet, to fall for the second time into the hands of Labori.

Maurel said he had only seen one of the documents of the secret dossier.

"Which one?" demanded Labori.

Witness pleaded secrecy, and mentioned General Mercier as probably knowing more about the matter than he did.

Labori seized the chance to recall General Mercier. Mercier took the stand, and a splendid verbal duel followed between the General and the lawyer.

Labori now began to question Mercier concerning his past in bringing secret evidence before the first court-martial without the knowledge of the accused.

General Mercier began to answer frankly and pleasantly at first, but later he lost his temper as Labori grew more impassioned and relentless.

The General, however, troubled his mind might be, seldom departed from the callous demeanor characteristic of him.

The lawyer made a strong point on the part Esterhazy played. Mercier said he did not know Esterhazy and only saw him once at the Zola trial.

"That is very interesting," exclaimed M. Labori. "But surely Gen. Mercier was present at the Esterhazy trial?"

The General replied that he was not there, and that he knew nothing about the evidence in the Esterhazy prosecution.

"What!" cried Labori; "Gen. Mercier, who was the chief accuser of Dreyfus, did not even follow the proceedings in the Esterhazy trial?"

A loud murmur of surprise and indignant comment came from the audience, but Col. Jouaust immediately suppressed it.

Counsel then brought Gen. Mercier to the assertion that thirty-five million francs were spent by the defenders of Dreyfus, and asked the General to say how he knew this, who spent it, and other questions which the General was unable to answer.

A question as to how the bordereau arrived at the office of the General Staff, its date, etc., was then introduced, which led to a strange scene for a court of law.

Then M. Labori proceeded to take up the Panizzardi despatch and to bring out the contradictory translations of it and the falseness of the final version.

After hearing Gen. Mercier and Gen. Chamoin on the subject Col. Jouaust declared the court would rule out the evidence.

The examination of Gen. Mercier having been concluded Col. Jouaust asked Dreyfus if he had anything to say, and the prisoner in a calm voice replied to Mercier's statement that he (Dreyfus) could have obtained the information about the artillery, promised in the Bordereau, while staying at Bourges, where artillery trials were being held.

Dreyfus entered into an explanation as to how he spent his time, showing that he did not inform himself about the trials of the new gun brake. He pointed out that the Captain shook him by the hand when he returned to the prison, which is at variance with what Gen. Risbourg recounted.

"Moreover," cried Dreyfus, "when a frightful charge has been hanging over a man's head for five years people ought not to talk of convictions, but should bring proofs. Otherwise I cease to understand the matter."

This indignant protest caused a deep sensation in court.

A number of other witnesses were heard, but their testimony was uninteresting and the court adjourned early.

MATCHES HAVE ADVANCED.

Another Raise in Price to Go Into Effect in September.

Chicago, Aug. 25.—The "Tribune" says: "Matches have advanced in price from 20 to 25 per cent. within the last sixty days, and dealers say that there is reason to expect, under present conditions, another advance before the end of September. During June and earlier in the year the independent match manufacturers were at war with the Diamond Match Company and prices were demoralized, the cheaper grades selling as low as sixty-three cents a gross. The war on prices, however, was brought to a sudden termination by the Diamond Match Company's buying several independent companies and closing them. The Continental, bought from Edwin Gould, was the first to be absorbed.

"The Continental sent out a price list, Aug. 1, which advanced the 63-cent grade to $1.15 and the 68-cent grade to $1.20 a gross. The Improved Match Company has also furnished the trade with new quotations ,which show an advance all along the line of from 10 to 20 per cent."

After Connecticut Trolleys.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 25.—Need for the special session of the Legislature to pass new trolley laws for the protection of the public of Connecticut was removed by the prompt action of the Railroad Commissioners of the state. They have sent an order to every street and steam railroad in the state demanding that it promptly furnish to the Commissioners an explicit statement of the number of bridges, their height, the guard rails used and the speed maintained in going over them. The Commissioners will enforce such regulations relative to the dangers from trolley accidents mentioned in the report of the Coroner's jury on the Stratford accident that the idea of a special legislative session will probably be abandoned.

Maine's Civic League Aroused.

Waterville, Me., Aug. 25.—Several members of the Maine League in this city will attempt to have the Maine Central Railroad indicted for illegal transporting of liquors. That action is to be part of a vigorous campaign which the league intends to wage against saloon-keepers.

League members were recently notified that a carload of ale was being unloaded in the Maine Central freight yard. They found the report to be true, and started at once for officers and a warrant. The league has asked the mayor and city marshal to begin at once the work of closing saloons in the city. Those officials have the matter under advisement and are to give an answer in a few days.

Threw Gold to the Crowd.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 25.—The police are busy trying to solve the mystery of the golden fist, while a score of boys and men are bathing themselves in arnica. For three hours a person whose identity and location could not be learned threw money into the street in front of Young's Hotel on Court square. Nickels, quarters and even ten dollar gold pieces fell at frequent intervals. Several hundred men and boys fought fiercely for the money, and the police were unable to drive them away. More than $100 was picked up by the crowd.

Naptha Explosion Causes Panic.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 25.—An explosion of naphtha in the cellar of the hat factory of Charles F. Lehmann, at No. 773 Herkimer street, resulted in a general panic, during which two employes jumped from a third story window and the foreman of an engine company was badly hurt. Two men were severely burned and a woman, who jumped, broke both legs and received internal injuries from which she will probably die.

Animals Imported At Havana.

Total number of animals imported for the month, 23,958. The ports in the United States from which animals were imported, were Galveston, Miami, Mobile, New Orleans, Pensacola and Tampa.

Italian Sympathy For Dreyfus.

Paris, Aug. 25.—The "Figaro" publishes a letter written by Signor Ressman, late Italian Ambassador to France, to the Marquis Visconti-Venosta, Italian Foreign Minister, in which he says: "I feel that death is approaching, but that doesn't frighten me. I have only one regret, that of dying without seeing the innocence of the unfortunate Dreyfus recognized."

Much Wheat Unmarketable.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 25.—The "Oregonian" says that while reports of damage to the wheat crop have been exaggerated, it is now estimated that fully 25 per cent. of the wheat of the Williamette Valley has been rendered unmarketable by the wet weather. Reliable reports indicate that the damage in the Columbia Basin is also very heavy.

When we assert that our establishment is the most perfect of its kind in this part of the country. Our machinery is all of the most practical and newest invention. Over a hundred skilled hands are busy to carefully handle the laundry entrusted to us.

Not we, ourselves, but the legions of our customers who received full satisfaction during the many past years, give us full credit. And this our patrons who, before coming to us, tried the different establishments without getting satisfaction, say that the most reliable establishment is

THE SITUATION IS CRITICAL.

Lord Salisbury in Conference With the Queen Over Transvaal Crisis.

TROOPS ON TRANSPORTS

Great Britain Increases Her Efforts to Rush Armed Forces to South Africa With Haste.

Troops Sail From England and the Manchester Regiment Leaves Gibraltar—Feeling Near the Border is Very Bitter—Disloyal Natal Dutch Armed With Mausers.

London, Aug. 25.—The Marquis of Salisbury spent yesterday afternoon and evening with Queen Victoria at Osborne. It is believed the grave situation of affairs in the Transvaal was partly responsible for the premier's visit to her majesty.

The Johannesburg correspondent of the "Times" says:

"Disquieting reports have been received here from Natal. It is said that a train from Johannesburg was fired on in Transvaal territory. The feeling near the border is bitter, and the disloyal Natal Dutch are armed with Mausers."

The Manchester regiment numbering 1,000 men, has sailed for Cape Town, and the British steamship Arundel, has sailed for the same port from Southampton, with thirty officers and 770 men.

It is admitted on all sides that the Transvaal situation has reached a stage where hostilities are likely to be declared at any moment, and the fact that Lord Salisbury has had a long conference with the Queen on the South African complications, is a further indication that the critical point is close at hand. Important announcements are looked for with eagerness.

To-day it is considered that the outlook for a clash of arms is more threatening than at any time since the discussion of the differences commenced.

Must Reduce Armaments.

Cape Town, Aug. 25.—The Delagoa Bay incident coupled with the recent transit of a large amount of ammunition, has directed the attention of the British officials to the immense accumulation of munitions of war in the South African republics, especially in the Transvaal.

The Outlanders being debarred from carrying arms, the supply of weapons, as shown in returns from Lourenzo Mraquez (Delagoa Bay) for three years, is greatly in excess of the burgher's requirements, and consequently there is a growing feeling among the British community in South Africa that no settlement of the existing crisis will insure lasting peace unless it includes a provision for the reduction of armaments.

Threw a Letter to the Queen.

London, Aug. 25.—There was considerable alarm caused at Osborne, Isle of Wight, by a man throwing a letter into Queen Victoria's carriage as she was driving. A report was spread to the effect that the letter contained an explosive, but that was false. The police arrested the man quickly. His letter was only an appeal to her majesty to obtain for him a new trial of a civil suit which he lost recently.

The prisoner was found to be a German, who was not aware that his action was against the law. As it was evident that he had no intention to do any harm, he was released.

The Queen was surprised when the letter fell into her lap, but she betrayed no alarm.

Germans to Fight For Boers.

Johannesburg, Aug. 25.—At a meeting here of 200 Germans a committee was appointed to express to the government the willingness of the Germans to volunteer for service in case of war, but requested that they be enrolled in a separate corps on account of the hardships endured by the Germans in the Magato campaign.

Farmer Nearly Stung to Death.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 25.—Peter Inslip, a farm hand in the employ of William Honsif, of Franklin, lies in a serious condition as a result of an encounter with yellow jackets. He was removing a pile of brushwood from a path across a lot when his foot slipped, and as he fell his hand crushed their nest. They stung him to unconsciousness.

Cramps May Have a Strike.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 25.—The employes at Cramps' Ship-Building Yards have decided to present to the firm a remonstrance against the recent discharges in various departments. The remonstrance will be presented to the company on Monday, and if a satisfactory reply is not received immediately a strike will follow on Tuesday.

Famine and Smallpox in Africa.

Mombasa, East Coast of Africa, Aug. 25.—The ravages caused here by famine and smallpox have become so appalling that it has been decided to appeal to the Lord Mayor of London, Sir John Voce Moore, to open a Mansion house fund for the relief of the stricken subjects in East Africa.

REPUBLICANS NAME TICKET

Final Result of Pennsylvania State Convention at Harrisburg.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 25.—The following ticket was nominated by the Republican State Convention:

Supreme Court Judge—J. Hay Brown of Lancaster.

Superior Court Judge—Josiah R. Adams of Philadelphia.

State Treasurer—Lieutenant Colonel James E. Barnett of the Tenth Pennsylvania regiment.

United States Senator Penrose was chairman. The only discordant note in the convention was sounded by Senator Flinn of Pittsburg, chairman of the anti-Quay organization in the last Legislature. Mr. Flinn opposed the plank in the platform indorsing the appointment of United States Senator Quay by Governor Stone. A roll call was taken on the adoption of the platform as a whole, and it was adopted by a majority of 192 to 40. The anti-Quay delegates generally voted against the adoption of the platform and the nomination of Mr. Adams.

The platform as adopted endorses the administration of President McKinley; re-affirms the party principles declared in the National platform by the St. Louis convention; and commend the good judgment of the Republicans of Pennsylvania in their selection of representatives in both branches of the National Congress.

Charged With Murder.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Albert J. Cothras and his wife, Agnes Cothras, are under arrest at Cherry Creek, a town south of Dunkirk, upon the charge of murdering their 3-months-old son. A coroner's jury is investigating. Physicians decided that the child's death had been caused by a fracture of the skull produced by a blow from a blunt instrument.

Cothras is an intelligent and educated Pole. He speaks several languages and has often acted as interpreter at the County Court. He is of a quarrelsome disposition. He formerly lived in Dunkirk, where he was arrested for assault and battery and was sent to jail. His wife entered complaint against him for non-support.

The week before the baby's death, for which he is now under arrest, he knocked his wife down and left her in an unconscious state, from which she did not revive for several hours. After notifying a neighbor of the death of the child, Cothras and his wife, with three older children, left and went to Forestville and did not return until night.

Air to Furnish Perpetual Motion.

Anderson, Ind., Aug. 25.—The perpetual motion fellow is working with compressed air now. Charles Wirt, of this place, claims he has made an engine that compresses its own air and applies it to machinery at the same time. He announces that when once started the engine can be stopped only by opening the valves and releasing the air in the reservoir. He is looking for backers.

Jules Guerin Closely Watched.

Paris, Aug. 25—M. Guerin and his fellow anti Semites were very uneasy at the presence of firemen on the roof of their barricaded house throughout the night. Detectives also occupied the roofs of adjoining buildings to prevent the throwing of provisions to the besieged men. A force of 350 infantry and police is on duty about the house at night, and 45 during the day.

The Genesee Gets the Cup.

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 25.—The American yacht Genesee won the Canada Cup by beating the Canadian yacht Beaver for the third consecutive time. The course sailed was triangular, seven miles to each leg. The wind was moderate. The American boat took the lead soon after the start and held it throughout the race, finishing several minutes ahead of the Beaver.

Exiled From Chicago Stores.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 25.—A leader in fashionable society has been ordered by police court to keep away from the big department stores downtown. That is the condition on which she is out of jail. She is Mrs. Annie Meyers, who was a member of the Women's Board of Managers of the World's Fair. She was found guilty of shoplifting and fined $50.

Hotel Burned at Buzzard's Bay.

Buzzard's Bay, Mass., Aug. 25.—The Manomet House here was destroyed by fire. The guests had difficulty in escaping from the burning building and were obliged in many cases to crawl on their hands and knees through corridors filled with flames and smoke to a place of safety. Very little of the effects of the hotel or of the guests was saved.

Murderer Not Yet Captured.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 25.—The negro who shot and killed William Lawler, white, an engineer employed at the new tunnel at Willock Station on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, has not been captured. The murderer is supposed to be Jesse Reed, of whom the county authorities and the police of Wheeling, Pittsburg, Connellsville and other towns have a good description.

Tramps Make Hard Fight.

Grinnell, Iowa, Aug. 25.—Five hundred men are under arms ten miles south of this place in the timber of the Iowa River Valley surrounding two unknown tramps, who killed the two brakemen at Marshalltown. The murderers appear to have an unlimited supply of shells and each has three large revolvers.

Found a Bomb Under Doorstep.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 25.—Under the doorstep of Dr. S. C. Gilbert's Wall street residence the police have found a package of explosives made up in the shape of a crude bomb. Dr. Gilbert told the police he supposed the bomb had been placed there because he testified against a girl who had been accused of thieving.

The Plague in China.

Tien-Tsin, China, Aug. 25.—The bubonic plague has appeared at New-Chwang. The outbreak is not regarded as serious, but it is feared the disease may spread to Tien-Tsin and other places in North China.

TEETH.

If you have any to be extracted remember you will not be hurt in the slightest. My local anaesthetic is the best that can be obtained and is not known to the other dentists in this city. Gas strictly fresh administered by an expert if you want that. If you need artificial teeth you may rest assured that the greatest care will be exercised in selecting shape and color to harmonize with the face, also to restore the features to their natural expression and fullness. The private secretary to a syndicate of Cleveland, Ohio, capitalists, found himself in an alarming state of health, over-work having brought on nervous prostration, dyspepsia, insomnia and kindred ailments. "I concluded," he says, "that either I must get relief by medical treatment, or relief from my work. I purchased a 50-cent box of Ripans Tabules and beneficial results were felt almost instantaneously Now, I feel quite my old self again, having by nearly using the second box been entirely freed of the sleepless nights, pain in the back, sluggish liver and circulation and the dyspepsia.'

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

DEATH OF JUDGE HILTON.

After a Ligering Illness He Passes Away at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Former Judge Henry Hilton died here late yesterday afternoon, after an illness of more than a week. Hopes that he would recover were abandoned by his physicians, and he sank during the day, passing away about six o'clock.

He really became ill about a year ago, though the trouble was kept a secret by his family until last March. Then it was learned that on his return from Saratoga in the preceding October he had taken to his bed and that he had grown steadily worse.

After passing trough several serious spells of illness he was brought to this city again this summer, and it was hoped he would regain his strength. He was better for a time, but began to fail again.

His health became decidedly worse about a week ago, and his family prepared for his death, which came last evening.

The Presidential Party.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 25.—The members of the Presidential party spent the last day except one of their stay at Hotel Champlain in making preparations for their departure. Tonight at 6 o'clock the party will leave here for Long Branch, where the members will spend Friday and Saturday as the guests of Vice President and Mrs. Hobart. The prty will consist of President and Mrs. McKinley, Vice resident and Mrs. Hobart, Garret A. Hobart, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Rixey and two clerks.

Many Plunge to Death.

Santiago, de Cuba, Aug. 25.—A railway accident occurred here. An entire passenger train fell into the River Mapocha, which runs through the city, and many lives were lost. Although the tremendous storms that have been raging for a fortnight throughout Chili continue, there has been some abatement. Advices from various points indicate widespread distress and misery. Valparaiso and other cities have suffered severely.

Claims His Wife Robbed Him.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 25.—Annie A. Winter, who her husband, Bernard Winter, claims is an adventuress with a career in Europe, South Africa and this country, and who, it is alleged, decamped from Cape Town two years ago with $15,000 of Winter's money, has been arrested here. Winter had traced her through England and Russia, and finally located her living here wtih a man named Julius Pearistine, who was arrested with her.

Baby Murder Still a Mystery.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 25.—Not a single clue has been found to indicate who is the murderer of little Johnnie Wring, who was found dying in a wooded hollow off Chestnut street. Practically all the detectives in the city, asisted by many reporters, have been working ceaselessly on the case for twenty-four hours, yet not one ray of light has been shed upon the mystery.

A New Feud in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 25.—Another fued has broken loose in Leslie County. Ablijah Napier was instantly killed, having been shot through the heart by "Bije" Morgan. Both men had a number of friends and relatives upon the ground and immediately after the killing it seemed that a fight would follow. Cautious and determined work on the part of the officers prevented more bloodshed.

Property Will Go to Yale.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 25.—The will of ex-Provost of the University of Pennsylvania Charles J. Stille, just admitted to probate, leaves his estate, valued at about $158,470, to his widow during her life, and after her death to Yale University, Gloria Dei Church and the Historical Church of Pennsylvania. The legacy to Yale is to be devoted to history and political science.

Idaho Union Miners Submit.

Wallace, Ida., Aug. 25.—The union miners have finally submitted to the permit system inaugurated by the state authorities shortly after martial law was declared in the Coeur d'Alene district. All men who desire to work in the mines are required to secure a permit from the Sheriff. Dozens of union men are applying daily for permits, but in numerous instances are denied.

Divorce in Eleven Minutes.

Ogden, Utah, Aug. 25.—Here is Utah's rapid transit divorce record: Attorney for Mrs. Rose Silverstein appeared at 4.30 P. M. with complaint; at 4.35 the clerk took the papers to Judge Rolapp's chambers; at 4.40 attorney for plaintiff produced a typewritten decree; at 4.41 it was signed and recorded. In just eleven minutes the divorce was granted.

H. Walter Webb Seriously Ill.

Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 25.—News has reached here that H. Walter Webb, vice president of the New York Central Railroad and a brother of Dr. W. Seward Webb, is critically ill at H. McK. Twombley's camp, on Upper Stregis Lake. The dispatch states that M. Webb is suffering from a complication of diseases, and the gravest fears are entertained for his recovery.

New Operating Table.

The Electrician describes an electrically warmed operating table, in which incandescent lamps supply the heat. The body of the table has the form of an air chamber and within it are six or eight incandescent lamps. These lamps soon raise the temperature to the proper point, when half of them may be switched off, the remainder being entirely adequate to maintain the proper warmth.

Comforting.

An American called upon to return thanks for the distinguished stranger at a public dinner in England said: "This is quite unexpected; in fact, when I came into this room I felt much like Daniel in the lion's den. When Daniel got into that place and looked around, he thought to himself, 'Whoever's got to do the after-dinner speaking, it won't be me!'"

IS UNDER AMERICAN RULE

Sultan of Jolo Archipelago Will Hereafter Fly the Stars and Stripes.

GEN. BATES SUCCESSFUL

After Having Properly Concluded a Treaty He Returns to Manila and Says He is Pleased.

Sultan Acknowledges Soverignty of the United States—Terms of the Agreement—Negotiations Required Great Patience—Everything Reasonable to Be Conceded.

Manila, Aug. 25.—Gen. John C. Bates has returned here from the Jolo [or Sulu] islands whither he went to treat with the Sultan for the recognition of American soverignty and the establishment of American Government. Gen. Bates expresses himself as highly satisfied with the result of his mission and is convinced that the United States will obtain the full measure of their rights.

He says that his negotiations with the Moros required the greatest patience, the Moros wishing to exclude Americans from a portion of the territory. Now everything reasonable will be conceded to the Americans. Gen. Bates considers that the $10,000 in Mexican money which he took with him has been judiciously expended.

The agreement or semi-treaty, which the Sultan and all of his dattos signed, not including Zamboanza, obligates their maintenance of peace, and limits the jurisdiction of the Sultan to crime or disorders committed by Moros, in return for or against Moros. The Sultan collects no revenue. The matter of trade relations was not touched, pending a possible adjustment of the Spanish treaty with England and Germany.

The total sum of the salaries of the Sultan's dattos, which formerly equalled the pay of an American Major, has been raised to an amount equalling a Colonel's salary.

The text of the agreement as signed, is as follows:

American sovereignty over Moros shall be recognized and there shall be no persecution against religion.

The United States shall occupy and control such parts of the archipelago as public interest demands.

Any person can purchase land with the sultan's consent.

The introduction of firearms shall be prohibited.

Piracy shall be suppressed.

The American courts shall have jurisdiction except between the Moros.

The Americans shall protect the Moros against foreign imposition and the sultan's subsidy as paid formerly by Spain shall be continued.

The sultan and several chiefs signed the agreement.

The transport Newport has arrived at Manila. Private Elmer Raymond, Company E, Nineteenth Infantry, died on board Aug. 7.

Californians Royally Welcomed.

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—The United States transport Sherman, bearing the First California Regiment of Volunteers, has arrived here. No one living anywhere within the boundaries of San Francisco was long in ignorance of the arrival of the transport. The steam whistles shrieked, sirens screamed, bells rang and the streets were soon filled with cheering throngs as soon as the big transport was sighted. The Sherman anchored a mile beyond the heads, but came in a few hours later.

The "Call" scored a triumph in wireless telegraphy in connection with the Sherman's arrival. Receiving stations were established at the Cliff House and on the lightship nine miles out, and when the news came that the Sherman was in sight is was soon followed by the cheering intelligence, "All well on board; no deaths during the voyage."

The premature arrival of the Sherman disarranged plans for the reception of the regiment, but an imposing naval pageant was held as the transport sailed in through the Golden Gate.

The Yaqui Insurrection.

City of Mexico, Aug. 25.—At the War Department very little attention is attracted by the rising of the Yaqui Indians in Sonora, which has been much exaggerated in importance in the newspapers outside the republic. General Torres has about 12,000 men under his command, which is considered ample force for the work in hand. It is not thought the Yaquis will risk another regular engagement after their drubbings at Bacum and Vicam. They have taken to the mountains, and guerrilla bands are to be organized to follow them. No political significance attaches to the uprising.

Maniac Crushed His Skull.

Patchogue, L. I., Aug. 25.—It has developed that John Guilfoyle, an inmate of the insane asylum at Central Islip, was killed by Jacob Stagg, a fellow inmate. The asylum authorities have reported the case as an "accident." Guilfoyle and Stagg were "grubbing roots" in a field together. Guilfoyle stopped to take a nap under a tree. Stagg suddenly struck Guilfoyle with his "grub stick," crushing his skull and killing him instantly. Stagg had been thought harmless.

Another Riot in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 25.—A Big Consolidated motorman and conductor were threatened with violence by an angry mob on Broadway. The police had to charge the crowd repeatedly to save them. The Broadway car was almost downtown when, running at a rapid rate, it struck a spring wagon, throwing the four occupants onto the pavement, injuring them badly.

Hearst Mines to Be Sold.

Deadwood, S. D., Aug. 25.—The Hearst interest in the Homestead mine, valued at $3,300,000, is to be sold in London next month. It is rumored that the same interest in other mines about Deadwood will be sold.

COMING EVENTS.

August 27—Rev. Thomas Houston will again speak and sing at the Y. M. C. A. men's rally at 4:15 p. m.

It Was Contemplated.

A Philadelphia dispatch says:

"The story that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company intends establishing a "cut off" near Bound Brook, N. J., shortening its route to New York, was denied today by David G. Baird, assistant secretary of the company. Mr. Baird said: 'The story is news to me, and you may put it down that there is nothing in it. I am pretty well acquainted with the road, and know of no such plan, and so far as that particular spot is concerned the scheme is not practicable.'"

The above refers, of course, to the story printed in The Daily Press Wednesday, in which it was stated that the Lehigh officials were contemplating the building of a "cut off" line from Bound Brook to Jersey City, reducing the distance between the two points nine miles and opening up an entirely new territory to the Lehigh.

Notwithstanding the denial of Mr. Baird The Daily Press has it on the best of authority that the Lehigh people have contemplated the project and that they have even gone so far as to send surveyors over the proposed line on a prospecting trip. The Daily Press did not in the published story say that it was assured that the branch would be built, but that it was contemplated. And so it was.

Of the $150,000 appropriated by New York city for the Dewey welcome only $78,000 will be used for features that the public can participate in and enjoy. The remainder will be expended in elaborate and exclusive details, to which only the chosen few will be elect. It is doubtful if the open-hearted manner of Admiral Dewey will approve of such a course. The genuineness of his welcome will be in thorough interest displayed by the general public, and in view of this but a small proportion of the money appropriated for his reception should be expended in affairs to which the general public is to be barred.

Dover, somewhat different from Plainfield, has made an actual offer to the water supply company of that city for its plant in order to bring the enterprise under municipal control. The Common Council has passed a resolution offering the company $40,000 for its plant, which is to include all the property, water rights and other assets, and to be free of all encumberahces. If the offer is accepted within thirty days the matter will be submitted to a vote of the citizens of the town for either ratification or rejection.

Evidently the Somerville Unionist-Gazette considers a second term for Assemblyman Cooper a foregone conclusion, as witness the following:

Assemblyman Cooper was in town Tuesday. He looks equal to any physical exertion and seems to be ready for the fall campaign, when he will undoubtedly be a candidate for re-election. Mr. Cooper attends strictly to business when at home and his head is not the least bit turned by his success thus far in the political arena. Somerset needs no better representative in the Assembly than E. E. Cooper.

It is stated that Elston M. French is out of the race for the Senatorial nomination.—Bound Brook Record.

Mr. French is still in it.

THEATRICAL.

The Kennedy Players in their presentation of the sensational play "At the Mercy of Crooks" scored a decided hit at the theatre last night. It is the style of play that appeals most forcibly to the modern theatre goers dealing with life among the slums of New York, giving opportunities for sensational climaxes and humorous incidents in the life of New York tougher elements. The company were seen to the best possible advantage. Miss Kennedy, as the heroine, gave a charming portrayal of the maiden who walks unsullied through scenes of degradation and crime. Mr. Kennedy acted the hero in his usual happy manner. Mr. Butless villian was a well conceived piece of acting, Mr. Morrison as the Jew, Mr. McClung as Jerry, the tough, were seen to advantage while Miss Hassan as Kittie, a tough, but honest Bowery girl scored a big hit. Tonight the company appears in the celebrated society comedy "The Widow and the Dude," Saturday the company presents the immortal play, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," a play that has been the redemption of millions addicted to the curse of drink.

An operatic extravaganza of merit and novelty entitled "In Greater New York" will be presented at Music Hall next Monday night. It was produced at Hammerstein's famous Olympia Theatre, New York, the acknowledged home of spectacular production. Its popularity is evidenced by the fact that it had a run of 102 consecutive nights, before revision or alteration, and then taken "on the road" with a like success. It is said to be one of the most realistic and vivid pictures of the fads and follies of Greater New York life ever attempted on the stage, and enlists the services of over forty people, including the famous Comedian Mark Murphy with other vaudeville stars, augmented by a great singing and attractive chorus.

Israel Zanwill, the noted Hebrew writer, critic and wit, who is now in this country to aid James A. Herne in staging his new Jewish play, "Children of the Ghetto," founded on his brilliant novel of the same title, was born in London of poor Jewish parents in 1864. His early childhood was passed mainly in Plymouth and in Bristol, where he attended the red-Cross Street Middle Class School, reaching the highest class but one before his parents returned to London, in his ninth year. The boy was placed in the Jews' Free School, an immense institution in Spitalfields, where in due course he became head boy, thrice carrying off the scholarship and medals founded to commemorate the admission of Jews into Parliament.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Wilbert B. F. P. A. Randolph, whose tonsorial parlors are located on Park avenue, just above Second street, is favored above most of his fellow artists. Not only is his bootblack and general assistant, John Step, an expert in that line, but he is a talented vocalist as well. John has a thorough acquaintance with all the popular airs and the customers in the shop are frequently entertained with impromptu solos of a very enjoyable order Randolph can hum a banjo accompaniment to the songs. Thus are many hours, otherwise dull and uneventful, whiled away pleasantly and to the edification of those who are privileged to listen.

A story is being told of a country doctor who was going his rounds one morning with a gun on his shoulder. He was a keen sportsman, and was looking forward to polishing off a little game when his professional duties were over. A friend meeting him, and seeing him with the gun, exclaimed, "Where are you going, doctor, so early in the day, with that deadly weapon on your should?" "I'm hurrying off to see a patient," he replied. "Well," said his friend, "I see you are determined not to miss him."

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at L. W. WOMEN OF SOCIETY.

CHARMING PERSONALITY OF SOME OF THOSE OF THE SOUTH.

An Amusing Incident That Happened to a Lady at a Railroad Station — She Took Charge of a Fruit Stand an Sold All Out.

Southern society women often unite in their charming personality an odd mixture of the stately manners befitting the traditions of their race, with an occasional freedom from conventionality, which would be impossible to our Northern social leaders, who generally in every-day life are far less formal in their ideas.

A rather amusing incident, which illustrates this decidedly attractive quality, happened not long ago at the railway station in B——. Mrs. X., the wife of a prominent Southern statesman and millionaire, who is herself famous in both continents for her beauty and charm of manner, was about to start North in her husband's private car with a large party of invited guests.

Passing through the station she was attracted by a tempting array of fruit for sale, piled on the counter of a booth, inside of which an old woman presided. She stopped and bought liberally, but found on reckoning up her purchase that she had nothing but a ten-dollar bill, which the crone was unable to change.

"Can't you get it changed somewhere?" asked Mrs. X. "Yes," said the fruit vender anxiously, "but I cannot leave my shop."

"Oh, that will be all right," exclaimed the great lady. "I will take care of it until you come back. Only tell me your prices; how much is this, and that and that?" she continued, pointing to the different articles, which, besides the fruit in season, included cigars, cigarettes and a variety of other small wares. After receiving the information Mrs. X. lifted the entrance through the counter, and, laughingly pushing the old woman out of her booth, took her place, and with great composure began praising up the goods for sale to her friends.

Several of the men entered into the humor of the situation and began buying cigars and candy. This started the crowd, which rapidly collected, whereupon, nothing daunted, the beautiful Mrs. X. continued the sale, audaciously raising her prices as the demand increased, and praising the quality of her merchandise

"Look at this peach," she said smilingly, to a rich old planter of her acquaintance. "One side is perfect, but because there is a slight imperfection on the other, you can have it for 25 cents. These oranges are perfectly fine," she continued to another victim. "I hope you will give me 10 cents apiece for them," and so on. Strangers, friends and acquaintances, all were cajoled and flattered into buying.

The old woman returned, but wisely refrained from claiming her place, and remined a delighted spectator of the scene. In ten minutes Mrs. X. had disposed of nearly all the fruit and small wares, and the tin money box was full of coins and bills. Then the beauty paid her own account to the happy merchant from the change of her bill, and amid the thanks and benediction of the latter, proceeded to her car.

"I never saw anything better done," said one of the spectators afterward. "And with her it was only the spontaneous, kindly act of a sympthetic woman."

Lillian Russell On Beauty.

Lillian Russell gives her idea of how women can be made beautiful. "I will say that I have seen some very pretty women with not a regular feature. I have seen other women who are extremely ugly; yet whose features were as regular as those of Helen of Troy. If Paris were here to-day with the apple he would award it to the woman, not with correct features, but who had a good complexion, whose teeth were shaded by those mystic veils which record and hide their mystic feelings, whose hair was glossy and beautiful, whose neck was shapely and graceful, whose ease was that of a queen. These can all be obtained, but it is unnecessary to add that they are never born with a person—they must be acquired. Of course, all will admit, if 100 girls were to grow up to womanhood all with the same care, some would turn out pretty and some would be ugly. That is natural. But the beauty specialist will tell you the ugly girls could have been made as attractive as the pretty ones."

"Johnnie, you talk too much."

"See here, dad, am I to blame for your marrying into a talkative family?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HAVE WOMEN HUMOR?

Junius Henri Browne Makes Characteristic Answer to the Question.

Although the Americans as a people are noted for their keen sense of humor, the women of the nation have been declared, in common with women generally, to be destitute of it.

It has been for many generations a pet opinion of men, especially of the critical class, that humor belongs to physiology; that it depends entirely on organs and their functions. In other words, that a woman, however intellectual and cultured, whatever advantages she may have enjoyed, cannot be humorous—not even an American woman, who is apt to have acute observation, quickness of mind, playfulness of fancy, geniality of feeling, kindness of heart, each and all of which enter into the subtle thing called humor.

The body of self constituted critics, as stubborn as they are incompetent, having once pronounced against woman, still maintain their position and would no doubt if they should meet scores of women

THE INCARNATION OF HUMOR.

No one can be more prejudiced, more intolerant, than a man who has misjudged on instinct all womankind.

Sweeping generalizations are always foolish and never carry weight. "A woman never has and never can have humor" is a most conspicuous example of this kind of assertion.

The man who maintains it is inclined, when confronted seriously, to take refuge in quibbles, definitions, technicalities, in order to conceal his defeat. He will deny that anything quoted as coming from woman's tongue or pen is really humor, to which he assigns a peculiar, strained, intangible meaning.

We all know what humor is, can tell it when we read or hear it, are not to be deceived or hoodwinked by any sort of sham or sophistry. A woman who is humorous, orally or graphically, is very much the same as a man who is humorous. Any assumption that humor in one sex is altogether different from humor in the other is transparently absurd, loudly and earnestly as may make the claim. There may be, there probably is, a certain difference at times between man's humor and woman's. Hers is often finer, sweeter, more genial, less coarse, less bitter, as is natural and characteristic, but that one is humor and the other is not is utterly preposterous.

A great many women are lacking in humor, have not a particle; a great many men are too. But who has ever denied that man is incapable of humor?

It may be granted that a large number of women are too intense, too personal, too earnest, too narrow, too serious, to give encouragement to humor to yield scope for it. But even such disposition does not deprive them of humor for all time. A complete change of circumstances, a new education, learning to look at things from a fresh point of view, might qualify them for humor.

While humor is frequently, perhaps generally, inherent, it may be cultivated and not seldom is. Poets themselves, despite the old, familiar dictum, may be cultivated, though only those of a second class. Why, then, may not humorists be?

Humorists are far more common now than they were a century or so since, when life was harder, conditions more forbidding. They were much fewer in the early republic than at present.

FEMININE HUMORISTS WERE SO SCARCE

here then as to be unrecognized as a class and were therefore wholly unrecognized.

The purblind critics may have deduced their theory from that period. But they hold the same ground at the close of the century. How can they, having eyes to read and ears to hear?

Feminine humorists are everywhere today—in the smallest village, in every company. In novels, in essays, in stories, in newspapers, which and for which women write so commonly, humor abounds, and small discrimination is needed to perceive that a good deal of it is woman's humor.

Woman's conversation nowadays is full of humor, fuller often than man's. She is often a closer observer than he; slight differences in persons, mere trifles, impress her more; her sense of the incongruous is keener than his, and acuteness of any sort augments and stimulates humor.

A delicate vein of humor runs through most

CLEVER WOMEN'S LETTERS.

It is far more apparent, more marked, than in educated men's social private letters, from which business and routine matters are excluded.

As woman has, as universally admitted, made such rapid strides in a generation or two, gained so largely on man, may she not have surpassed him in humor, which was once conceded to him alone? No man of 30 would, I should think, gallantry apart, believe that man had any advantage over woman in humor particularly of the pure, spontaneous kind. His opinion would be more likely to favor woman, who in the present day shows more humor than he does in anything like ordinary intercourse.

It will be observed, I opine, that most of those who share the ancient prejudice about woman and her want of humor are distinctly fossiliferous.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

MRS. ANSON JONES.

She Is the Widow of the Only President of Texas.

One of the remarkable women of Texas is Mrs. Anson Jones, widow of the President of the Republic of Texas from 1844 to 1845, when the Republic ceased to exist. Mrs. Jones was born in Arkansas, July 24, 1819. In 1840 she was married to Dr. Anson Jones, one of the foremost men of the State. Dr. Jones had just returned from his post as Minister to the United States to take his seat in the Senate of Texas, when he met her, and at the time of the marriage was on the road to the Presidency, to which he was elected in 1844, and he signed the instruments which added the broad domain of Texas to the Union. The President found in his wife a woman equal to her high position, and she was of much assistance to him as an adviser as well as mistress of his home. In 1857 Anson Jones was defeated for a seat in the United States Senate, and this undoubtedly hastened the beginning of her widowhood. President Jones dying early in the following year. Mrs. Jones lost one son and much of her property during the Civil War. The oldest son, S. E. Jones, returned unscathed, and is still with his mother, the staff of her declining years. A daughter, Mrs. R. G. Ashe, is also a resident of Houston.

In spite of her years Mrs. Jones is still active and in good health, and may often be seen in Houston, especially on the afternoons set apart for the meeting of her church association, in which she takes great interest.

The Engagement Ring.

Woman have gone on for ages past wearing their symbols of engagement and marriage, never asking why their fiances and husbands should move unmarked midst men and maidens. This is a state of things which calls aloud for alteration, and it is a consummation devoutly to be wished that men should start with the custom of wearing first the jeweled circlet and then the plain gold one—outward and visible signs of engagement and marriage. The girls say they are placed at a disadvantage, and from more than one point of view. For instance, how embarrassing for a young girl to be made acquainted at a dance with an apparently eligible and undoubtedly attractive youth, who, after the polite formalities, suggests a stroll through the conservatory in lieu of dancing a certain number. What more natural than the weaving of the romantic spell attendant upon moonlit contiguity of youth? What more natural than the anticipation of a companionable, not to say tender, acquaintance? And what more disappointing than the matter-of-fact announcement as the man bids the maiden adieu: "I would like to have you meet my fiancee."

No, the girls say there isn't a fair point about the existing conditions. They advocate the wearing of an engagement ring by the man, just as an engagement ring is worn by the woman. No one ever mistakes an engaged girl. Even without the ring, the air of conscious superiority, of condescending good humor, would stamp the young woman as mortgaged property. And with the assistance and addition of the ring there is absolutely no chance for error. And what is true of engagements, so the girls contend, is even more applicable after marriage. A married man, wearing no band of servitude—if we accept the guilty criminal and suspicion-arousing slapping of the letter pocket—is in imminent danger of being engaged in dangerous converse by womankind. And, by the same token, womankind is at times unwisely and unwittingly kind to the unlabeled married man. All tangling alliances and dangerous complications could be avoided by judicious use of the ring. The custom, once adopted by an accepted leader, would undoubtedly rebound to the credit everlasting of the pioneer. There is no reason whatever why men should not wear engagement rings, and every possible reason why they should. They cannot object on the score of not liking such a decoration; no man objects to wearing the badge of a particular office or a cross or medal won for some heroic act. Let men, therefore, when they have won it, wear love's badge with greater pride and gladness than any other.

Velvets Next Winter.

The fashion prophets predict a velvet season next winter. All the tips and suggestions from Paris promise a revival of this rich fabric. An effort was made to introduce it last winter, but its costliness left it within reach of only the very wealthy. Consequently velvet was rarely seen.

The up-to-date woman must, however, next winter have at least one velvet garment in her wardrobe or be out of the world. An extra fine quality of velveteen is to be introduced which will be used exclusively for whole costumes for street and carriage wear.

Dressy jackets will be of velvet, and fancy bodices, elaborately trimmed with black lace and jet or rare old pieces of point and duchesse lace, will be the ultra-modish garments of the winter wardrobe.

Velvet gowns have this in their favor—they need no trimming. The beauty of the costume consists in its rich simplicity. The money saved in this respect can be added to the quality of the material, thus giving the woman who has to count her pennies an opportunity to be the proud possessor of one of these elegant toilets.

Speaking of modesty, we once heard of a left-handed girl who wore her engagement ring on her right hand.—Detroit Journal.

HOUSE NOVELTIES.

INVENTIONS THAT LIGHTEN LABORS OF MISTRESS AND SERVANT.

Busy Brains at Work All the Time Studying Out Some New Household Contrivance—Remarkable Appliances That Make Cooking a Pleasure.

It really seems as if the domestic help, the handmaid and the handman of the present day household, had the favored end of the situation. Not only are devices for lessening their labors being constantly introduced, but new inventions for prompting the memory, and so saving the strained relations incident to oversights and omissions, are also found among the furnishings for pantry and kitchen. A self-closing bread bin, all scarlet paint without any porcelain lining within, is the newest recruit in the list.

"Servants invariably neglect to shut a bread box, and if they do shut it they leave an opening sufficient for dust to get in," exclaimed the salesman. "Cake or any cooked viand they are more careful about; but bread, with a thick crust to it, they appear to leave to its own protection. Various customers have spoken of this from time to time, so an inventor has taken the hint and made this cylindrical bin, that closes the moment the loaves are put into it."

A self-acting knife washer is another invention, designed to prevent the overburdened hired girl from having to remember that the handles of knives ought not to be put into hot water. It is a double-decked affair with places for the big, overgrown knives and places for the small knives. The knife washer does everything but get its own hot water and wipe the knives after their scrubbing. That much is still left to the domestic. A new egg breaker has just taken precedence over all previous egg breakers. It not only cracks the shell, but holds the hot egg as well, thus saving Katie's fingers from the least possible burn. This invention looks something like a pair of curved-edged scissors, with sharp little teeth to hold by. There is a new contrivance for shaving ice and new appliances for rounding it into balls for use about the butter and other delicate dishes. The conveniences for peeling and paring vegetables, slicing them, and chopping them up, and for measuring out seasonings and condiments are a revelation to people who have not kept up with the van of improvements. Every year a new raisin seeder comes out, and the latest device for this purpose would be interesting to the old-time housewives who spent hours seeding raisins for a birthday or a wedding cake, armed only with fruit knives and patience that resisted stickiness.

There have been divers bottle lockers put on the market from time to time, but 1898 sees a new one possessed of an actual key which can be borne away in the pocket of the bottle owner, and so afford tangible evidence of the security of the much prized vintage.

"We have sold no end of these," says the salesman. "They take much better than the self-fasteners, that depended on the cork's swelling as a precaution. There seems to be a feeling among owners of wine cellars that it is perfectly natural for their butler to give way to temptation in this regard, or for the cook or the child's nurse, on off afternoons and evenings, to take a clandestine swig at any tipple she may prefer. When the choicest wines that the house affords are locked, each in its own bottle, and the separate keys are in their turn locked away in cabinet or desk drawer, the master and mistress may enjoy a freedom from responsibility."

A contrivance not made especially for servant's use, but that might be adopted by them with convenience, is an implement for reaching out and getting things without rising from one's chair. It is probable that the designer had the comfort of invalids and helpless folk in mind when he planned it, but able-bodied folk, both above and below stairs, have been quick to see its merits. When shut up it looks like a pair of tweezers or scissors, but it is light and pliant, and at the slightest touch jumps out and lengthens into a half-yard long utensil, with two little claws at the end for hooking up the desired object. A newspaper or handkerchief, the skirt of a creeping infant, a skein of yarn, or any light thing that one's comfort requires, can be grabbed and brought within range by this contrivance. It is called a "Lazy Tom." The sybarite, either in the kitchen or in the sitting room, when armed with it can go a fishing among surroundings without moving an inch from the special place he has found comfortable.

Were the National Costume.

The Princess of Montenegro, while on a visit to her daughter, the Princess of Naples, at Rome, drove out every day in the national Montenegrin dress—a red cloth cloak—and wearing a long black veil over her head. The Romans seemed to like the costume, and cheered it lustily whenever it appeared. In the evening the Princess rivalled Solomon, her costume being simply covered with gems.

Popular For Curtains.

The coin spot muslins still continue popular for curtains. The new fabrics come in double widths, while the spots are in all sizes. Nearly all of these curtains are tied back close to the window with wide, loose bands of the curtain stuff, edged on the bottom with ruffles of the same. Very few windows now show the old loopings of ribbons or cords.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 27—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—Green pastures; the Christian's pleasures.—Ps. xxiii, 1-6.

The Twenty-third Psalm is the most widely known and most popular of all the Psalms of David. It is taught to us in childhood, comforts us in youth and manhood, and strengthens us when advancing age speaks of the "valley of the shadow of death." It breathes a spirit of calm and sublime trust in God. It speaks of God's care of the soul under the figures of the Shepherd, who leads His sheep "into the green pastures and beside still waters," and that of the bountiful Host, who annoints the head of His guest with oil and who causes his cup to run over. And there is included also the sweet peace, profound serenity and trustful happiness of the one whom God thus cares and provides. And where in all the world can be found a peace and happiness equal to this peace and happiness of the soul, which may be called the Christian's joy or pleasure?

1. God is the source of the Christian's pleasure. He, as a shepherd, leads us into green pastures and beside still waters. He, as a host, anoints our heads with oil and deals so bountifully with us that our cups run over. The joy of the Lord is our strength. The Christian's pleasure is therefore spiritual rather than sensual. It comes from union with God, from blessings derived from God, from service for God, from fellowship and communion with the people of God.

2. The worldling cannot understand the Christian's pleasure. It is spiritual and can only be discerned by the spiritual. It is as unintelligible to the inexperienced as the conversation of those who speak in a foreign, unknown tongue. They understand and enjoy it. To us it is unintelligible and uninteresting. Many people of the world doubt the happiness of Christians, because they cannot understand it, yet the joy of one who is saved is more profound, more satisfying and more rapturous than any worldly joy. "Eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what God hath in store for those who love Him." The eye, the ear, the heart, cannot discern the Christian's pleasures.

3. The Christian's pleasures are eternal. "I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever." To be with God forever is to enjoy God forever. Worldly pleasures soon vanish. Spiritual pleasures last forever. Which are we striving for?

"Did not God place us in this world to enjoy ourselves?" said a worldly young man to a lady who was pressing Christ upon him. "Yes," she replied, "but my pleasure is in my religion." Happy indeed one who could make such a reply. Many professed Christians even find their pleasures not in their religion, but in spite of their religion. What a sad commentary on our Christianity when we have to go to the world for entertainment and amusement!

Bible Readings.—Neh. viii, 10; Ps. xvi, 6, 11; xxxv, 9; li, 12; Prov. iii, 17; xxi, 15-17; Eccl. ii, 1-11; Isa. xxxv, 1-10; li, 11; Math. xi, 28-30; Luke viii, 14; xvi, 19-31; Phil. iv, 4; Heb. xi, 24-26.

Blowing God's Horn.

"What is the good of all this shouting and blessing and praising and boasting?" A good deal of good, if the shouting and praising and boasting and blessing are "in the Lord" and not in ourselves, nor in anybody or anything else. Blowing God's horn may not be blowing our own. One good it accomplishes is to gladden the meek folks. If they meet or hear of one of these brave and triumphant persons who bless the Lord at all times, whose mouths continually praise the Lord and whose souls make their boast in the Lord, it so increases their courage and faith and hope that they are glad. Is it not worth while to gladden meek saints? Surely it is. So, don't get out of patience with the noisy people.—Christian Standard.

Look Inward.

Whenever you find yourself inclined to dwell with more than common severity of temper on the sins and shortcomings of other men and to be lax and liberal in judging your own faults, you will do well to inquire whether you are not in a backslidden state. If you have in any measure overcome the world, the flesh and the devil, you are bound to know how hard the task is and to entertain feelings of sympathy for all that are engaged in the same fight. The best people are the most charitable. Saintliness is tenderness. The immaculate Son of Man had a kind word and a helping hand for all struggling souls. He did not and does not break the bruised reed nor quench the smoking flax.—Nashville Advocate.

God's Favors.

God multiplies His favors. Day by day and hour by hour they come trooping along according to existing need. So continuous and opportune are mercies and bounties that we too often take them as matter of course, attribute them to secondary causes and fail to trace them, with due intelligence and gratitude to their divine source. Never ought the Hand that feeds us and the Heart which responds in love, sympathy and kindness, be forgotten or unacknowledged. Goodness ever deserves recognition.—Presbyterian.

The Value of a Good Name.

Secure a good name to thyself by living virtuously and humbly, but let this good name be nursed abroad and never be brought home to look upon it. Let others use it for their own advantage. Let them speak of it if they please. But do not thou use it at all but as an instrument to do God glory and thy neighbor more advantage. Let thy face, like Moses', shine to others, but make no looking glass for thyself.—Jeremy Taylor.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Topic For the Week Beginning Aug. 27, "The Christian's Pleasures"—Text, Ps. xxiii, 1-6.

"The Lord is my shepherd."

Some one has said, "There is no pleasure comparable to standing on the vantage ground of truth." This is the first gain of the Christian. In doing God's will he finds Christ's words fulfilled; he knows the truth and the truth makes him free. He does not possess all knowledge. He may make many mistakes, but he sees into the real nature of things and knows God as his father. He is no longer in fear of judgment, and, though realizing himself as a sinner, he has peace and pardon by faith in Jesus Christ. He is true in heart to God and man. He is free from malice, envy and pride and full of love. Happiness consists far less in what one gets or has than in what he is. When a person is filled with the love of God, he abides in restfulness of soul, even when business goes disastrously and disease seizes the body.

It is a source of deepest satisfaction to realize that God really cares for me. My interests, my good and my actions are all subjects of concern to God. When we really get hold of this idea, it is apt to get hold of us in return and change our actions. We come to new ideas and new deeds. God leads! I must be attentive to know what He wishes. God my shepherd! Let Him guide me where He sees is best. Green pastures, quiet waters, valley of death's shadows, anywhere, everywhere He sees best, I will gladly go.

There is great pleasure in mastering success in the world and among men. In business enterprises, in literature, art, science; in making a new discovery, a great corporation, in amassing wealth, in attaining social leadership, in the thousand and one avenues of wordly honor and prosperity there is great enjoyment. But there is no soul satisfaction in arms, in politics, in business to be compared to the simple knowledge of God as the personal Friend, Protector and Shepherd.

In childlike humility and simplicity the greatest of men have found rest and peace under the wings of the Almighty. Personal heart trust is the Christian's pleasure, perfect peace.

Secretary Hamilton.

Rev. John W. Hamilton, D. D., secretary of the Freedmen's Aid and Southern Education society, is one of the most widely and favorably known men of the Methodist Episcopal church. Fine, physique, attractive address, frank, open manner, genuine piety, sturdy manliness and hatred of sham, linked with unusual executive ability and thorough cultivation in school and public life, have all combined to make him what he is, one of the foremost men in one of the foremost churches of the times. He first became widely known by his building the People's church, Boston. He has been an influential member of several general conferences, and received a large vote for bishop the last time any were elected. Probably no man in our denomination, unless it may be some of the bishops, knows so many men in our own church and in other churches, the influential leaders in their respective spheres, as does Dr. Hamilton. He has done valuable work in his present position. He was with Bishop Fowler, fraternal delegate from our church to the British and Irish Wesleyan conferences, which he visited last summer. His addresses were valuable historical documents, and have been printed in a beautiful pamphlet for private circulation. The league should know him and the work he leads in the Freedmen's Aid society. In importance it ranks with the missionary cause.

Watch China. But yesterday she was the least known of nations, unless we except Korea and Japan. Today she is open from Shanghai to Tibet. China is to awaken from sleep of ages. What this means who can tell? John Chinaman is one of the most virile and astute and frugal of men. What any one can do, he can do as well, only give him a chance. Every third man on earth is a Chinaman. Russia, England, France and Germany may open his gates and climb over his wall and dictate his trade for awhile. China is awaking. If she becomes Christian, the Mongolian will unite with the Anglo-Saxon and Slav in making a new world. Help to make her Christian for the sake of the kingdom of God.

No other department is more important than the spiritual. The matter of greatest moment to each member and to the League and church as a whole is the deepening of devotional life. There need to be more of prayer, more reading and understanding of the Bible, not the matter of higher or lower criticism or any questions of controversy, but the knowledge of the way the Bible would have a Christian live. We need more of open hearted, simple testimony.

STRANGE SNAKE STORY

Black Snake Kills Rattler in Defense of Three-Year-Old Child.

Mrs. Warren W. Jessup, residing near Conklin Forks, New York, was the hysterical witness of an exciting battle between two snakes, the prize they were after being her three-year old child. Last summer the Jessup farmhouse was infested with rats and mice. Every effort to remove the vermin proved ineffectual. Suddenly they began to disappear, and when all had left the premises Farmer Jessup found the cause to be a black snake that had taken up its residence under the kitchen porch. He gave orders the reptile should not be injured, and even set a pan of milk out for it occasionally.

The snake became quite tame, and grew to be the pet of three-year-old Margery, who fed it daily. The snake got to know the little one, and showed no fear when she was near. Last week Margery was playing about the yard when the mother, hearing a strange whirring sound, looked up and saw a large rattler coiled on a stone in the doorway ready to strike. She dare not scream and precipitate the tragedy, and was in a frenzy of terror when from under the porch the black snake glided direct toward the foe. So quick

Do not wash your hands and face with a common laundry soap, or if you do, don't complain when you find them rough, hard and chapped. Ordinary laundry soaps are good for scrubbing floors, but not for the skin. Ivory Soap makes a creamy lather that rinses easily and takes the dirt with it. The natural oil of the skin washed with Ivory Soap is not removed, and the skin is left soft and smooth.

GOLF.

One of the matches that the golfers of the Park Golf Club are longing to see is that between W. de la R. Anderson, the club champion, and Fred P. Taylor. Both play from scratch in the tournament for the McCutchen cup and both have tied for the tournament record for the course, eighteen holes in 92. Somehow they have so far missed each other while playing on the course although both have been anxious for a meeting. It is to be hoped that a match between the two can be arranged for the latter part of the season so that the question of superiority can be decided. One match would hardly decide it, however; a series would be far better for both.

Although no announcements have yet been made, both of the local golf clubs will resume their active season on Labor Day with some event of particular importance.

—During the thunder storm last Monday evening, Fred Stack, of Park avenue, took several pictures of lightning, but they did not develop as well as he expected.

—Frank Miles, of Somerset street, has decided to erect a new barn on his premises in place of the one recently destroyed by fire, and the work will be started soon.

Miss Edith Randolph, of Scotch Plains, has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Chief and Mrs. T. O. Doane, of West Fifth street.

MANY DOUBT STORY OF REED'S WITHDRAWL

Believe Him Still a Candidate for State Senator.

CHIEF RIVAL IS GEO. DILTS.

EVEN OPPONENTS ADMIT REED IS LIKELY TO GET IT.

Somerset G. O. P. Men Believe He Will be Renominated if Gen. Sewell Does Not Interfere—Thompson Faction Declares That Once Nominated, He Will be Surely Defeated—Cooper for Assembly Seat.

Although the report was generally circulated that General Sewell had settled the present troubles of the Republican party in Somerset county by a virtual request to Senator Chas. A. Reed to withdraw from the contest for re-election to the State Senate, there are many in Somerset county who do not give credence to the story. In their minds the question of leadership in the G. O. P. in Somerset is still unsettled. They believe that the two factions led respectively by Lewis A. Thompson and Senator Chas. A. Reed will meet in the county convention this fall and furnish a lively time.

There are only two important county offices to be filled at the election in November. A Senator will be chosen to succeed Chas. A. Reed, of North Plainfield, to represent Somerset in the higher branch of the State Legislature and an Assemblyman will be elected to succeed Edward E. Cooper, of Warren. In both cases the present ncumbent is a candidate for renomination by the Republican party.

For two years the rivalry between the Thompson and Reed factions has continued with varying results. Last year Senator Reed was successful in getting Assemblyman VanDoren, of Somerville, nominated for sheriff only to see him defeated at the polls, the result, it was alleged, of the efforts of the rival faction.

If the story of the interference of Geo. Sewell is not true, and many of the prominent Republican politicians of the county do not credit it, the general opinion seems to be that Senator Reed will be nominated. The friends of Mr. Thompson are positive, however, that once nominated, he will be as badly defeated as Van Doren was.

The truth of the matter is that many of the opponents of Senator Reed profess a disire to see him nominated. His nomination, they declare, means his certain defeat and consequent step into the back ground in county politics.

If Senator Sewell interferes, they claim that it will result in Mr. Reed posing in the light of a political martyr and enable him to still dispute the title of leader with Thompson.

The explanation given for Gen. Sewell's interference is that he will need a Republican Senator from Somerset to assure his election to the United States Senate, and so will insist on Mr. Thompson's candidate being nominated.

The name mentioned for the Senatorial nomination by the Thompson faction is that of George Dilts, of Somerville. He was formerly Assemblyman and afterwards Sheriff.

Cooper will undoubtedly be renominated to the Assembly. He has had one term there, and, while he has done nothing to particularly distinguish himself, he has a good record. It is customary to give each Assemblyman a second term, unless his record is particularly unfortunate. So there seems little doubt but that Cooper will be sent to represent Somerset for another term in the Lower House of the State Legislature.

Four Generntions at Golden Wedding

At the golden wedding celebration of Mr. and Mrs. William Dunn, of Washington and Neilson streets, New Brunswick, Tuesday evening, there were four generations present. She can see clearly without any glasses, and is as active and energetic as her daughter, who is over 70 years of age.

AWAY FOR TWO YEARS.

RAZOR SLASHING BARBER SENT TO STATE PRISON.

Albert Champion Only Convicted of Assault and Battery, But Given the Extreme Penalty of the Law—Lived Here.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paterson, Aug. 26.—Albert Champion, formerly of Plainfield, the colored razor slashing barber who came near ending the career of John Mingo in a fight at Griffith's saloon about three weeks ago, was arraigned for sentence yesterday in the Court of Special Sessions. Champion was charged with atrocious assault and battery and assault with intent to kill, but Judge Barkalow found him guilty of assault and battery merely. The verdict made the friends of Champion feel that a light penalty would be imposed, but they were disappointed. Champion was given the extreme term of imprisonment, two years in State Prison.

Champion is well known in this city, where he figured frequently in police court for indulging in "crap" games. His last debut before the cadi was on the charge of running a disorderly house on Madison avenue, the place being raided by the police. He was sent to the county jail for six months, and after his release he came to Plainfield for a short time. Then he drifted to Paterson, where he quarrelled with a barber over his wife's devotion to him, which resulted in his badly slashing the fellow who cast aspersions upon his better half.

HORSE RESENTED WHIP.

BECAME FRACTIOUS AND THREW THE RIDER TO THE GROUND.

W. H. Hillman was the Rider Who Was Unmounted—Fall Made HimUnconscious, but He Sustained No Severe Injuries.

William H. Hillman, of 828 Sherman avenue, narrowly escaped serious injury last evening, when he was riding a horse owned by Reuben Knox, of North Plainfield. Mr. Hillman intended taking a short ride, but before he left his home the animal became fractious and threw the rider to the ground with considerable force. Members of the family saw Mr. Hillman fall, but had no idea that he was injured until they noticed that he failed to get up. Then they hastened to where he was lying. They discovered that he was unconscious, and Dr. T. S. Davis was summoned. In the meantime Mr. Hillman was taken to the house.

When Dr. Davis arrived he made a thorough examination and discovered that there were no bones broken and apparently no serious injury. He was obliged to work for sometime before he brought his patient to consciousness. Although Mr. Hillman is doing as well as expected he feels the effects of the accident.

After the horse threw his rider he made no attempt to runaway. The horse has never been known to practice such tricks, and he was probably made to act that way through the light use of a small whip which Mr. Hillman carried.

An Extension of Time.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, August 26.—The Township Committee at a meeting held last evening were inclined not to grant an extension of time to the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company to complete its lines at this place on account of the company's delay in macadamizing the streets through which the rails have been laid. Committeeman Thompson considered that no extension of time should be allowed unless the company agree to complete the road work. Representative A. A. Gaddis was present and asked for an extension of time for the railway company until December 1st. After considerable discussion the extension was granted providing the railway company would finish the road work by October 15th.

Thirteen Days on the Briny Deep.

A very handsome illustrated postal card has just received in this city from Rev. H. C. Eyme, former pastor of the German Lutheran church, on Grove street. Mr. Eyme is in the Harzburg Mountains, Germany, and states that he had a long—thirteen days—but beautiful voyage across the water. He says that he is enjoying the cool weather which necessitates the wearing of heavy coats and furs afternoon and evening. The postal card gives an idea of the beautiful scenery where Mr. Eyme is now stopping.

GOLF WINS ADHERANTS FROM OTHER SPORTS.

Football This Fall Will Suffer Accordingly.

PLAINFIELD'S PROSPECTS.

WILL UNDOUBTEDLY BE REPRESENTED ON THE GRIDIRON.

Many of the Young Men Who Played Football in Past Years Are Now Enthusiastic Golfers and Will Give Up the Old Game—Several Teams Likely to Play Here During the Fall—No Announcement Yet.

Undoubtedly there will be a football team of prominence in Plainfield this fall but it also is certain the team will be greatly handicapped by the general interest in golf. Last season was really the first when any general interest was taken in the royal game of golf. The game did not become general in popularity until this year. Last fall it was confined to a few who never had anything to do with football. In the fall months football became the only outdoor sport that attracted general attention. This year golf promises to rival it in the popular eye and thereby considerably handicap the local teams.

Most of the young men who, in past seasons, have taken an active part in football, are new members of the Hillside and Park Clubs. Their Saturday afternoon's when at home have been spent on the links of those two clubs and they have taken part in the various competitions and club matches. September, October and sometimes, November are the favorite months for play of the golfers.

When the football season comes the golfers will have to decide whether to return to their old love or remain with the new favorite sport. Football will undoubtedly suffer as a result. It has always been hard to get the boys out for practice and this year, under these circumstances, it will be doubly so.

No announcement has been made as yet regarding the fall plans of the local teams. It was thought that last year saw the end of the Plainfield A. A. team which has represented Plainfield so successfully on the gridiron for the past five years. Some of the well-known players have left town, others are firm in their determination to quit the game for good and then golf has won soms adherants from that class. There will be a neucleus of veterans around which some of the younger set may gather to form a strong combination. The advisability of reviving the old team is being considered and a decision may be speedily looked for.

The crack Alis team will probably be on the field again this season, Roy T. Phillips, captain and manager, is quietly looking over the young men of the town for proper material to fill in the vacancies in the old eleven. The team will play without doubt, but its season may be confined to holiday games.

Then there is the Alis second, of which Harold Phillips is captain and manager. Most of the boys that played on it are working in New York now and Captain Phillips may have some trouble in getting his players together for practice or for Saturday afternoon games.

A NEW CENTRAL BRANCH.

Survey for a Line Made From Gateville Chimney Rock.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Aug. 26—A survey for a branch of the Central Railroad had been run by Wm. Haelig over the old road from Gateville to Chimney Rock This is an entirely new route and will surely be built and prove a success unless some, ignorant of the benefits that may be derived by all, step in hold it back.

Felt Trust Branching Out.

A large addition is being built to the Bloodgood factory at Lennox. This factory is the main works of the Felt Trust, formed about a year ago, and the addition is in the line of increasing the manufacturing and storing capacities of the plant, which, it is said, is to ultimately be made the largest in the felt industry in the United States.

FALLING MATCHES FIRED

PECULIAR ORIGIN OF A BLAZE IN A GROCERY STORE.

Box of Matches Accidentally Fell to the Floor and Became Ignited—A Few Pails of Water Put Out the Flames.

A quantity of matches and a little carelessness furnished material for a blaze in the grocery store of William Willis, at 223 West Front street, this morning. But the firemen came along and quenched the flames before they had time to do but little damage.

At 8:20 o'clock a customer came into Willis' store and wanted to buy two boxes of matches. The proprietor waited on the customer. The matches were in a paper parcel on a shelf behind the counter. In getting them down Willis upset the whole package, and it fell to the floor with a crash.

The fall ignited the matches and a burst of flames shot upward into the face of the astonished proprietor. Without delay he hurried after water while a man passing by sent in alarm from the keyless Box No. 12. The firemen arrived in short order and a line from the chemical engine was stretched in at once.

Willis had fought the flames with pails of water, but the stock of paper bags, the counter and several boxes and barrels were blazing. The stream from the chemical was effective and the fire was speedily extinguished.

Willis' loss was not great as the stock in the vicinity of the fire was all in cans. He was insured for $800, and his loss will not be over $50. The building is owned by Mrs. Katherine Sebring and is insured. Her loss will not reach $25.

EYEBROWS WERE SINGED

LUCKY ESCAPE OF MRS. H. T. SMITH FROM SERIOUS BURNING.

Gas Turned on in the Oven of a Stove—Mrs. Smith Did Not Know It—Lighted Match, Explosion Followed

An explosion of gas inflicted serious injuries to Mrs. H. T. Smith, of Westervelt avenue, last night. Under the circumstances it was remarkable that she did not lose her sight and receive even worse injuries.

Mrs. Smith only lately returned from the Long Island shore. In her absence her son, Thomas U. Smith, kept bachelor's hall. He did his cooking on a gas stove. On Mrs. Smith's return a woman was employed to clean the kitchen. In cleaning the stove she accidentally turned on the gas in the oven of the gas stove. That was in the morning. Mrs. Smith smelt the escaping gas, but thought it was from the burner. She lighted the upper burners in the stove and then opened the door. There was a flash and an explosion.

Mrs. Smith's hair and eyebrows were singed and her face burned. She also received a severe shock. Luckily she closed her eyes and they were not injured.

AN ITALIAN'S THREAT.

Against His Partner's Life Lands Him in the County Jail.

Joseph Munch and Angelio Verlini work a farm together at Warrenville. Joseph is of French extraction and Verlini is a son of Sunny Italy. Recently Angelio was of the opinion that his partner was not dividing the receipts of the farm in an equitable manner and he did not hesitate to tell Munch his opinion of his idea of equal division. The result was a quarrel and Munch alleges that Verlini threatened to kill him.

Fearing for his safety Munch secured a warrant of Justice Smalley for the Italian's arrest. Officer Pangborn had the accused before the magistrate late yesterday afternoon. Former Judge Coddington represented the State and looked after Munch's interests. The result was that Verlinn was boond over to keep the peace in the sum of $200 in default of bail. He was committed to the county jail at Somerville.

An invitation was received to attend the entertainment to be held in South Plainfield Tuesday evening in the interests of a proposed tribe there.

LOAN COMPANY SUED BY RED MEN'S LODGE.

Miantonomo Tribe Appeal to Supreme Court for Redress.

CLAIM UNFAIR DEALINGS.

WANTED TO WITHDRAW STOCK FROM REPUBLIC COMPANY.

Had Paid in $370 in Cash and Were to Receive $307—Profits and Balance Eaten Up by an Expense Fund to Pay President's Salary—Suit Brought by William Newcorn, Counsel for Miantonomo Tribe.

Suit has been started by Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., against the Republic Savings and Loan Association, of Newark, in the New Jersey Supreme Court to recover dues paid in on twenty shares of short term stock in that corporation held by the tribe. The suit is brought for $500.

It is alleged that one of the conditions of sale was that if the tribe should decide to withdraw at any time before three years was up, they should receive the amount of the dues, less $1 on each share of stock. After three years they were to receive the full amount of the dues paid in and 6 per cent. on the money at the average time.

At the annual meeting of the company in 1897 an amendment was passed setting aside a certain amount of the dues as an expense fund to be charged up against the shares held by each stockholder. Most of it went to pay that salary of the president and general manager, Luther G. Gadd, of Newark.

Last fall the tribe decided to withdraw, but at the suggestion of the officers of the company decided to wait until last March when the three years expired and take advantage of the rules that returned the full amount and interest. It is alleged by the tribe that the amendment had never been enforced up to that time.

The tribe, it is alleged, has paid in $370 in cash. According to the company its shares were worth $401.05 but there was its share of the expense fund to bear, leaving $309 to be returned.

The tribe claimed $370 and interest and not a cent less. The matter was put in the hands of the tribe's counsel, William Newcorn, who has finally brought suit after vainly trying to secure a settlement.

MR. O'SULLIVAN'S CONDITION.

No Internal Injuries, but He is Unable to Move Himself.

Sylvester J. O'Sullivan, who was struck by a train at the Netherwood station yesterday morning, passed a fairly comfortable night at the Hotel Hunterston, where he is stopping. The physicians are now satisfied that there are no internal injuries, but the external injuries are such that Mr. O'Sullivan cannot move himself without help. There are no new developments in the case, and those in charge feel assured that the patient will now recover speedily.

A Stone Water-way.

Street Commissioner Gavett is making a long needed and decided improvement at the corner of Second street and Madison avenue, by building a stone water-way, with iron covers to carry the surface water across the street, in place of the iron pipe that formerly served the purpose.

Mrs. S. O. Staats returned to her home, 130 West Second street, yesterday, after a pleasant visit at the home of her brother at Martinsville, Somerset county.

HEALTH FOR THE BABIES.

FRESH AIR CAMP DOING NOBLE WORK FOR THE POOR TOTS.

Everything in Complete Working Order Under the Direction of Miss Setzer—A Little One's Life Undoubtedly Saved.

An interesting place to visit these warm days is the Baby Camp at Vails' spring on Watchung mountain, a short distance beyond Mountain Side Inn. The camp is now in complete working order, being in charge of Miss Octavia Setzer, of the City Union of King's Daughters, that noble band of women united in this humanitarian cause.

When a Daily Press reporter visited the camp yesterday, it was found in apple-pie order. The little tots were being cared for in a manner thoroughly in keeping with the true instincts of motherly love and all of them appeared to enjoy their new surroundings. The babies are daily furnished fresh milk by Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, a noble woman, who occupies Mrs. F. O. Herring's cottage, adjoining the baby camp.

There is one infant which Miss Setzer has taken a special fancy to, from the fact that she believes the little one's life was saved by having it brought to the camp.

Certainly the camp then has been worth all the sacrifice that has been made by the young ladies of the City Union of King's Daughters. It must also be gratifying to those charitable persons who have contributed toward the support of this camp to learn how much good it has accomplished.

SPEEDWAY IS PROBABLE

PROJECT TO WIDEN WOODLAND AVENUE TO 110 FEET.

The Idea is to Add 50 Feet on Westerly Side of Present Street, Leaving Row of Trees in Middle to Divide Thoroughfare.

After several year's of agitation among the horsemen in this vicinity for the building of a speedway there is a project on fact now that is likely to develope such a feature into reality.

The plan is to widen Woodland avenue from sixty to 110 feet. James E. Martine, who owns a great deal of property skirting one side of that thoroughfare, and J. Wesley Johnson, president of the First National Bank, representing the company that has purchased the Denton tract of land, are behind the project. The purpose is to widen the avenue fifty feet on the westerly side, leaving the present row of trees that skirt that side in the middle of the widened street.

This will make two drives, the idea being to make the westerly one a speedway for owners and drivers of fast steppers. The present roadway, which would be on the easterly side of the row of trees, would be intended for the use of those who desire to drive at a more moderate speed.

Such a speedway would be beautifully located, as it is situated at the base of the hills overlooking the city, and would be fifty feet above the centre of the city. It is calculated that it will be easy to raise the necessary funds to improve the roadway after the land is secured for the purpose.

NIGHT BLOOMING CEREUS.

Three of the Plants Blossom in Plainfield Homes.

A night blooming cereus attracted much attention at the home of Mrs. William Dunavan, of East Second street, last evening. There were nine blossoms last evening and four the night before.

Another plant of the same kind blossomed at the home of Mrs. Dagnall, of Richmond street, last evening. There were fourteen buds and blossoms. Mrs. Dagnal has seven plants, four of which have not blossomed this summer.

Last evening the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. VanAlstine, of Watchung avenue, gathered to view their very beautiful night blooming cereus plant. Ten buds opened after sunset and later in the evening they fully developed, making a most remarkable and attractive display. The fragrant perfume of the flowers was perceptable across the street.

Wagon Passed Over His Leg.

Herman Loesch, aged 24 years, living at the corner of Rock avenue and Fourth street, fell out of a wagon last night and the wheels passed over his left leg, injuring it to such an extent that he had to be taken to the hospital, where he is now being properly treated.

—Howard Lance, of this city, has accepted a position with a local groceryman.

Dr. T. S. Davis, of Park avenue, has been detained at his home for several days by illness. Next week he and his family will leave for Hot Springs, Va., where they will remain for a time.

SALE OF CEMETERY TO BE GONE AHEAD WITH Purchaser is Entitled to Its Use for Thirty Years.

HE CAN EVEN BUILD ON IT.

THE ASSESSMENT CAN BE ENFORCED BECAUSE IT IS SPECIAL.

If the Delinquent Assessment of $210 is Not Paid by September 1st, It Will be Advertised for One Month and Then Sold to the One Who is Willing to Pay the Highest Price for It.

Regarding the fact that Mayor Smalley and the Borough Council have issued a warrant on Collector George F. Brown commanding him to advertise and sell all real estate on which the assessment for the opening of Watchung avenue remains unpaid, and in view of the fact that the Presbyterian Cemetery on Chatham street is included in that property, there has been a great deal of criticism concerning the action of the officials in announcing the intended sale if the assessment of $210 is not paid.

The fact is, however, that Collector Brown will advertise and sell that property if the assessment is not paid, to any person or corporation who will take it for a term of years not exceeding thirty years, and will pay the assessment. It then becomes the property of the person buying it and he may use it for pasturing cows and horses or if he choses he can build thereon, and no one can deny him the privilege so long as he holds the property according to the provisions under which he purchases it.

The legal status of the subject is that the matter does not come under the general taxation laws, as the assessment is levied for the improvement and opening of a street in close proximity. The laws holds that it is a benefit to the property to have a new street opened near the property, thus affording easy access, and it is considered in the same light as the laying of a stone sidewalk of curbing where an assessment would be made to pay for the work.

If the cemetery association has not funds to pay the assessment they probably have the right to levy an assessment on all property owners holding lots in the cemetery and thus secure the necessary money.

It is even a question as to whether the cemetery association in this particular case was organized under the law granting to them exemption from general taxation. This latter will be looked into. If the cemetery association was omitted from those assessed for the opening and improvement of Watchung avenue there would have been a storm raised, because all property affected was not included, and such a report could not have been submitted. According to the best of legal authority there is no good and sufficient reason why the cemetery in this case should be exempt from paying the $210 assessed, and if the amount is not paid by Sept. 1st the property will be advertised and sold during the first week in October. If an individual buys it in the cemetery association will, under the law, have two years in which they can secure control of it. If advantage is not taken of that law the owner can keep the property for the balance of the twenty-eight years, making use of it, unless he is willing to pass it back to the association.

Mr. Bougham has ability as a sign writer and letterer. He will call on the merchants for orders in his line of work. If successful he will make Plainfield his home.

DR. BEDLOE IS IN TROUBLE.

United States Representative at Canton, China, Has Been Suspended.

AN INQUIRY TO BE HELD

The Charge Made That He Issued Certificate to a Filipino Filibustering Ship.

No Other Consuls Are Implicated in the Matter—The Navy Department Much Imbarrassed—Consul Bedloe Coming Home By Way of San Francisco.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Edward Bedloe, United States consul at Canton, China, has been suspended by the State Department and is to return to the United States. His suspension has given rise to reports that several consular officers of the United States have been removed, because of allegations that they had assisted in sending munitions of war to the Filipinos. Assistant Secretary Cridler, however, says that the suspension order affects only Dr. Bedloe, and that it is not due to charges of having given aid to the Filipinos, but arises, in part, out of the certificate of American ownership said to have been granted by the consul to the steamship Abbey.

The Abbey was seized by the gunboat McCulloch on Sept. 23 of last year at Batangas, where she had landed a cargo of arms and ammunition.

It is said that the Abbey was in the harbor of Canton, and was held by the Canton authorities. Dr. Bedloe, it is alleged, gave the vessel a certificate of American ownership and the vessel departed from Macao, which Admiral Dewey gave as the point of departure. In accordance with instructions sent by the Navy Department Admiral Watson reseized the vessel, which had been released soon after her first capture, and he is holding her until further evidence can be obtained which will fix the responsibility for her operations.

The Navy Department is very much embarrassed about the matter by reason of the fact that there are no federal courts in the Philippines that can pass on the case, and it will be necessary to bring her to San Francisco to accomplish her condemnation.

The authorities, on the other hand, feel assured that Dr. Bedloe is innocent of any wrongdoing, intentionally at least, and that some misunderstanding exists on his part. There is no explicit legal authority, it is said, for the granting of such certificates as that which, it is alleged, was given by Dr. Bedloe to the Abbey. The consular regulations authorize the issue of them on the ground that it is reasonable and proper that American citizens should be afforded the protection of consulates and the right to fly the American flag over their vessels. The paper is not, strictly speaking, a certificate of ownership, but it merely certifies that the bill of sale to which it is attached has been duly authenticated in the office of a consul of the United States.

The Navy Department has received from W. F. Sylvester of London, one of the owners of the steamship Abbey, a message saying that he is about to come to Washington to contest the seizure on the ground that the Filipinos were the allies of the United States at the time the arms were shipped.

The State Department, through Consul Gen. Goodnow, at Shanghai, has prosecuted an inquiry into the shipment of the arms, and a report is before the department. Based on that report, the State Department is preparing a letter to the Navy Department which is to be the ground for further proceedings.

The owners of the Abbey have retained counsel here to look after their interests. A number of papers have been filed at the State and Navy departments, and documents have been submitted in the case. The ramification of the Abbey seizure are engaging the attention of the State, War and Navy Departments and promise some interesting developments.

It is said at the State Department that Consul Bedloe, our representative at Canton, certified that Mr. Sylvester was an American citizen and on that the Abbey obtained registry.

A private letter just received here from the consul says that he is on leave of absence and is on his way home via San Francisco.

THE REVOLT GOES ON.

San Domingo Government Reported Demoralized.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 26.—In Dominican mail despatches just received here it is said that the government of Santo Domingo is paralyzed, and that the revolutionary movement has a highly developed organization and is commanding popularity and exciting enthusiasm throughout the republic, even in the interior and capital. Santiago, it is added, is preparing to declare in favor of Jiminez. The city of Santo Domingo alone is loyal, but even there revolutionary demonstrations have been forcibly repressed, manifestoes of travellers confiscated and several arrests made. The government retains no real standing ground elsewhere. The movements, it is said, are national and not merely political, and the people are only awaiting the arrival of Jiminez to assume the leadership, when many of the remaining generals, with a large proportion of the army, will join him.

The government's only reliance is the navy, which is loyally endeavoring to capture Jiminez and thus break up the revolution.

More Fighting Takes Place.

The revolutionists are reported to be receiving reinforcements continually.

Sale of Renovated Butter.

Albany, Aug. 26.—Evidence which the State Department of Agriculture regards as an attempt to evade the law requiring the branding of renovated butter has been received by that department. One of its agents in Rochester found some for sale in packages with "Elgin, Illinois," printed on the top of the package in blue ink, and on the bottom of the package printed in yellow ink and in very small letters "renovated butter, sterilized process." The department believes that this was an attempt to evade the law and will make an effort to prevent the sale of the butter in this state. The law provides that renovated butter sold in this state shall be branded as such.

THEY FEAR GEN. LAWTON

No Obstacles Seem to Stop His Onward March in the Philippines.

HAS BECOME A TERROR.

Filipinos Had Grave Fears That the American General Would Drive Them Into a Trap.

Dissension Said to Prevail Among the Lower Classes of Natives—A State Bordering on Anarchy Exists in Many of the Country Districts.

Manila, Aug. 26.—At one time during the recent campaign Aguinaldo's biggest army hung in the balance and its destruction appeared inevitable. That was when MacArthur had captured San Fernando and Lawton was marching upon San Isidro, with the Filipinos scattering before him. Lawton had made himself a terror to the natives because no obstacles stopped him. If the country was trackless his men cut roads and the General and his staff took off their coats and helped. When rations were not forthcoming they breakfasted on another inch of their belts and marched ahead, and they always managed to attack from an unexpected quarter. With Lawton at San Isidro the Filipinos feared he might sweep around upon Tarlac, where they had installed their nomadic capital, and catch them between two armies. All the archives, seals, gilt triangles and treasure boxes were packed ready for shipment on the railroad at the first word of Lawton's advance.

Lawton asked to be allowed to move forward with the men and rations he had, but orders came to withdraw his troops from San Isidro and return to Malolos, leaving small garrisons at some of the towns he had captured. His retirement the Filipinos construed into a retreat, and from that day the sinking hopes of the natives seemed to rise. Luna and Mascardo, who had retreated northward from San Fernando toward Tarlac, brought their armies back and proceeded to construct a horseshoe line of intrenchments around San Fernando, where, according to reports, they led their followers to believe they had MacArthur besieged.

In a State of Anarchy.

London, Aug. 26.—The Labuan correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company cables that reliable news received there direct from Manila says that an indescribable state of anarchy prevails.

The Americans, according to these advices, occupy a radius of fifteen miles there; around the town of Iloilo they occupy a radius of nine miles, and around Cebu they occupy a small radius. The rest of the country, it is added, is in the hands of the Filipinos.

Four Fishermen Lost.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 26.—The fishing schooner Mary A. Whalen of this city reported here that she had lost four men on the banks. They went out in dories and she was unable to pick them up. It is expected, however, that they have been rescued by some other fishing boat.

Filipinos Learning English.

PRICE OF BRICK GOES UP.

Manufacturers Making Up for Loss Caused by Recent Strike.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 26.—The price of brick in Chicago has jumped from $6.50 to $8 a thousand. Contractors fear that there is to be a further advance. A prominent brick manufacturer said in regard to the advance:

The recent strike cost us a whole lot of money, which we are determined to make up. There is now almost a famine of brick in Cook County, and I might as well say that the manufacturers are getting all they can out of the situation. In the long run the strike will prove to have been in our interest, for the reason that it made brick scarce and gave assurance of permanent employment for some time to come. We have made no general advance, but it is only natural to suppose that those who come last for service will be expected to pay a slight advance over those who made contracts before the strike was called.

They Defy the Court.

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 26.—The striking miners at Blairsville, who played hide and seek with the Sheriff's deputy and prevented him from serving the injunction writs granted by Judge White, have leased a strip of land near the main opening of the mine. The strip is owned by a woman "sympathizer." The men now defy the injunction, as they stand on their own ground.

The leased property runs so near the mine entrance that the strikers can stand on it and block the way of the two hundred men who have been employed by Superintendent Maher to take their places. The mine operators have repeatedly offered the men the union rate of wages, but the strikers demand that the union be recognized and this the operators say they will never do.

Shepard Not to be Prosecuted.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 26.—The Commissioners of the Bath Soldiers' Home met here and charges were presented against Commander Shepard, alleging irregularities in his management of affairs. Col. Shepard had issued a letter denying the allegations, declaring that he would defend his name and reputation to the last. The written charges against him not being signed, were not formally received, and the friends of the Commander succeeded in having them withdrawn, promising that he would resign at the next annual meeting if requested to do so. The Board agreed to this and adjourned without taking further action.

The hearing was in private.

Violations Will Be Punished.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 26.—The Treasury Department up to this time has accepted all compromises offered by banks for the settlement of fines where examiners have found the banks in possession of unstamped checks and notes. The plea in almost every instance is inadvertence. Violations of the law, have not decreased as they should have done, and the department is on the point of adopting a rigid policy. A heavy penalty is to be imposed for every violation.

"I had indigestion and dyspepsia, the doctors said, but I do not know what was the matter. I only know that I almost suffered death, especially when at a delicate period, my bowels were bad, and I had such pains in my back of a morning I could hardly get out of bed. When I had taken Ripans Tabules for two weeks, as directed, I was a new person. These are facts, and my friends can say the same."

The above words are from a letter written by a young lady of Holton, La., whose cousin recommended the Tabules.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—FOR FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents.

TWO MORE SHOT DOWN.

Race War in Georgia Breaks Out Afresh at Darien.

Darien, Ga., Aug. 26.—Within a few hours a battle in all probability will have been fought between the whites and blacks here. At a conference of the military and civil authorities it was decided to attack the blacks, who are encamped a few miles from here in a swamp. Three posses have started for the swamps and will give battle to the negroes, who are awaiting them. One posse will go on horseback, another will go by train, and the third, which is composed of the Liberty County troops, have been ordered to form a unction with them.

The negroes, well armed, are expecting the attack. They are in a thickly wooded swamp and have thrown out pickets which extend for miles, and a fierce fight will take place unless the negroes give up the men they are now shielding.

In an attempt to get them, Joseph Townsend, a prominent white man, was shot dead, and Octavitus Hopkins was wounded and may die. The two belonged to a posse that called at the home of the Delegals and demanded that the two Delegal brothers give themselves up. They were answered by a volley from the house and the men were shot. The party in the house escaped to the swamp and joined the negroes there.

State troops patrol the streets of this place, and the town wears a war-like appearance. There is a scurrying to and fro for weapons, and every able-bodied white man is making ready to take a hand in the battle. To the people here it is a war of extermination unless the blacks give up the men who are wanted and the rest lay down their arms and go to their homes.

Forty negroes are under arrest, and have been sent to Savannah for safe-keeping. They were sent by a steamer to avoid attempts at rescue, and a second steamer has been dispatched to Brunswick for reinforcements.

M'KINLEY AT LONG BRANCH

He Is Entertained By the Vice-President and Gets a Warm Welcome.

Long Branch, N. J., Aug 26.—Politics played no part in the splendid American welcome given to President McKinley here. He was received by his fellow countrymen, regardless of party affiliations, and the warmth of the greeting touched him deeply.

A majority of the Reception Committee was made up of prominent and influential Democrats, and it was estimated by an excellent authority that there was about an equal division of political faith in the vast throng that turned out to greet the train which brought the President here, and later overflowed the Horse Show Grounds, where the first military tournament was being held.

But Long Branch did not carry off all the honors. Ocean Grove and Asbury Park came in for a share, and scored one point ahead by getting a speech from the President, not a long speech, to be sure, but a good one. Twelve thousand persons listened and gave vociferous and hearty approbation.

The President and Mrs. McKinley are the guests of Vice President and Mrs. Hobart.

Will Be No Church Wedding.

Newport, R. I. Aug. 26.—Pope Leo has refused to grant a dispensation allowing the wedding of Miss Dora Havemeyer and Lieutenant Commander Cameron McK. Winslow to take place in the Catholic church. The Havemeyers have contributed so liberally to the Catholic Church that this announcement has caused much surprise and comment. The wedding will be celebrated at Freidheim, the Havemeyer villa, on September 18.

Bryan to Stump Kentucky.

Frankfort, Ky., Aug. 26.—At a meeting of the Campaign Committee Senator Blackburn announced he just had received a letter from W. J. Bryan in which he said he would be in Kentucky the latter part of September or the first of October, at a time agreeable to the party leaders. Senator Blackburn said the campaign committee at once would arrange for the trip of Mr. Bryan through the state on a special train, accompanied by party leaders.

Telegrams of condolence to the grieving children of the dead man came from all parts of the country.

Toledo Commercial Sold.

Toledo, O., Aug. 26.—The Toledo Commercial has been sold by Hon. Geo. W. Hull to J. W. Faulkner and E. C. Steiber, of Cincinnati. The consideration is not given. The paper is understood to have been purchased in the interest of John R. McLean.

Creedon Defeats Morris.

New York, Aug. 26.—Dan Creedon defeated Fred Morris, colored, in six rounds in the Broadway Athletic Club. Morris was outclassed from the start.

Former Turkish Censorship.

On one occasion a resident of Turkey ordered out from London some copies of that pleasant book of our nursery days, "Sanford and Merton." All the copies were confiscated, although the maddest of censors could not pretend that the improving discourses of Mr. Barlow to his two young pupils were in the nature of a political propaganda. But the mere fact that the pet dog in the narrative was called "Turk" was sufficient to prevent the sale of the book in Turkey! For an equally absurd reason the whole of Shakespeare's works are forbidden there because of the murder of the King in "Hamlet."—From "Travels and Politics," by W Miller.

HE CREATED AMUSEMENT.

Bertillon Makes a Poor Witness for the Prosecution in the Dreyfus Case

FAILS IN HIS TESTIMONY.

Newspaper Man Swears Esterhazy Confessed to Him That He Wrote the Bordereau.

The Famous Criminal Measurer Produces a Map Which He Says Proves Dreyfus Wrote the Bordereau—No One in the Court Understood His Marks.

Rennes, Aug. 26.—At the opening of the session the Clerk of the Court read a medical certificate, signed by two doctors, whose names are unknown to the audience, declaring that it was impossible for Du Paty de Clam to leave his bed, come to Rennes and testify.

Maitre Labori asked Col. Jouaust to instruct two well-known medical men to examine Du Paty de Clam, but Col. Jouaust refused.

Rowland Strong, an English newspaperman, was then called to the witness bar and deposed to the fact that Major Count Esterhazy confessed to him that he wrote the famous bordereau.

The next witness was M. Gobert, an expert of the Bank of France, who can claim the honor of being the first man in France to have declared in favor of Dreyfus. He reported, on examining the documents in the case, that Esterhazy, and not Dreyfus, wrote the bordereau.

The witness opened his deposition with a brief personal statement, protesting against being characterized as a "doubtful expert" by the Military Party.

"But,' he added, in tones of profound pity and turning toward Dreyfus, "I have no right to complain and am silent when I see before me the unfortunate man that sits there."

A murmur of approval from the audience greeted these words of sympathy.

M. Gobert then repeated the evidence he had given before the Court of Cassation. He gave his testimony in a clear, convincing manner, and was most emphatic in attributing the bordereau to Esterhazy.

Answering questions of the Judges, M. Gobert declared his conviction that the bordereau was written in a running, natural hand, and said there was no tracing or other trickery.

Gen. Gonse asked to be confronted with M. Gobert and put a number of questions, over one or two of which the witness stumbled, to the infinite satisfaction of the military witnesses, who smiled and exchanged joyful glances.

M. Bertillon, the noted specialist in the measurement of the human body, was called as the next witness. He wore a dark-blue frock coat, and, to the surprise of the audience, entered the court room without a single paper and carrying a high hat in his hand instead. But the astonishment was short-lived, the first words of M. Bertillion being a request to permit his diagrams and papers to be brought in. The request was granted and M. Bertillon retired for a moment.

Later he returned at the head of a squad composed of an infantry sergeant and four privates, all staggering under the weight of immense leather satchels, bulging with documents, charts, etc., which they deposited on the stage as a roar of laughter echoed through the court.

Even the Judges were unable to suppress a smile as they gazed on M. Bertillon's stage properties strewn over half the platform. A table was brought in, upon which the plans he was using could be placed.

The witness began by saying that only intelligent men could follow his explanations, and the court was half emptied as the audience, after smiling audibly at his extraordinary words and expressions, soon became bored and went out.

The court room presented a curious scene while M. Bertillon, whom the Dreyfusards in their most indulgent moments described as a "dangerous maniac,' and spent the three remaining hours of the session in explaining in unintelligible terms, his "infallable system" of proving Dreyfus was the author of the bordereau. The majority of the public, utterly unable to comprehend M. Bertillon's theories, had left the court room.

Dreyfus gazed on the scene with a look of stupefaction.

The clearest utterances of M. Bertillon, during the course of his demonstration, was that the handwriting of the bordereau "obeys a geometrical rhythm, of which I discovered the equation in the prisoner's blotting pad."

The witness finally announced that he would give a practical demonstration of the writing of the bordereau, according to his system. Then he theatrically cleared his desk attached to the witness bar, drew his chair nearer, deposited his high hat on the floor, and, sitting down, began copying the bordereau.

A few minutes later M. Bertillon rose, strode to the Judges' table and laid before them a copy.

The Judges, counsel, the Government Commissary, Major Carriere, and the Clerk of the Court clustered around in one group, eager to see the result.

The audience watched this strange spectacle until Col. Jouaust shrugged his shoulders, and then the spectators knew that M. Bertillon had failed to satisfy them.

M. Bertillon noticed this and said apologetically: "I was too badly placed."

Maitre Demange, of the counsel for the defence, returned to counsels' table and in response to a look of inquiry from Dreyfus whispered a few words to the prisoner, with a shrug of his shoulders and a smile on his face.

Col. Jouaust then adjourned the court and M. Bertillon packed up his belongings and the soldiers carried them out.

Blame for Local Officials.

In discussing the accident at the grade crossing of the Central Railroad at Seabright Wednesday night when three lives were lost, the New Jersey editor of the New York Tribune makes some very forcible remarks, none of which are more fitting to the terrible situation than his reference to the contributory negligence of local officials in not forcing railroads to live up to the laws passed to prevent such fatalities. The Tribune says:

The needless sacrifice of three lives at an unprotected grade crossing north of Long Branch ought to serve as a reminder to the authorities of every municipality in New Jersey that there is a law on the statute books of the State under which they can compel the railroad companies to properly protect grade crossings. It is contributory negligence on the part of the local officials that permits the continuance of such death traps as that at which this accident occurred. It is probably due to that spirit of complaisance toward all the shortcomings of railroads which is the natural consequence of the issuance of free passes to public officials. Senator Johnson, of Bergen, succeeded, after a hard fight, in having a law passed which would enable the people to compel the railroad companies to properly guard their crossings. It remains with the people to see that their official representatives do their duty in taking advantage of this law. It is passing strange that the corporations themselves do not see that one such accident costs them more than the expense of keeping flagmen at a score of crossings for a year. It seems they do not see it. This is why it was necessary to pass a law giving the Court of Chancery jurisdiction and power to compel the proper protection of grade crossings. What is needed now is some power to move the local authorities to enforce the law.

Editor Mason, of the Bound Brook Chronicle, is regarded as a pretty good and loyal sort of a Republican, and it is evident from the following editorial in his paper this week that he believes Senator Reed will be renominated by the Republican county convention:

"Freeholder," who writes so entertainingly of New Jersey affairs in the New Xork Press, said yesterday that if Senator Reed, of Somerset, can carry the Republican convention for a renomination will be re-elected. From present appearances Mr. Reed is not likely to have much opposition in the convention.

The Federal census of 1850, the year preceding the Civil War, cost less than $2,000,000 and showed the population of the country at that period to be 31,300,000. The Federal census of 1890, thirty years later, cost $11,200,000 and showed the population of the country to be 62,000,000. The population had doubled in the intervening thirty years, while the expense of the census was six times as great.

An officer of the Lehigh Valley is reported as having declared that the company will not build a branch to Plainfield. Thus does Plainfield's cherished hope for railroad competition take flight.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

There were 222 laws made by the late Legislature, and over one-half of the people in this State will never know what they are unless they violate them.—Salem Sunbeam.

And more than one-half of the people wouldn't know what they meant if they read them. In fact nobody knows about the laws nowadays until they have been chopped up and guaranteed by the Supreme Court. Our State law machinery should send its grist through some kind of a finishing up mill, so that it could come out with a stamp on it, to show whether it is constitution proof or mere legal tender.—Hackensack Record.

* * * * *

Governor Voorhees is reported to have said that he would order out the First Brigade of the New Jersey National Guard to participate in the welcome to Admiral Dewey and trust to the next Legislature to foot the bills. It is not probable that there will be any difficulty in securing the necessary appropriation, as the expense will not be large. New Jersey should by all means be represented in the parade.—Newark News.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Not for many years have so many Plainfielders gone away for the summer as have left this city this year It is very evident that Plainfield is feeling its share of the properous times. Now the time for the home coming is at hand. Every train brings in a crowd of tanned and sun burned Plainfielders, returning after a delightful outing at the sea-shore, mountains or country. The return of the sojourners has only just begin, however. In the next two weeks they will flock back again in crowds.

* * * * *

A young man from this city writes home to his friends that a very desirable state of affairs exists at Asbury Park at present. The hotels are simply overflowing with pretty girls, he says, while young men are in great demand. He wonders that more Plainfield young men do not spend their vacations there.

WHY?

Why isn't a goat imitation butter?

Why do lovers marry when courtship is so sweet?

Why isn't settling one's debts a paying business?

Why shouldn't a dyspeptic have stomach troubles of his own?

Why does a baby's mother imagine she can understand its dialect?

Why is the average spinster favorable to annexation as a war measure?

Why does the summer girl have so many brothers at the end of the season?

Why doesn't the woman who married a poor man for love want her daughter to do likewise?

Why does a man always say that he's out of practice when he gets beat at any kind of a game?

FACTS AND FANCIES.

It is a mighty homely woman who has not at some time in her life been complimented upon her beauty."

Filkins has got an idea. He has fixed a seat on his lawn mower, and he cuts the grass and exercises his baby at one and the same time.

When you hear a woman declare that her husband is the best man that ever lived you may be pretty sure that she has got him under pretty perfect subjection.

Of course one likes to get rid of a Canadian quarter that has come to him from an unknown source; but considering the worry and fret that accompanies its passage upon an unsuspect it is about as well to pocket the loss yourself.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World

"In Greater New York," which will be at Music Hall Monday night, is announced as a mammouth farce comedy extravaganza, "a glittering spectacular operatic production, more mighty in magnitude than all similar attractions combined." It has really been a great success from the time of it's first production at Olympia Theatre, New York, last season and this year is presented with new features and novelties. It is replete with catchy music, witty repartee, startling denouements, clever comedians and pretty girls, and well known artists and popular favorites. It was played at the Park Theatre Philadelphia, last week, and packed the house at every performance. This week the company is at Asbury Park and other adjacent towns, meeting with greatest success. All who remember "Gayest Manhattan," will find "In Greater New York" a superior production, which cannot fail to please. The dramatic portion of the production is in able hands, the principal character being personated by Mark Murphy, the famous comedian.

. . . . .

One of the most beautiful plays ever seen at Music Hall was the presentation of "The Widow and the Dude" by the Kennedy Company last night. Mr. Kennedy's work as "Gussie Chumly" was thoroughly artistic. Mr. Butler's "Rivola" was the same consistent piece of work that characterized all the actor's performances Miss Kennedy gave a pathetic portrayal of the woman who lives to repent the one falae step. Tonight the company presents the great six-act temperance drama, "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." "Little Kathleen" appears in her beautiful creation of "Mary Morgan," the drunkard's daughter.

"Isham's Octoroons" which will be here Thursday night next at Music Hall, have among the long list of names those of some of the best singers and specialists of their race. The entertainment will be first-class and largely on the operatic, and the scenes to which all have been adapted are piquant and beautifully costumed. The singing is said to be unrivalled and the costuming and scenic effects beautiful. The Octoroons number 40 people and appeared at Madison Square Roof Garden, New York, the entire summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Laire and daughter, Miss Cora Laire, of Richmond street, left Thursday for Annandale, where they will remain until Monday.

E. C. Mulford, of East Fifth street, who has been detained at his home for many months by illness, remains about the same. He is able to walk about a little and at times there are signs of improvement.

—The cool hall of the Y. M. C. A. is a pleasant place to spend an hour Sunday afternoon, when Rev. Thos. Houston, the blind evangelist, will again speak and sing.

—The Y. M. C. A. Star Course of entertainments will open October 30th, when S. T. Ford, the Southern entertainer and story teller, will give one of his popular entertainments.

—C. E. Gulick & Co., the Park grocers, will open a first-class grocery store at the corner of Lincoln place and Duer street, next Saturday. They will carry nothing but first-class goods and a share of public patronage is solicited.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Aug. 26—This week's Call has a scathing editorial on "Procrastination," in which it takes occasion to rake over the coals the members of the Common Council for the manner in which some of the streets have been left by the Brunswick Traction Company and the Watchung Water Company after these companies had laid their tracks and put down their water pipes. Here is another chance for the Citizens' Committee to make itself felt again. At a recent meeting of the Common Council certain members of the Citizens' Committee were told by one of the members that the council was abundantly able to look after the affairs of the borough without the continual interference from this so-called Citizens' Committee. Some of the citizens, however, do not think the members of the council are capable of looking after the welfare of the community and they did not hesitate to tell them so.

A letter has been received from C. H. Hines, who is at Manila in the employ of Uncle Sam. The writer says: "The country is very fertile and if properly handled would be a mine of wealth, but to an American offers no inducements as compared with 'God's Country.' They are offering every inducement to discharged soldiers to re-enlist and remain here but with indifferent success, although their accommodations and treatment are far above that of Cuba, and if one cares to soldier he might do worse than here."

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

CARE OF THE FINGER NAILS.

They Can Be Kept in Perfect Condition With Little Trouble.

A few minutes given every day, once the nails are properly treated, will keep them firm and exquisite in color. After the hands are washed each morning use the nailbrush thoroughly, and then when they are quite dry push back, very gently, the skin that is inclined to grow up around the edges of the nails. Under no circumstances use a steel point to push back this skin, and do not cut it away as the professional manicures are apt to do. While the nail is still moist use the point of a file to remove any dust or specks that the brush has neglected, and then, with nail scissors, sharp, curved, and kept for this purpose only, cut the nails in a shape that suits your finger tips. The ridiculously long nail, which looks like a claw, is entirely out of fashion. Use the file to make smooth the rough edges left by the scissors, and then take the least bit of red nail paste and smear the tiniest morsel on each of the nails. Don't let it get into the edges or roots, for it is only intended as a sort of oil to keep the nails soft and to prevent their growing horny; then sprinkle a pinch of powder on the polisher and rub each nail with a quick, even stroke that will result in giving it a brightness that is refined looking, but not a brilliancy that suggests that one only shines at her finger-tips. After this give the hands another bath, using hot water and a delicate soap, then close them and rub one set of nails against the other, achieving in this way a proper finish.

Charms for Baby.

In Ireland a belt made of the woman' shair is often placed about the child to ward off harm.

Mothers in Holland place a curious mixture of garlic, salt, l read and steak in the cradle of their offspring.

The Grecian mother, before putting her baby into the cradle turns around three times before the fire while singing her favorite lullaby.

Welsh mothers put a pair of tongs or a knife in the cradle as a charm aganist ill, and a similar practice prevails in some parts of England.

Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their babies, and those of another Balkan race attach bits of asafetida around the necks of their infants.

The peasant women of European countries use charms to keep their first-born babies from ill. These charms vary with the different nationalities. Here are a few of them:

The Turkish mother hangs a variety of amulets about her infant, while a small piece of mud, steeped in hot water, prepared with certain ceremonies, is stuck upon the child's forehead.

School Girls Can't Wear Corsets.

Bogoljewow, the newly appointed Russian Minister of Public Instruction, has begun the duties of his office by issuing a drastic order to the effect that corsets must not be worn by young women attending high schools, universities and music and art schools; they are to be encouraged to wear the national costume. The Minister says that he has spent much time in visiting girl's school, and has made the discovery that the corset as an article of dress is distinctly prejudicial to the health and physical development of the wearers.

The Girl and Her Shoe Lace.

An ingenious maid was lacing her walking shoes recently when the lace broke. That was not the worst of it—she was in a hurry, and no string was available. In her drawer, however, was a piece of elastic tape—not the round elastic, but a size larger. This, in her extreme need, she cut into lengths and laced into a tie. So well did the knots hold and so elastic and yielding was the sensation, that she uses the tape altogether, and cares not a bit for ordinary shoe laces.

Corean Women Monopolize Latchkeys.

A curious custom in Seoul, Corea, is the law which makes it obligatory for every man to retire to his home when the huge bronze bell of the city proclaims it to be the hour of sunset and the time for closing the gates. No man is allowed to be in the streets after that hour under pain of flogging, but the women are allowed to go about and visit their friends.

To Clean Piano Keys.

The white ivory keys of a piano should never be cleaned with water, which discolors them. Instead, they should be rubbed over with a soft flannel or piece of silk dipped in oxygenized water, which can be obtained at any chemist's, and when the notes are stained or greasy use methylated spirits, gin or diluted whisky.

Taking Stains Out of Belts.

White hooks and eyes often rust a white waist or skirt belt. To remove, cover the spot with salt, squeeze lemon juice over it and rub well; then rinse with cold water at once, as salts of lemon is liable to eat a hole if left unchecked.

New Electric Device for Lamps.

Kerosene lamps are automatically lighted by a new electrical device in which a battery is placed in the base of the lamp, with an induction coil in the post, to cause a spark to pass across the wick from one electroide to another when a switch in the base is closed.

NEW EMPIRE STYLES.

Henriette Rousseau, Writing From Paris, Says They Are Coming In.

On the way home from abroad a stay of a couple of weeks in Paris is in order for all good Americans. There is the usual bewildering array of theater, magasin and promenade, and Paris is always Paris. Gay, bright and apparently the happiest people live in it. True, just now the endless procession of carriages and men on horseback is thinner in ranks than it will be in a month, but there is still enough to see. The very absence of all the great social lights gives one a better chance to look about to see what the future holds for women in the way of dress.

From the present outlook it would appear that we are decidedly in for first empire and directoire styles mingled in a way to preserve the best ideas in each and eliminate those less becoming.

There is one thing very noticeable, and that is the unusual thickness of the new silks. They look like those we read about—the silks that can stand alone. There is a splendid weave where the front is a rich, heavy grosgrain cord and the back of satin quite as fine. These are to be made in such a way as will show both sides—in jabot folds or loose scallops or some other arrangement. Tunics would have been a good way to show this superb double faced goods, but tunics are undeniably out of style. Not one first class house here is making them unless to order, and one may imagine that a woman is not going to order a tunic when told that they are out.

A new fashion is in the use of silks for tailor made suits. The silks must be of very firm quality, and then they are treated exactly as the cloth suits have been. A heavy grosgrain or peau de soie is certainly most beautiful when made in this way. Black or the very darkest shade of gray or prune or brown, for there is to be much dark brown this fall, are the only colors. All others would be manifestly out of place in a tailor made suit.

Some of these admit of velvet cuffs, collars and any other necessary adjunct. The skirts are not so wide or flaring, 3½ yards being the width of most of them.

One reason why American women have worn less heavy silk for the last few years is that it was not considered exactly good form to wear it in the street. Even the taffeta was rarely seen in the street, while indias and soft foulards were worn everywhere, but that was a sort of compromise.

Now we shall hear the delightful sound of the rustle of rich silks as we pass along. I saw one model suit made of the richest of black grosgrain. This had a frosty bloom that no other silk ever seems to attain.

The skirt was quite plain, but had fine rows of quilted stitching three inches from the bottom. The skirt fitted snugly about the hips and was 3½ yards wide. It was lined with taffeta and had a separate underlining, to which was sewed a round dozen of little ruffles each edged with narrow white lace. This held the skirt out well.

All tailor and in fact all other outdoor costumes have hat and parasol to match the general style of the gown. That is why Frenchwomen all dress so well. It is because things are chosen with a careful regard of their fitness for each other.

The hat to wear with this black silk costume was of black satin straw turned up in front and trimmed with black velvet and one high directoire plume. Black velvet strings tie under the chin of not only this, but nearly all other hats and bonnets. Parasols have immensely long handles, more like walking sticks. These, with the fancy long, narrow mantelets, make the wearer look like a picture. The empire and directoire styles are not ugly at all when modified by common sense and modern necessities, but from the incroyables good Lord deliver us!

Colors are rich and warm and many of them very bright, but either because of the superiority of French taste or better grouping they do not look so raw as the crude primary colors we have been condemned to wear for two or three seasons. Black velvet for whole hats and large poke bonnets and black velvet in piece and in ribbon is used to an unusual extent to trim hats—in fact, I think I may say that there is much more black used as a foundation for all millinery than has been seen before for a long time. There are flowers of velvet and satin, mostly roses, chrysanthemums in beautiful shades and double hollyhocks.

HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

A CLEVER WOMAN.

MRS. ELLEN S. MUSSEY IS DEAN OF THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE OF LAW.

Studied Law in Her Husband's Office and at His Death Succeeded to His Business—Practices at All Courts in the District and Thoroughly Understands Her Work.

Mrs. Ellen Spencer Mussey of Washington is dean of the Washington college of Law. Mrs. Mussey was born in Ohio, her father being Platt R. Spencer, author of the Spencerian system of penmanship.

She removed to Washington when a young women to take a place as principal of the women's department in the Spencerian business college, but soon resigned it to become the wife of Gen. R. D. Mussey.

Gen. Mussey was a man of fine literary attainments and broad views as to the scope of women's efforts, and encouraged his wife in her study of law. Some years after their marriage Gen. Mussey had a severe attack of illness of some duration, and Mrs. Mussey went into his office to conduct the business, intending to retire on his restoration to health, but the general insisted on retaining her as his partner, and the relation existed for 16 years, terminating only in his death, in 1892.

Mrs. Mussey has ever since conducted the business, retaining the large clientele of her husband, as well as becoming the attorney for many women and women's associations. She practices before all the courts of the district, including the supreme court of the United States.

Her chief work is done as attorney for the estates of widows, as an investment and real estate lawyer, in looking after the business of foreign clients who leave their interests in this country in her hands, and as attorney for several of the foreign legations.

Gen Mussey was the first attorney for the national Red Cross, and at his death Mrs. Mussey acceded to the the request of Miss Barton to become attorney to the society in his stead.

The woman's law class of the district of Columbia was founded by Mrs. Mussey in 1896, and has been most successful.

Domestic Economy.

First—Pay cash for everything or settle all bills at the end of the week or month.

Secondly—Examine the supplies as they come in to see if they are in good condition and of the quality ordered. Then put them away in their special receptacles and in the atmosphere best adapted for their preservation.

Thirdly—Be as careful in the use of groceries which you have bought in large quantities as though they had been bought in small parcels.

Fourthly—Buy fruit, vegetables, game, poultry, meat and fish when they are in season, instead of paying high prices for unseasonable delicacies which are not at their best.

Fifthly—Use all "left overs." Tiny scraps of meat and vegetables, and even a spoonful of gravy, will all contribute to material for croquettes and soups, and a teaspoonful of jam or jelly will serve to flavor a pudding sauce.

Care of the Eyelashes.

The ancients made an art of the cultivation of the eyelashes. It was recognized that, besides adding to the expression of the eyes, the lashes preserved them from the dust, cold, wind and too glaring light, all of which tend to irritate and often inflame the eye. It is therefore not a vanity to endeavor to obtain them and then preserve them from falling out.

A little pure vaseline applied to the eye-lashes every night will aid their growth and strengthen them.

Marking Bed Linen.

A good way to mark bed linnen is as follows: Take colored embroidery cotton—red black and blue. With one color make in cross stitch or Kensington outline the figure 1 on a pair of sheets and pillow slips, figure 2 on a second set, and so on until all of one marking are done. When another lot is made up mark the same way with black; still a third with blue. The figure can be small and as much hidden as possible, or more ornamental.

Cure for Hiccoughs.

Two teaspoonfuls of quinine juice were recently administered to a sufferer from an aggravated case of hiccoughs, and cured, after many other remedies had failed.

Babies' Corner.

In some new American churches small rooms are attached, known as "babies' corners," where mothers may leave their children while attending service.

Household Talks

THE WAY TO STAND.

Ninety-Nine Women Out of Every Hundred Stand Incorrectly.

"Ninety-nine women out of every 100 stand with protruding chins and abdomes," was the statement which greeted my eyes in a magazine of recent issue and sent me on a tour of inspection. Really I had no idea that there were so many women who did not know how to stand and walk or did not care to learn. You see, I had been careless, too, in not using my powers of observation. There is but one correct standing position, and that is attained by lifting the chest high and throwing the entire weight of the body on the hips. Then the centre of the chest will be directly over the balls of the feet, while the heels just touch the ground, shoulders easy and not thrown back, eyes level and chin drawn in. This position can be kept a long time with ease, and the high chest will give a better figure than a full bust, for the waist line is lengthened.

"With neck relaxed bend the body without moving the hips to the front, to the right, to the left, to the back, then to the front and round again. This exercise has an effect upon the digestion and will often cure sick headaches, and it gives a flexible and graceful carriage to the body. It will bring one rather near the ideal figure—high and full chest, long and flexible waist, well-poised head and free-moving limbs. Remember that all this can be secured without the aid of expensive apparatus or an instructor, if you will devote but twenty minutes a day to exercise; exercising one day and skipping two is useless.

"And the sitting—well, it is the simplest act imaginable. Just drop easily into a chir and remain there without squirming. On arising draw the feet under the chair to secure the poise of the body, and the muscles will do the rest without fuss or bother. No chair arms will be needed, even when you get to be an old woman. Watch the women in the next trolley car you enter and count those who sit and rise gracefully, and if you find more than one or two you will have better luck than I ever had.

"Very few human beings take sleep as nature intended—with relaxed muscles. Animals are mere inert lumps of flesh and bones while they sleep, and graceful even at that. Babies are equally limp, but they begin to cramp their muscles when they begin to walk. If we could all fall upon our couches with the heaviness of inanimate objects, and remain so until we wakened in the morning sleep would, indeed, be a comfort and rest, and we would find our muscles and joints freshened up as they are not now. I will own to a few cramped muscles, if you will be blame where it belongs—on the brain, which refuses to give its servants a complete rest. I know of one woman who admits that she sleeps with relaxed muscles, and that is a devotee of the Delsarte system of physical culture, and she has educated herself to the point of making each muscle independent in its working, but subservient to her will."

An automatic ventilator that neither sleeps nor forgets, says Demorests, but constantly secures a free exit of hot and contaminating air, and an abundant entrance of that which is pure.

Walls and ceilings of patent plaster finished with enamel paint.

For Down Pillows

For the woman with a short purse and an inordinate craze for down pillows here is a suggestion. It is one worth having, for it means no outlay of cash, and the object in view is accomplished, with only the fatigue consequent upon long walks and zealous reaching.

Is the woman summering in the vicinity of a pond upon whose banks a profusion of cattails grow, then her task is easy, according to the vernacular of a small boy, "as falling off a log." Gather all the cottontails you can that stage when the pods are ripened to bursting, and the silky down contained therein will fill pillows galore and answer the same purpose as the expensive article.

Another substitute is the flossy substance of the common milkweed pods. Gather these in the fall of the year, hang them in large paper bags in a dark closet, and before the winter is over each pod will have burst and your bag will be filled with a delightfully soft material.

HOW FOSTER BEGAN LIFE.

Addison G. Foster of Washington Says "No Man Ever Gave Me a Dollar".

HE MADE HIMSELF RICH.

His Whole Fortune Was Made by His Own Exertions—Started As a Poor Farmers General Boy.

When He Was Asked if He Was an Entirely Self-made Man, He Told the Story of How He Had Become Rich, and Attained His Present Position.

"No man ever gave me a dollar," said Addison G. Foster, the new United States Senator from Washington, when asked if he was a self-made man.

Clark, the new Senator from Montana, dug a fortune out of the ground with his hands. Scott, of West Virginia, panned gold in Colorado to get his start in the world. Foster began with as little as these men, but he made his money in trading and manufacturing and in real estate. He is a Republican.

"I was born in Massachusetts," said Mr. Foster, "but I came West with my father when I was a boy and settled in Wisconsin. There were no railroads and we came by the lakes of Sheboygan. I helped my father hew a farm out of the virgin forest in Wisconsin. We had to cut down the trees and have ox teams drag them away before we could plant anything. Later we went to Northern Illinois, just west of Chicago, and farmed there.

"Farming on prairie land was easy to anyone who had farmed in the Wisconsin forest.

"After a time my brother and I went out into Kansas and did some farming, hauling our products into Kansas City. But I got tired of that and gve it up to go into a town in Minnesota and teach school. That was where I earned the first dollar that ever came to me through my own exertions alone."

The new Senator looks the business man. He is of medium heigth, stout, wtih gray hair and mustache. He talks in the straightforward, business-like way which is becoming more common in the Senate every year. He said he did not expect to make a great reputation as an orator; but if he does he will be with the majority.

The Kansas Sea Lizard.

The big sea lizard dug out of Kansas chalk two years ago has been mounted at the American Museum of Natural History, and is now on exhibition. The skeleton, chestnut colored, is mounted upon a plaster panel twnety-five feet long. Every bone lies in the original chalk in which it was deposited. Mr. Bourne, a lawyer of Scott City, Kan., discovered the skeleton while hunting for fossils in the Bad Lands of the Smoky Hill River in western Kansas. The tail stuck out of the side of a chalky gulley. The skeleton was cut out in a dozen or fifteen chunks of chalk, which were shipped to the museum. Here the successive slabs were developed with delicate instruments, and it was found that an entire mososaur was imbedded, from the tip of the long pointed snout to the tip of the tail. It was slightly less than thirty feet in length, and belonged to the largest anl most powerful type of sea lizards which ravaged the great American Mediterranean Sea in the chalk period.

The animal lies exactly as it perished upon its ventral surface, with the fore and hind paddles outstretched and the backbone thrown into an S-shaped curve. The tip of the tail is missing. The skull is four feet long and the hind paddle three and a half. It is estimated that the girth of the body behind the fore paddles was nine feet. The jaws are armed with powerful teeth. The neck is only two feet long. The back is eight feet long and the tail fifteen feet in length, was evidently the greatest propeller of the body.

The specimen agrees closely in size with the fragmentary skeleton of a similar animal described by Prof. Cope in 1871 at Fort Wallace, Kan. In the neck and chest region it was found that the cartilage supporting the trachea, forming a broad band along the abdominal line and supporting ten of the anterior ribs, were all well preserved. This renders possible a complete restoration of the chest region. Upon this turns the much-debated scientific question whether these animals are sea-serpents or sea lizards.

Date Growing in Arizona.

If present advices are correct another important industry, that of date growing, has been inaugurated in this country. Through the efforts of our Agricultural Department the date tree of Algiers has been successfully transplanted and successfully acclimated in Arizona, and the beginning of another profitable industry has thus been made. It is predicted that in a few years American orchards will supply the entire home demand for dates. It would seem that not only Arizona, but New Mexico, the "staked plain" region of Texas, and considerable patches in California and the Indian Teritory afford the peculiar conditions of soil and climate necessary for the date. It does not appear to thrive in regions where the humidity is so great as in our Gulf States. A single tree yields from 100 to 400 pounds of dates per annum.

BIRD FLIGHT

The Stork as a Model for Aerial Navigation.

The latest flying machine is the invention of Herr Arthur Stenzel, of Hamburg, Germany. Like many of his predecessors, especially Lilienthal, he has made a special study of the flight of birds to guide him in his construction work. The grace and power of the stork especially appealed to him, and the resemblance which his machine bears to that bird is easily noted.

One of the chief problems in aerial navigation has been that of alighting gently and at will, and this he has learned from the stork as it hovers over his nest. It rises and moves forward by the action of the huge elastic wings, which imitate faithfully the action of a flying bird.

LATEST FLYING MACHINE.

These wings are made of hollow ribs of steel covered with very fine linen, rendered air-tight by a bath in liquid rubber. They spread nineteen feet on each side and are five feet broad.

The motive power or force that waves the wings up and down and forward is a small, but very powerful, motor driven by compressed, carbonic acid. The machine is steered by the tail, which consists of two interacting blades which can be turned to right or left, up or down.

The motor, which generates three-horse power, weighs but eight pounds. The carrying power of this machine is most remarkable, for if the wings flap but seven times in five minutes it will bear a man weighing 150 pounds up into the air. It is easily guided and descends gently at the will of the operator.

Hitherto experiments have been conducted merely to show the corectness of the principles employed, but the inventor is now engaged in constructing a still more perfect and lighter machine with aluminum frame covered with silk, by which he hopes to take longer flights, remaining in the air as long as he pleases and going in any direction, with or against the wind, just as the stork does.

A Blessed Stamp.

"It used to make me mad," said a lady teacher, "to find the backs of new periodicals disfigured by the analine stamp of the newsdealer. "What right," I used to say, "have these fellows to print their advertisements on things I paid for?' Now I feel differently. It came about through a visit which I paid to another city last week. As I passed through the depot I bought a magazine at the newstand, and later on, when I was uptown, I had occasion to step into a large department store. As usual they had a book counter, and while looking at a volume that caught my eye I laid my magazine carelessly on top of a pile of periodicals. When I was walking away a strange man walked up to me and said, 'Excuse me, madam, but you have forgotton to pay for that magazine.' 'Why, I did not get it here,' I replied, greatly startled. 'I had it with me and have been holding it in my hands all the time.' As soon as I spoke I realized that that wasn't strictly true, and the girl clerk, who had rushed around the counter, contradicted me at once. 'It ain't so!' she said breathlessly. 'She wasn't holding it in her hand! I saw her pick it up myself, right off the top of the pile!' 'I witnessed that myself,' said the floorwalker, 'madame has probably forgotten,' he added, ironically.

"I thought I should faint. A thousand things rushed into my mind. Of course I could prove my innocence by the man at the depot but that would involve the scandal of an inquiry—probably an arrest—and some people would always have doubts. On the other hand, payment would be a confession of guilt. The affair would certainly cost me my position and blight my character forever. I held out the magazine mechanically, and there on the cover was the big, hideous, blessed stamp of the dealer. We all saw it at once, and, oh, I wish you could have witnessed the abasement of the floorwalker! He groveled. The very curl came out of his mustache. He told me he had a wife and children, also a mother, which I took the liberty to doubt. His anguish was all that saved me from hysterics. The clerk shed maudlin tears and 'oped the lady wouldn't bear no malice. I treated them both with scorn. I spurned them. When I went home I bought peanuts of the depot newsdealer."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Scalp Masseuse.

A young woman in Brooklyn has made a place for herself as a scalp masseuse. She goes from patient to patient, or sometimes sees several patients at the house of one and receives a few at her own rooms. The object of the treatment is to arrest threatened baldness, whether of men or women. The masseues's business has so increased that for nine months of the year she is occupied most of the day and part of the night.

The work of massage is done chiefly with the balls of the fingers. This part of the treatment lasts twenty minutes. It is designed to increase the circulation of the blood in the scalp, so that the hair may be nourished properly. In addition to this the masseuse shampoos the heads of some patients and in the case of all she recommends lotions, the prescriptions of regular practioners.

How He Eats.

"She says her husband is awfully obliging. He eats almost anything that is set before him."

"Dear me, she couldn't expect him to eat it if it was set behind him, could she?"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

A STRANGE SEA WORM.

Delicacy Attainable For Only a Few Moments Each Year.

THINK IT VERY EDIBLE.

It Is One of the Most Curious Little Annelid Worms and It Is Called the Palolo Viridis.

It Hides Itself Away in the Coral Reefs, and Only Comes Up to the Surface Once or Twice in a Year, and Then Only For a Moment at a Time.

The history of the curious little annelid worm, Palolo viridis, of the Samoan Islands, in its development, exhibits one of the most wonderful phases of life in the sea. The phenomenon for which this sea worm is noted is its regular appearance in myriads, on the surface of the sea, for a few minutes only on one or two days of the year. This swarming of palolos occur in the vicinity of the coral reefs, and take place at the dawn of the day at the time of the moon's last quartering, in the months of October and November.

Naturalists, in describing them to the scientific societies, were entirely in the dark as to the character of the creature's head. Subsequent observations, however, resulted in the discovery of perfect specimens or of fragments with heads attached.

The life story of the palolos shows that this appearance of headless bodies on the surface of the sea has reference to its peculiar breeding habits. It dwells in the instices of the coral reefs; and when the spawning season arrives the bodies of the males and the females break away from their heads and rise in countless numbers to the surface of the water. The sea then presents a view for several inches below the surface one wriggling mass of green and brown worms.

The natives of Samoa hold the palolo in high esteem as a toothsome edible. For days before the certain appearance of the worm there is great excitement among the natives and much making ready of canoes for the coming catch. When the proper time arrives the whole population, man woman and child, makes its way in canoes, by the faint light of the waning moon, to the lcoality where the palolo occurs. Here the natives wait for the dawn of day, at which the palolos rise to the surface, but only a few minutes before and after sunrise. The eager natives gather them quickly and in immense numbers, return to the shore to feast and to dispatch presents of palolos to distant relatives, whose regions are not favored by the visit of this tid-bit.

The palolo is from one inch to eighteen inches long and about one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch in thickness. The head is slightly narrower than the body. The body is fringed with a row of hairs on each side, the hairs gathered in clusters, two clusters, one on each side, to each segment of the body. The posterior extremity tapers, and is armed with four tectacles, which are in two pairs, one pair very much longer than the other. The worm has been described in the Proceedings of the Zoological Society of London by the Rev. S. J. Whitmee, as "moving rapidly with considerable elegance in a spiral manner like a screw," and that they "looked like the tendrils of a twining plant."

Temperature and Sex.

Many experiments have been made recently to determine the influence of temperature on the sex of offspring. The results seem to indicate that a high temperature is favorable to the production of females. This is notably the case with horses, and many confirmations of the theory have been drawn from the lower type of animals.

Now the French naturalist, M. Mellard, has discovered that the same law governs the vegetable kingdom—or, at least, the one species with which he experimented.

Of plants raised from seed sown on April 18, 1896, 86 per cent were males, while seed sown June 25 produced plants almost exclusively (99 per cent.) females. The averaged temperature experienced by the first group was 12 degrees Centigrade, while the second was exposed to a mean temperature of 18 degrees Centigrade. Soil and conditions were the same in both cases.

Beware of Bright Plate.

Users of metal-polishing powders must beware what they use for brightening their electro-plated or silver forks and spoons. For the British Food Journal publishes the result of an examination by Dr. Van Hamel Roos, of Amsterdam, of a metal-polishing powder used largely in Holland, and no doubt elsewhere, that is calculated to cause uneasiness. The powder is of a reddish color, and contains mercury in considerable quantity. The plate on which it is employed is, after use, covered with a brilliant layer of mercury, the poisonous effects of which, when the articles are used for the table purposes, hardly needs insisting on. Let housewives, therefore, look to their plate powder.—London Chronicle.

A Nine-Footer's Bones.

Relics of a prehistoric age have been brought to light in Noble County. The find is in York Township where workmen excavating for a public highway found the skeleton of an inhabitant of early days. The bones indicate that the person was fully nine feet tall.

The bones are unusually large and the position of the skeleton when found indicated that the person had been buried in a sitting position. The belief is advanced that the remains are those of a mound builder.

The Dead of the War.

The official report of loss of life in the army during the Spanish war places the toal number of dead at 5,731. The statement which refers to the period between May 1, 1898, and Feb. 28, 1899, says that 329 soldiers were killed in action, 125 died from wounds received, while 5,277 deaths were caused by disease due to climate, exposure and poor rations.

GOLF.

The results of the play for the Mrs. C. W. McCutchen Cup on the links of the Park Golf Club, this afternoon, will be watched with unusual interest by those who are following the progress of the competition there this summer. Gifford W. Cooley, W. de la R. Anderson and Meredith Dryden are now in the first rank within one point of each other. It is expected that the three will all compete this afternoon which will make the afternoon's play unusually lively. Then the other competitors for the trophy are beginning to return after the summer vacations and several will be on hand for the tournament play. If Anderson continues in his regular form, the others will have to do some close playing to keep up with him despite the fact that he plays from scratch. If any of the leading trio are able to get low score for the next two Saturdays, the rest will have hard work overhauling that lead.

The Townsend brothers are playing on the Park Golf Club course again after spending several weeks at the shore. It took a few days' play to bring them up to their old form but both promise to do exceedingly well during the fall months and are likely to make a good showing at the tournament play.

The golfers of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club are returning to Plainfield from their summer vacations and every day sees an increase in the activity at that popular club. The golf season there will be reopened actively with the first of September with tournaments and matches with other clubs.

There is talk of organizing a golf club at Cranford and the laying out of links on a large tract of land between Burnside avenue and the river.

The curse supposed to rest on Newstead abbey, which Byron inherited—that it can never descend from father to eldest son—seems to remain unbroken. The late owner, Mr. Webb, has recently died and the estate once more passes out of the direct line of inheritance. Byron had a skull, supposed to be the skull belonging to the corporeal remains of the ghost which is alleged to haunt Newstead abbey. It was used by Byron as a punchbowl. This skull went with the property and was possessed by Col. Wildman, Byron's successor and a Waterloo veteran, and eventually by Mr. Webb. Mr. Webb buried the skull, perhaps hoping to ban the curse, but, notwithstanding this, Newstead yet another time passes away from the direct heir.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by L. W. Randolph, Druggist.

The icebergs of the two nemispheres are entirely different in shape. The Arctic bergs are irregular in form, with lofty pinnacles and glittering domes, while the Antartic bergs are flat-topped and solid-looking.

A process has been discovered by which sails of vessels of all kinds can be made out of paper pulp, and it is claimed that they serve quite as well as canvas and are very much cheaper. They swell and flap in the wind like the genuine old-fashioned article, and are supposed to be untearable.

The red hat of the cardinal costs him more money than kings pay for any except their very best crowns. Before accepting it the grateful prelate must make offerings to the propaganda and to the titular church at Rome, and pay fees to a long list of officials, ranging from chamberlains of the vatican down to the cooks and sweepers and soldiers of the Swiss guard. Indeed the new cardinal has to pay fees at every step from the moment of his creation to the occasion of his receiving the red hat in public consistory, and when all is over he finds himself out of pocket to the extent of $2,500 at least.

Water boils at different temperatures, according to the elevation above the sea level. In London, water boils, practically at 212 degrees F.; at Munich, Germany, at 209 1-2 degrees; at the City of Mexico, at 200 degrees, and in the Himalayas, at an elevation of 18,000 feet above the level of the sea, at 180 degrees. These differences are caused by the varying pressure of the atmosphere at these points. In London the whole weight of the air has to be overcome. In Mexico, 7,000 feet above the sea, there are 7,000 feet less of atmosphere to be resisted, consequently less heat is required, and boiling takes place at a lower temperature.

A COMPARISON

American and European Industries Compared to the Credit of Former.

Those who are interested in comparisons between the vast industrial establishments of America on the one hand and of Europe on the other will find no cause for disparagement in the case of the latter, in view of facts officially published in a recent London Trades Review. From this it appears that the largest number of blast furnaces possessed by a single concern in the world is owned by the Alpine Montan Gesellschaft of Vienna and Styria, which has a total of thirty-two furnaces; but as most of these are of old plans and methods, worked with charcoal fuel, the fact is more important that of the modern class of furnaces the largest number owned by a single firm is twenty-six, owned by the Beards of Glasgow, who own the works of Gartsherrie, Eglinton, Lugar and Muirkirk of Scotland, these being equal to a total output of 400,000 tons a year, or about one-third of the total pig-iron production of that country. Next to this firm is that of Bokkow, Vaughn & Co. of Middlesborough, with a total of twenty-four furnaces, equal to an annual output of 750,000 tons of pig-iron if all were in blast. The capacity in both these cases is below that of some American firms, although the number of furnaces is larger.

Man Knocked Out By a Screech Owl.

John Young Mayes of Springfield, Ky., tells a story of a remarkable encounter which he had recently that would tax the credulity of his friends in believing were it not for his good reputation for truth and veracity and the fact that he bears the scars of battle in evidence. Mr. Mayes says that while passing under some trees in his yard, his attenion was attracted by a couple of screech owls that flew at him in a threatening manner. He, however, paid little attention to them, thinking they could do him no harm, when suddenly one of them flew at him and struck him full in the face. The blow was so sudden and came with so much force that he was knocked down and partially stunned. The owls continued the attack until Mr. Mayes made his escape into the house. He now exhibits a bruised eye and several scratches about his eyes and nose.

Overrun By Big Snails.

Snails of a strange variety have made their appearance at Osgood, and it is supposed they are brought from some Eastern conservatory in flowers. They are very long, some measuring six inches in length. They have multiplied until there are thousands of them. A number of wells and cisterns have ben destroyed and some persons now keep a ring of salt around their wells to preserve them from their ravages. They are now trying to exterminate the snails, and snail hunts take place nightly, one person often catching from 300 to 400. Where the snails crawl over the grass they leave a phosphorescent glow, by which they can be traced, says the Indianapolis Sentinal. When found they sprinkle salt on them, which kills them almost instantly.

Illness Made Him Grow.

Among the hospital patients of Dr. Lucas Championniere in London is a man seven feet four inches high. He is twenty-seven years old and is still growing. He takes after his father, who was seven feet eight, whereas his mother was short. At the age of eighteen he was a youth below middle height, but after an illnes he grew four inches in a few days. A second illness produced another rapid increase of his height. After this he had several successive attacks of a debilitating complaint. On recovery he invariably found he had grown several inches, till when at twenty-one he went to serve in the army he had reached seven feet. He was the youngest of twelve children, and is the tallest of them all by a foot or so.

Too Vastly Different.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the instiution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted, says the Youth's Companion.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood I use the muscles of some other man."

SIDE ISSUES.

It is easy to tell the religion of the editor who capitalizes devil.

Everybody detests flattery, but it is wonderful how much of it they can stand.

The reason some people call it "Xmas" is probably because it takes so many Xes to go around on Christmas.

The ladies consider "high five" a very harmless and delightful game, but "seven up," which requires more playing and less talking, is awfully wicked.

The Fastest Cruiser.

China may be a slow nation, but she likes fast boats. The fastest cruiser in he world has just been completed by the Armstrongs for her, and the famous Schichan firm recently built her a torpedo boat capable of covering 35.2 knots per hour. The new cruiser is to be known as the Hai Tien, of 4,400 tons, and under natural draught will have a speed of 23.6 knots per hour. At this rate she could cross the Atlantic in about four and one-half days.

DRYDEN NOW LEADS FOR M'CUTCHEN CUP.

Made Low Score At Park Golf Club Saturday.

ANDERSON IN HARD LUCK.

MADE NINETY-EIGHT DESPITE LOSS OF THREE BALLS.

Anderson Was Second In Saturday's Competition—Third Honors Divided Between W. R. Faber and H. D. Hibbard—Dryden Has Most Points for Trophy With Anderson Second and CooleyThird—a Poor Day.

There was a general shakeup among the leading competitors for the Mrs. C. W. McCutchen Cup at the Park Golf Club course, Saturday afternoon As a result of the play of Saturday Meredith Dryden, the club secretary, took the lead with W. de la R. Anderson, club champion, second, while Gifford W. Cooley, who has been in the lead for sometime, fell back to third place. The honors for the day's play went to Dryden whose net score was down at 91.

With threatening clouds at every hand, the day was not by any means an ideal one for golf. Those who did venture out prepared to brave the rain that appeared imminent. It didn't come, however, and the golfers played round without hinderance.

The attendance was fair and a few ladies were present. Most of those who turned out were competing for the trophy. Seven scores were handed in and several others entered for the tournament but failed to pass in their score cards.

Dryden played during the morning and made the best he has done yet in the tournament play. He completed the eighteen holes in 108 which, minus his handicap of 17, gave him a net score of 91, which was lowest for the day. Another week will probably see him playing with a lower handicap.

Anderson and W. J. R. Thiers made their two rounds together. Anderson was up against hard luck. Three balls managed to loose themselves for him despite his efforts and those of his caddy. Six extra strokes were consequently counted against him. Even under these circumstances he managed to keep his score down to 98, which gave him second for the day's play.

Gifford W. Cooley was way off his usual form and did no better than 127, which did not help him any in the contest for points. Charles E. Faber, who played round with Charles Dupee, ran against hard luck all the way and met with sundry adventures in the various hazards. His gross score was 131. Dupee did the eighteen holes in 122, but did not enter for the trophy. He has been allotted no handicap as yet.

W. R. Faber tied for third honor with H. D. Hibbard, with a net score of 101. It was the first time that Faber scored for the trophy as he plays in the tournament very seldom. The Townsends, V. F. Green, the champion whist team and other candidates for trophy honors were absent.

As a result of the finish of Saturday Meredith Dryden is now in the lead, he having scored 10½ points for the cup. W. de la R. Anderson is second with 9½ points. Last week they were tied for second place. Gifford W. Cooley, who has been in the lead for the past month, fell back to third place with eight points. C. E. Faber remains fourth. There was no other change in the order except that H. D. Hibbard moved from eighth place to seventh, where he is now tied with E. Douglass, with 3½ points each. W. R. Faber scored half a point as a result of tying for third place.

The scores handed in for the McCutchen Cup were as follows:

	Gross.	Handicap.	Net.
Meredith Dryden....	108	17	91
W. de la R. Anderson	98	0	98
W. R. Faber.....	131	26	101
H. D. Hibbard.....	119	18	101
Charles E. Faber.....	131	24	107
Gifford W. Cooley....	127	9	118

The official standing of the candidates for the cup follows:

Meredith Dryden	10½
W. de la R. Anderson	9½
Gifford W. Cooley	8
Charles E. Faber	7
G. W. Faber	6
Samuel Townsend	4½
E. T. Douglass	3½
H. D. Hibbard	3½
Geo. T. Rogers	3
Arthur Peck	3
Fred P. Taylor	2½
S. S. Squires	2½
Wm. A. Townsend	2½
A. B. Laing	2
Volney F. Green	2
W. J. R. Thiers	2
Fred S. Overton	1½
Clarence S. Roome	1½
Augustus VanDeventer	1
C. W. McCutchen	½
W. R. Faber	½

Miss Daisy Elsberg was the only competitor to hand in her score for the Buttfield Cup. She played the necessary nine holes in the morning, making the round in 85. Her handicap is 18, giving her a net score of 67.

TALK FOR BUSINESS MEN

INTERESTING TOPICS TO BE HEARD AT CLAMBAKE.

A Meaty Mental Programme Arranged for the Guests of the Plainfield Advancement Association Next Wednesday.

When the business men of Plainfield and their invited guests gather at the Mountain Park Inn Wednesday they can be assured of a full day's enjoyment, which will be provided for them by the members of the Plainfield Advancement Association on the occasion of the first annual clambake of this important organization.

Arrangements have all been perfected for the function, which will bring together many of the most prominent business and professional men of this city and the borough. Besides these there will also be present a number of gentlemen from out of town, who have been asked to attend the outing, that they may lend their influence and support towards the ultimate welfare of the city whose interests are being looked after by the Advancement Association.

The clambake will be prepared and ready to serve as early as 1 o'clock. Stages will be on hand to convey the guests from the end of the trolley line to the Inn.

The committee in charge of the day's festivities have prepared a somewhat informal programme, of which the following is an epitome:

The guests will be welcomed by Mayor Smalley, president of Advancement Association, who will make a short address. John I. Holly will fill the important position of toast master. Mayor Rockfellow is down to speak on "Plainfield's Interests." The Hon. J. J. Bergen, of Somerville, will follow the mayor and tell the guests all about "Our Neighbors." The "Interests of City and Borough" will be ably handled by the Hon. Charles A. Reed, while "The Sanitation of Cities" will be Col. Fuller's subject. Other speakers will be the Hon. Alvah Clark, "Influence of Somerset County;" Charles McBride, of Elizabeth, "The Press;" Judge Hiram B. Steele, "Suburban Trolley Interests;" Walter L. Hetfield, "Municipal Government;" B. A. Hegamen, Jr., "Improved Railroad Facilities for Plainfield;" J. E. Martine, "What May Be Accomplished by the Plainfield Advancement Association for Plainfield;" W. A. Coddington, "Judiciary and the Law;" Judge W. N. Runyon, "Influence of the Ladies' on the Advancement of Plainfield."

The tickets issued for the clambake are not transferable. Those to whom they have been sent are requested not to allow them to fall into the hands of others. If the receiver cannot use them it is requested that they be returned to the committee, thus allowing the latter to keep the guests free from objectionable characters.

HEAVY TRAINS CRASH NEAR WHITEHOUSE.

Serious Rear End Collision on the Jersey Central.

TWO MEN SERIOUSLY HURT.

FIFTY FREIGHT AND COAL CARS WERE OVERTURNED AND DERAILED.

Freight Train Broke in Two at Water Tank at Whitehouse and Loaded Coal and Freight Train Came Down Mountain Grade Too Fast to be Stopped—Traffic Delayed for Eighteen Hours.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Whitehouse, Aug. 28—On the long curve half a mile west of the Whitehouse station of the Jersey Central Railroad, an eastbound train of sixty heavily-loaded freight and coal cars crashed into the rear of another freight train at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. Fifty cars were heaped up on the tracks or rolled down the embankment into the ditch fifty feet below. Engineer Andrew Youngblood jumped for his life and was badly injured. Brakesman R. Seales was crushed between two cars and now lies at the Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, in a precarious condition.

The wreck was the worst that has occurred on the lines of the Jersey Central for many years, and despite the efforts of three wrecking crews, the road was not reopened to traffic for eighteen hours after the crash came.

It was raining hard when the regular freight train, scheduled as No. 422 and bound from Mauch Chunk to Jer-City, stopped at the water tank, just west of the station. The train was drawn by locomotive No. 423, Engineer Hartsell, of Jersey City, and was under the charge of Conductor Moynihan, of Jersey City. After taking water, Engineer Hartsell started ahead, having called in his rear flagman.

A broken coupling caused some twenty cars to be left behind. The locomotive returned for the cars and the crew was preparing to put in a new coupling when the second train appeared around the curve, coming at a terrific speed.

The second train was an extra, drawn by one of the large "hog" engines of the new pattern, No. 433. The engineer was Andrew Youngblood, of Jer-City. He had two fireman with him. The conductor was Wm. Van Arsdale, of Jersey City. They were two brakemen. The heavy train was coming down the steep grade at a terrific pace. The rails were slippery and the train was beyond control. When Engineer Youngblood saw the lights on the caboose of the other train as he rounded the curve, he whistled down brakes, put on the air brakes and reversed the the engine. But it was too late. The momenturn of the train was too great and the crash came an instant later. Youngblood yelled to his firemen and sprang out of the cab. Striking the ground, he bounded into the air and finally landed against a fence 100 feet away. The firemen also jumped. Youngblood was badly cut and bruised about the head and shoulders. One of the firemen was unconscious when picked up. He suffered severe injuries about the head and was taken to a hospital in South Bethlehem. The other fireman escaped with slight bruises.

The heavy locomotive crashed through the caboose and the rear cars of the first train, wrecking ten of them. The locomotive was so wedged in the mass of wreckage that it could not fall over. The tender went over the enbankment after telescoping several cars. Then the freight cars and coal gondolas of the second train, to the number of forty, heaped up in two great piles. Some fell over the embankment. Many of the cars were smashed into kindling-wood and the coal strewn over the tracks. Both tracks were torn up for a distance of several hundred feet.

The wreckage caught fire at once and was partly destroyed before the bucket brigade, formed by the railroad men, could extinguish it.

Richard Seales, of Phillipsburg, one of the brakemen of the moving train, was caught between two cars and badly injured. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield.

A very narrow escape was that of John Layton, of Plainfield, who is employed as night engineer at the pumping station. He also acts as flagman. He was standing by the caboose when the headlight of the second train was seen rounding the curve. He sprang out and hurried to the little flagman's shanty, close by the track, to save his valuables. Before he could leave it, one of the cars struck the shanty and threw it fifty feet into the field. The stove inside fell on

WANTS A UNITED CHURCH

REV. MR. SHOTT STILL PREACHES ON SCOTCH PLAINS' MORALS.

He Blames Plainfield for the Rowdies Who Go There on the Trolley Cars to Drink, Carouse and Raise Dirturbance.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, N. J., August 28th—Rev. G. M. Shott continued Sunday morning his sermons along the line he has agitated for several months, calling for a higher moral and spiritual standard in the little village. Mr. Shott took as his text "The Three-fold Mission of the Church."

At the latter end of it he took up the agitation against the lawlessness in the village, especially on Sundays, when, he says, "our neighbor pours into our little village, by way of the trolley, its castoffs and lawless element, whose only purpose in coming to Scotch Plains is to drink and carouse. If measures are not taken to stop the nuisance the day is not far distant when the town will be ruled by the rowdy element. God forbid that this day should come, but it has got so that people think they can get drunk on the Sabbath, shoot firearms in the street and commit other lawless depredations and not be arrested for it. Do I have any excuse to offer for my sermon this morning? Give me a solid church back of me and I will soon begin to see the streets of our town cleaned of its speak-easies, etc. If you want to become efficient in the work for the Master you must be developed. A sickly church has no more business bringing in weak converts to the Master than a consumptive mother has to bear consumptive children.

"Christ does not say he is with us because we are an organized church, but he says: 'Go ye into the whole world and preach the Gospel.' May God help us to take the sermon this morning and benefit by it."

A LARGER DINING HALL.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE AT HOTEL KENSINGTON.

An Annex to be Built for the Kitchen and the Capacity of Dining-room Doubled—A Grill Room Also to be Established.

When J. A. Staats remodeled and opened the Hotel Kensington he did not anticipate such a liberal patronage as has been accorded him, and as a result he now finds his accommodations too limited to handle the trade in a manner satisfactory to him.

His dining-room has become very popular, owing to the excellence of the cuisine and service, and at nearly every meal the accommodation of the room is taxed to the full extent. Mr. Staats has found it necessary to devise plans for the enlargement of the dining-room and in a few days he will commence improvements that will give him more space in this direction.

An annex will be built on to the rear of the notel, where the kitchen will be located. And where the kitchen is now established will be utilized in extending the dining-room the full length of the house, just doubling its present capacity. The present partition will be removed and the new section will be modeled and decorated in conformity to the present room in front. When finished it will be one of the prettiest in the State.

Mr. Staats also contemplates establishing a grill room in connection with his house, where gentlemen may go for chops, steaks, etc., without coming in contact with the guests at the regular meals. This feature he proposes to keep open all day and late into the night.

CUT ON BARB WIRE.

Gypsies' Horse Was Badly Injured But Christmas Will Cure It.

A horse owned by the band of gypsies encamped on South avenue, near Terrill road, met with an accident last week. The animal caught its leg in a barb wire fence and cut it badly. The animal was led to town and turned over to the police to be shot. Patsy Christmas, the contractor, saw the animal and believed that the wound could be healed and the horse used again. So the gypsies turned it over to Christmas and the animal was not shot after all.

FAST AMATEURS IN FIFTEEN-MILE RACE.

G. H. Kenyon's Cycle Race Was a Successful Contest.

THIRTEEN RIDERS STARTED.

ONLY SEVEN FINISHED AND SECURED A PLACE.

The Road Was in Good Condition and Some Very Good Time Was Made—One Rider Disqualified—Time Prize Won by Jack Townsend—First Over the Course Was Arthur Chapin.

G. H. Kenyon's fifteen-mile road race was run off Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and attracted about two hundred enthusiastic cyclists. The race was over the Plainfield-Pumptown course. Although the weather was threatening it was ideal for a race. The start was made a short distance this side of Randolph road. There were twenty-two entries, including some of the best riders in this vicinity.

It was 4:16 o'clock when the race started and a few minutes all were off. The course was from the place of starting to Pumtown, back to Campbell's Roadhouse, to Pumtown again, and back to place of starting. There were thirteen who started, but only seven came in and secured a place and time, the rest either being too far behind or not completing the race. The road was in a good condition.

A. Neale Ransom, of this city, came in ahead of some of the scratch men. It was doubted if he completed the course. He was questioned and refused to say one way or the other. In consequence a protest was entered and he was disqualified by the judges.

Jack Townsend, of Cranford, came in third, but won the time prize, a White sewing machine. He was scratch man, and made the course in 42:22, while Peter Sims, colored, of this city, also scratch, was close behind him and finished only a second later, winning the second prize, a pair of Hartford tires. The first prize, Palmer tires, was won by Arthur Chapin, of Scotch Plains, who came in first making the course in 42:42, his handicap being 2½ minutes. The winner of the third prize, a Deitz lamp, was Charles Hummer, who finished a half second later, with a handicap of 2½ minutes. Charles R. Poole, of this city, who was scratch man, finished in 43:14 and won the last prize, a Brown racing saddle. J. W. James, scratch, finished in 46:55 and Joseph Burke, with a handicap of 1½ minutes, finished in 48:25, but neither won a prize.

G. H. Kenyon was manager of the race. L. S. Pocock and Frank J. Blatz were the times. The scorers were F. R. Stevens, Nathan Titsworth and Harry K. Lister. The clerks of the course were George Gould and R. A. Meeker.

DEATH OF MRS. EMMA L. FISH.

Passed Away Yesterday at Her Home After a Lingering Illness.

Mrs. Emma L. Fish, wife of Andrew W. Fish, of 325 Franklin place, died at her home yesterday morning at 6 o'clock, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Fish was 54 years of age. She was born in Brooklyn, but had lived in this city for more than twenty-five years. She was a member of the church of the Plymouth Brethren. Besides her husband, Mrs. Fish leaves one daughter, Miss Emma Virginia Fish, who lived with her parents. The funeral services will be held at the residence Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The interment will be private.

Revival Meeting.

The W. C. T. U. held an old-time revival meeting in their rooms yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. There was a large and enthusiastic attendance and over twenty brief volunteer testimonies were given by those present among the audience. Many requests for prayer were made and some were of a pathetic character, among whom was a man addicted to the drink habit. Seely Edsall was leader of the meeting and will conduct the services there again next Sunday afternoon.

Heard Rev. Mr. Dilts Preach.

A party of Plainfielders, including Mrs. T. O. Doane, T. O. Doane, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson, Nelson Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Runyon and daughter, went to Somerville yesterday and attended divine service at the Baptist church, where Rev. Asa R. Dilts, formerly of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached. They were well repaid for the trip for they heard a most excellent sermon.

RAPID RUN OF MARRIAGES

MATRIMONAL BREEZE BLEW STRONG IN THE BOROUGH.

Three Couples Seek the Ministerial Services of Rev. G. W. Gardner in Order to be Made as One.

The fact that strong matrimonial breezes were blowing in the borough Saturday evening was evidenced by a trio of weddings at Grace Methodist Episcopal parsonage between the hours of 8 and 9:45, when Rev. G. W. Gardner united in the bonds of wedlock six young lives.

The first happy pair desiring to be "made one" were LeRoy DeCamp, of 13 Harmony street, and Miss Clara Holcomb, of 45 Mountain avenue. They were married at 8 o'clock.

Clarence William Willmot, of 9 Grant avenue and Miss Florence May Clarinden, of the same street and number, next asked for the services of the pastor, and received the sanction of the church and State to their union at 8:45.

At 9:30 Frank Randolph Bastelman, of Avondale, N. J., and Miss Phebe May Osborn, of Washingtonville, N. J., attended by John O. Osborn and Mrs. J. Arthur Harrold, brother and sister of the bridge, were admitted to the parlors of the new parsonage, and Pastor Gardner instinctively felt that the nuptial breezes were still blowing his way. This surmise proved to be correct, and these, too, received his good offices and best wishes at 9:45 o'clock.

AT THE HOSPITAL.

New Cases Admitted to the Community Sick Room.

Saveria Mitliga, aged 40 years, an Italian residing at Westfield, was taken to the hospital last evening about 7:30 o'clock suffering from a badly lacerated wound on the left leg, caused, he said, by a wagon running over it. The accident happened in this city, but just where no one seems to know. He will be detained for sometime.

Christopher Hedemark, of Richmond street, who has been detained at the hospital for several weeks, the result of injuries received in falling off a scaffold, on South avenue, was discharged today, cured.

William Seals, the brakeman of the wrecked freight train at White House, yesterday morning, who is at the hospital suffering from injures received, seems to be doing very well today, and unless other complications set in his recovery is assured.

A HELPFUL GOSPEL SERVICE.

A Delegation of Trinity Endeavorers Visited Mary E. Wilson Chapel.

One of the best Gospel services held at the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, Washingtonville, was that of last evening, when a party of thirty Christian Endeavorers from Trinity Reformed church attended the meeting. In addition to the visitors there was a large attendance of people living in the vicinity.

The meeting was conducted by F.E. Smith, who, after opening the service and making a few remarks, gave all present an opportunity to assist by the giving of testimony or offering prayer. A feature was the music which was in charge of Mr. VanWerda, a student in the Theological Seminary at Rutgers College, and his efforts resulted in a helpful and spirited service of song interspersing the testimony.

Good Sermon—Cordial Greetings.

A large congregation attended Grace M. E. church in the borough, yesterday morning, among the number being many visitors from other churches whose places of worship were closed. The pastor, Rev. G. W. Gardner, delivered a most excellent sermon on "The Master Passions of This Life," taking as a text the fourth and fifth verses of the 27th Psalm. His exposition of the text was a strong and tender appeal for more consecration to God and the living of better lives by those who had given their hearts to Christ. His entire discourse was attentively listened to and greatly enjoyed by all, as was also the cordial greetings extended to strangers after the service by pastor and people.

A Benefit Public Debate.

A public debate will be held by the Bidgedale Debating Society, of this city, Thursday evening for the benefit of the Calvary Baptist church. Banks will speak for the other side.

TAX RATE INCREASED FOURTEEN POINTS.

Board of Assessors Have Completed Their Work.

NEW CITY TAX WILL BE $2.56.

INCREASE IN COST OF SEWERS, STREETS AND FIRE DEPARTMENT.

County Tax is Two Points Higher—Library Trustees and Board of Education Want Additional Funds—Detailed Comparison of Old and New Tax Rates—Reasons Given for the Various Items Increased.

The tax rate in the city of Plainfield has been fixed for the coming year. It will be $2 56 on a hundred, fourteen points higher than the present rate. This increase can be accounted for by an increase in the cost of the maintenance of the public schools, the fire department, the city streets and sewers, improvements at the public library and a higher county expenditure.

The items of the new tax rate as compared with those of the present one are as follows:

	98-99.	99-1900.
County	.52	.54
State schools	.28	.28
Fire department	.20	.22
Library	.04	.07
City and city lights	.60	.64
Poor	.05	.05
Free schools and bonds	.62	.65
Principal on sewer bonds	.05	.05
Interest on sewer obligations	.06	.06
	2.42	2.56

The county tax is beyond the pale of the city government. It is fixed by the expenditures of the County Board of Freeholders. The increase in the fire department is the result of the adoption of the call system. One of the arguments advanced in its favor was that while it would increase the actual cost of the department over that of the old volunteer system the cost would be more than covered in time by taxas on property that would otherwise be exempt.

The rise in the library tax amounts to three points. The extra funds were demanded by the library trustees to put in a new heating and lighting system and pay the increased expenses of the enlarged library.

There is an increase of four points in the city and city lights tax. Two points are needed to pay for the repairs to the sewer system on Richmond street and a slight increase in the cost of maintenance. The other two provide for extra money to be expended on the streets.

The Board of Education decided that more funds were needed to pay for the repairs to the Whittier School and the increase in the school system by the addition of several new classes to relieve the overcrowding of certain departments. The school tax is raised three points.

The total increase is fourteen points, making the tax rate $2.56, the highest on record in the city of Plainfield.

A CYCLONE OF MUSIC.

Salvationists to Sing One Hundred Choruses Without Stopping.

What promises to be one of the most novel of services will take place at the Salvation Army hall on Front street next Thursday night. It is to be called a cyclone of music. Assisted by the soldiers, the officers in charge are going to sing 100 different choruses and ten solos without stopping. This is a feat of endurance in singing without a parallel, never having been done here or elsewhere. This will of course mean the breaking of the record for long distance singing. The captain says he is ready for the ordeal.

Grocers' Excursion.

The last, one of the best and the cheapest excursion from the city will go next Monday, Labor Day, and will be conducted by the Plainfield Grocers' Association. They will go to South Beach. Returning, the first section will leave the beach at 6 o'clock and the second at 9 o'clock. From this city the fare will be 75 cents for adults and 50 cents for children.

INDEPENDENCE FOR CUBA.

President to Issue a Proclamation as a First Step to That End.

ELECTIONS TO BE HELD.

Cubans Will Be Given an Opportunity to Demonstrate Ability to Govern Themselves.

United States Troops to Be Withdrawn as Fast as Local Authorities Perfect Their Scheme of Government—All Cuban Newspapers Will Publish Proclamation.

Washington, Aug. 28.—President McKinley has signed a proclamation which is to be promulgated in Cuba soon. The proclamation is to the effect that the census ordered for Cuba is to be the beginning of the movement looking toward the establishment of an independent government for that island. When the census, the proclamation says, has been completed, arrangements will be made by the United States Government for the holding of local elections in the various provinces throughout the island with the view of establishing civil governments, thus giving an opportunity to the Cubans to demonstrate their ability to conduct in their own way the affairs of the island.

As fast as the local authorities perfect their scheme of government, the United States troops will be withdrawn. The proclamation, it is said, will be printed in all the newspapers in Cuba. Its reported object is to contradict the stories circulated in the island that the United States Government does not intend to carry out the will of Congress and give independence to the Cubans.

The proclamation will be the first official act on the part of the Administration to give assurance to the Cubans that the present military form of government is not to continue longer than is absolutely necessary.

It is said at the War Department that the proclamation can not be given out before it is published in Cuba.

Parcels Post to Germany.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Arrangements for the first parcels post convention between the United States and any country in Europe were made, when Postmaster General Smith and the special German envoy, Mr. M. von Schwarzenstein, signed an agreement between the United States and Germany. It will go into operation on October 1, and will inaugurate a postal service by means of which articles of merchandise may be exchanged by mail between the two countries, provided the packages do not exceed 11 pounds in weight.

The postage rate from the United States is fixed at 12 cents for each pound or fraction of a pound. The rate in Germany on parcels for the United States is fixed at 2 marks and 40 pfennigs per parcel, whatever its weight, but a reduced rate of 1 mark and 60 pfennigs may be adopted for small parcels.

TRUST LAWYER ARRESTED.

Charged With Violating Trust Law in Illinois.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—William B. Brewster, a St. Paul attorney, has been arrested here under the Illinois anti-trust law. He is said to be engaged in forming a lithographers' trust. Brewster was to have left for New York Sunday. While he was talking "trust" in the office of Rosenow & Co., he was arrested. The charge against Brewster is:

"That he was a party to a conspiracy to do an illegal act injurious to public trade; namely: Agreeing to fix and regulate prices on half-tone plates and process etchings on zinc."

There is an additional charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The warrant was sworn out by William Hughes, publisher of the Engraver and Electrotyper. Brewster charges that it is all spite work on the part of Hughes. He was released on bonds.

Killed on Grade Crossing.

Batavia, N. Y., Aug. 28.—While returning from a picnic at Horseshoe Lake, a carriage, in which were two young girls and two young men, was struck by a light engine on the New York Central tracks at a grade crossing. Joseph Chamberlain Defines British Attitude in Transvaal Crisis.

TIME FOR A SETTLEMENT.

England May Make Further Demands if the Boers Continue to Delay in Making Replies.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies Drawn Into a Most Important Speech on the Situation—Crisis Not Yet Passed—Doesn't Like Kruger's Offers.

Birmingham, Aug. 28.—In throwing open his own gardens here to the members of the St. Bartholomew's Ward Liberal-Unionists Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, was drawn into the most important speech on the Transvaal situation he has made since the adjournment of Parliament.

"But what am I to talk about?" asked the Secretary.

Cries of "The Transvaal!"

"Yes," he replied, "I know there is one subject which is very deep in all your hearts and about which I cannot talk or say much, lest I do harm. That subject is the relation of our race with the Transvaal Government. I wish that I could tell you that the difficulties existing for so many years between her Majesty's Government and the obligarchy in Pretoria, which have assumed such an acute form during the last few years, were happily settled. But unfortunately that is not yet in my power. As you know, for three months we have been negotiating. President Kruger has made, perhaps, some little progress, but I cannot truly say that the crisis is passed.

"President Kruger procrastinates in his replies. He dribbles each reply like water from a squeezed sponge. His offers are accompanied with conditions which he knows to be impossible, or else he refuses to allow us to make a satisfactory investigation of their nature.

"I do not think it will be denied that we have exhibited patience unparalleled in the relations between a paramount and a subordinate State. The situation is too fraught with danger, it is too strained for indefinite postponement. The knot must be loosened, to use Mr. Balfour's words, or else we shall have to find other ways of untying it.

"If we are forced to do that, then I would repeat now the words by Lord Salisbury in the House of Lords. I say that, if forced to make further preparations, if this delay continues much longer, we shall not hold ourselves limited by what we have already offered; but, having taken this matter in hand, we will not let go until we have secured conditions which, once for all, will establish us as the paramount power in South Africa and secure for our subjects there those equal rights and priveleges promised by President Kruger when the Transvaal's independence was granted.

"If it comes to this, if the rupture which we have done everything in our power to avoid, is forced upon us, I am confident we shall have the support, not only of the vast majority of Britons, but of the whole empire. In all this bad business there is one thing upon which we may congratulate ourselves, and that is the unity of the empire. No British subject can suffer injustice anywhere without awakening a responsive chord in our most distant colonies, which stand shoulder to shoulder in maintaining the honor and interest of the empire."

GAVE SOLDIERS THE KEYS

Omaha Does Herself Proud in Welcoming the 10th Pennsylvania.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 28.—The soldiers of the Tenth Pennsylvania Regiment received an enthusiastic ovation when their trains arrived in the city.

As the trains rolled into the station the whole section devoted to railroad service, including the viaducts and tops of houses in the vicinity, was black with cheering thousands. Flags were everywhere in evidence, and thousands of whistles and bells broke forth as the trains came to a standstill. For an hour this bedlam of sounds continued.

Committee and city officials and 100 members of the Pennsylvania Club, with their ladies, acted as the Reception Committee. As the soldiers stepped to the platform they were escorted to informal lunches spread in every available place. Mayor Morris made a speech and presented to the regiment through Lieut. Col. Barnett the keys of the city, inscribed "Welcome Pennsylvania Volunteers. When in trouble call up Telephone 55." The keys were great gilded affairs tied with the National colors.

Each soldier was presented with buttonhole photos of the companies and souvenirs of the programme which was planned for their reception.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—The Tenth Pennsylvania was given an enthusiastic greeting when the boys who have been so long and so far away from home in the service of the United States in the Philippines arrived here to-day.

Governor Roosevelt gave medals to them, bearing a likeness of their major, Cuthberson, after which they took breakfast and proceeded to Pittsburg, where an elaborate program was prepared for their welcome. The regiment was met at Allegheny City, and, headed by President McKinley and the Governors of Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and West Virginia, marched to Shenley Park, where the formal exercises of welcoming the veterans were held.

None of the soldiers was sick, and all were delighted at getting back to their native state.

BURNED TO WATER'S EDGE

Twenty Persons on Board the Sir S. H. Tilley Have a Narrow Escape.

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—The steamer which burned off Fairport Saturday night was the Sir S. H. Tilley, a Canadian vesel of 750 net tons. The fire started in the engine room, and it spread so rapidly that the engineer did not have time to shut off steam. The crew and passengers, about twenty in number, had difficulty in ecaping.

All the members of the crew, save two, and three women passengers, and the cook were placed in the lifeboat and rowed to the steamer's consort. Two members of the crew remained on odard for some time, and, after lashing the vessel escaped, one of them on a hatch cover and the other with a life preserver. Both were picked up.

The wheel being lashed, the steamer continued to run in a circle for about an hour, when the machinery stopped. The fire continued burning until Sunday morning, the tugs and life-saving crew remaining near. The wreck finally was towed to Fairport harbor.

The Tilley is almost a total loss. She was valued at $60,000. She carried no cargo.

The Meat Trust Threatens.

New York, Aug. 28.—It is said here that the proposed plan to fight the big western meat trust has brought forth the announcement and threat from Chicago that if the New York retail butchers make any further effort toward the establishment of independent slaughter houses the trust will undertake a plan to drive all those concerned out of business or compel them to submit to the trust's idea of figuring out profits and losses. To accomplish its purpose along this line, it is said that the big combine will pursue the same tactics as those employed in Detroit and other cities in Michigan a few years ago, namely: To establish markets on its own account and sell meats at such ruinously low prices that the local dealers soon find themselves either completely driven out of business or forced to submit to the will of the trust and to pay the prices laid down by it. However, regardless of the threats made by the trust the local butchers here are going ahead with their movement for self protection and promise to make the matter a finish fight if the war is started.

The President at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 28.—President McKinley, accompanied by Mrs. McKinley attended divine service yesterday at Christ M. E. Church where special services were held in accordance with a previously arranged program by the reception committee. The President expressed himself as being highly pleased with the reception tendered himself and wife together with others accompanying the Presidential party, by the people of Pittsburg. Mrs. McKinley's health continues good. From Pittsburg the President will visit East Liverpool and Canton, Ohio, before returning to Washington.

Mob After Defaulter's Life.

Chicago, Aug. 28.—Demetri Friedlander, agent for the Russian Greek churches in Chicago, private banker, and agent for the brewing firm of Wacker & Birk, is alleged to be a defaulter to an amount variously estimated at $40,000 to $100,000. A mob composed of the persons whom he is said to have defrauded surrounded his house, bent on seeking vengeance for the loss of their money, and a strong force of police was required to protect the house.

Another Hurricane Reported.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 28.—The island of Martinique reports a cyclone forming south and moving toward Dominican and Guadeloupe.

Ponce, Porto Rico, Aug. 28.—All possible preparations are being made against the predicted storm. Meanwhile, the military authorities are doing all in their power to alleviate the conditions which followed the recent cyclone. Daily there is a distribution of rice, beans and codfish, and supplies are sent to other districts as rapidly as transportation facilities will permit.

Mastered Wind and Sea.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 28.—The schooner Robert McClintock of Baltimore, Md., which was believed to have foundered with all hands in the recent hurricane, has arrived here, battered and torn after a severe battle with wind and wave. She lost no member of her crew, although all were much exhausted by many hours of hardship.

The Race War Ended.

Darien, Ga., Aug. 28.—Teh presence of the troops together with the surrender of Henry Dengall, colored, the murderer of Deputy Sheriff Townsend, has caused a comparatively quiet feeling to settle over the white population here again and the prospects are that there will be no more trouble of a serious nature.

King of Linquists.

No man, however great his powers of memory, could acquire even a smattering of all the living languages. They number 860, not to mention 5,000 dialects.

Eighty-nine languages are allotted to Europe, 123 to Asia, 114 to Africa, 117 to America and 417 to the islands of the Pacific and Indian oceans.

Probably the most remarkable linguist the world has ever known was Joseph Caspar Mezzofanti, who was born at Bologna in 1774, created Cardinal in 1838 and died at Rome in 1848. The list of languages and dialects which he acquired reached the astounding total of 114.

It would be interesting to know what system was pursued by Cardinal Mezzofanti in the study of languages, but little light is now obtainable on this subject.

The most famous linguist of antiquity were Mithridates, King of Pontus, who is said to have been thoroughly conversant with the languages of twenty-five nations over which his rule extended, and Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, of whom Plutarch says that "she spoke most languages" and that "there were but few of the foreign Ambassadors to whom she gave audience through an interpreter."

HE AIDS CAPTAIN DREYFUS

Capt. Feystaetter Places Testimony of Maurel and Mercier in a Bad Light.

HE CAUSES EXCITEMENT.

Former Secretary of War Meets Maurel in Courtyard and Reproaches Him Bitterly.

Labori Once More Asks for Du Paty de Clam—His Request Denied By the Court—Immense Sensation is Created—Maurel Curses and Denounces Judicial Formalities.

Rennes, Aug. 28.—The unexpectedly violent incident at the Dreyfus trial in which Gen. Mercier and Col. Maurel were given the lie by Capt. Freystaetter does not possess the importance that one might be disposed to attach to it. However great may have been the irregularities of the first trial they will change nothing for the present court-martial.

It is evident that Col. Maurel is a weak man and seems rather overcautious than willfully wicked. He made a great mistake, when, desiring to prove to the Court that the communications than willfully wicked. He made no influence on the Judges, he mentioned that he had only read one document.

Half the truth is worse than a complete lie, Col. Maurel found to his cost when Capt. Freystaetter, a splendid soldier and another of Dreyfus's judges of 1894, swore that all the documents were communicated to the Court.

Col. Maurel's jesuitical explanation was that he had only read one document himself. He did not say that others had not read more.

His explanation raised a show of wrath in the audience. For once the audience was not anti-Dreyfus.

The tactics of the Headquarters Staff by which it obtained the conviction in 1894 are apparently disgusting to the majority of the people present. Col. Maurel, who could not survive the initial sin, made a confession. He had been led on dangerous ground by Maitre Labori, and only made matters worse in the eyes of his superiors.

After the sitting Gen. Mercier met Col. Maurel in the courtyard and reproached him bitterly for having allowed himself to be drawn out by Labori's persuasion. Col. Maurel complained of and cursed the judical formalities and said he had found himself drawn out before he knew where he was.

Capt. Freystaetter's declaration concerning the biographical notes on Dreyfus showing treachery at the Polytechnic School, the military school, and at the Headquarters Staff was a feature in the case which brought a new light to everything. The revelation created a bad impression, showing the determination of the General Staff to obtain a conviction more deliberate than had been imagined.

The sensation in the court was extreme when Gen. Mercier came to the rescue of the Colonel by creating a diversion in saying that he had caught Capt. Freystaetter in a "flagrante delicto" of lying.

But for the difference of ages a duel could not be avoided. Capt. Freystatet glared at Mercier.

Maitre Labori's intervention in demanding an independent medical examination of Du Paty de Clam seemed severe to the judges, but there is supreme interest in having his evidence now while all the Generals are at loggerheads concerning the contents of the secret papers communicated in 1894. He alone can settle this definitely.

When the Court had refused the request Maitre Labori's complaint that he had to deal only with the dead or dying created an immense sensation. Labori exclaimed: "Col. Sandherr is dead. Henry is dead. Du Paty is unable to come." Truly this affair is made up of cemetery corpses as well as reputations.

May Cause a Revolution.

Rennes, Aug. 28.—If Dreyfus is condemned by the court-martial at Rennes the Socialists of Paris, it is averred, will start a revolution in that city. There is also a threat that the Lycee at Rennes will be blown up by Italian anarchists. The latter threat has greatly alarmed the authorities at Rennes.

Photographs which Bertillon used recently to prove Dreyfus the writer of the bordereau turn out to have been touched to make them fit Bertillon's theories. Labori will demand that the originals be produced so that he can show the truth of this.

Can't do Business in Indiana.

Indianapolis, Aug. 28.—William H. Hart, Auditor of the State refused to issue a license to the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of New York to do business in Indiana, and an investigation is now pending into its condition. The Auditor bases his refusal upon information to the effect that the surplus fund of the association has been greatly diminished and been constantly decreasing for a year.

Went Him One Better.

One hot summer's day a gentleman who was waiting for his train at one of our country stations asked a porter who was lying on one of the seats where the station master lived, and the porter lazily pointed to the house with his foot. The gentleman, very much struck at the man's laziness, said: "If you can show me a lazier action than that, my good man, I'll give you a two-an-sixpence."

The porter not moving an inch replied: "Put it in my pocket, Guv'nor."

To Prosecute Paris Newspapers.

Paris, Aug. 28.—The authorities have decided to prosecute all the newspapers which have recently incited their readers to rioting. Sebastian W. Faure, editor of the Journal du Peuple, who was responsible for the Anarchist appeal that led to last Sunday's rioting, will be prosecuted for incitements to illegal assembly and provoking street disorders.

Taking Time By the Forelock.

If there is any advantage in taking time by the forelock the Socialist Labor leaders of Union county intend to benefit by it, as they are the first in the political field with a full set of nominees for county offices to be filled in November. They must have gone at the nominating business in a very quiet manner, however, for none of the alert newspaper men of Plainfield were aware that the candidates had been named at a convention held in Plainfield August 21st, until the certificate of nominations was filed in the County Clerk's office last Saturday. The nominations are as follows:

For Senator—Chas. Burns, of Plainfield.
For Assemblymen—John Miles, of Plainfield, and Michael McGarry, of Elizabeth.
For Sheriff—Alwin Koerner, of Elizabeth.
For County Clerk—Frank Cullen, of Plainfield.
For Coroner—Charles R. Wallender, of Plainfield.

If Mr. Hobart shall be renominated he will be the first Vice-President to receive that distinction in a great many years. If he shall be re-elected he will be the first Vice-President to serve two terms since John C. Calhoun, who served from 1825 to 1833. In fact, there have been only four Vice-Presidents who were re-elected: John Adams, George Clinton, Daniel D. Thompkins and John C. Calhoun.

The Elizabeth Leader says that the outlook for a brick pavement in that city is decidedly discouraging and it is certain that none will be laid during the term of the present street committee of the city council who have made a thorough, searching inspection of brick pavements in other cities and report adversely to the stability or wearing qualities of the material.

The Jersey editor of the World says that Congressman Fowler, of the Eighth district, who bears a striking resemblance to President McKinley, is another aspirant for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination.

—The Watchung avenue railroad bridge has been cleaned and repainted and now the Park avenue railroad bridge is receiving the same treatment.

THE WEST INDIAN HURRICANE.

The illustration shows Ponce as it was before it was almost completely destroyed by the terrible hurricane. The island of Porto Rico was directly in the path of the storm and the loss of life and property was enormous. The track of the hurricane is shown in the map. It had, fortunately, spent its fury before reaching the coast of Florida. In addition to the great loss of life caused directly by the hurricane, the suffering from the hunger and privation which followed was severe, and many more died from want of food and care. The United States government acted as promptly as possible in despatching relief to the sufferers, but to many it came too late.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

James J. Bergen, who was once speaker of the House of Assembly, is in training for the Democrate Senatorial nomination in Somerset county. The Democrats think they have a good chance of carrying the county.—World.

* * * * *

Congressman Fowler aspires to the chairmanship of the Banking and Currency Committee. If the Representative of the Eighth District would give less attention to monkeying with revolutionary schemes of finance and more to procuring some substantial improvements for his constituents, the men who elected him would be better pleased.—Cranford Chronicle.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The troubles of the baggagemen are certainly manifold. Since the railroads began carrying bicycles and baby carriages free the poor baggagesmashers' troubles are multiplying. It was only a day or two ago that one of the baggagemen at the North Avenue station was seen tying a cord around a quantity of blankets that had been left in a baby carriage that a fond mother had but a moment before entrusted to the tender mercies of the poor man. The blankets were securely fastened and then the preambulator was lifted carefully into the car. But the baggagemen are possessed of something besides prodigious strength—they have a degree of patience that would put to shame that boasted of by the lamented Job.

Passing through the residential part of Plainfield and the borough, especially the Washington Park portion, the observer must be impressed with the number of deserted homes at this season. "Ichabod—the glory hath departed" quotes the man familiar with the Bible, as he passes house after house with closed doors, tight shutters, unswept porches and all the signs that mean not "at home." The certainty and signs of absence are in direct ratio to the size and beauty of the home. The larger the house and handsomer the grounds the more unmistakeable are the signs of absence. Sometimes the passer-by wonders if leaving such homes is all gain, even in the matter of comfort and pleasure. But then the passer-by reflects that this is none of his business and proceeds to attend to his own, which is a passing comment on the unusual number of Plainfielders in the mountains, at the seashore, on the lakes, in farm houses, pine lands and sandy plains, as well as Europe, California and Canada.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Rev. Mr. Heissig, of Freehold, preached two interesting sermons at the First Baptist church yesterday, morning and evening, to good-sized congregations.

—Grand Union Tea Company, of 138 West Front street, are making a fine display of their beautiful trade mark on the bill boards about the city. The trade mark is not only handsome but is a work of art.

—Residents in the vicinity of Elmwood place and Liberty street are greatly troubled with boys who persist in stealing fruit, and if the practice is not stopped, the services of a policeman will be secured.

—William C. Townsend, of this city, has been engaged by the Edison Phonograph Company to play mandolin solos twice a week at the laboratory, Orange. Mr. Townsend is the first person of all those tried who has been able to give satisfaction, and his work won for him an enviable postion.

DRINK GRAIN-O

after you have concluded that you ought not to drink coffee. It is not a medicine but doctors order it, because it is healthful, invigorating and appetizing. It is made from pure grains and has that rich seal brown color and tastes like the finest grades of coffee and costs about ¼ as much. Children like it and thrive on it because it is a genuine food drink containing nothing but nourishment. Ask your grocer for Grain-O, the new food drink. 15 and 25c.

Another Sale -:- OF -:- FINE TABLE DAMASK

Our sales in this department are increasing in a most remarkable manner, and we propose to encourage trade by offering some extraordinary values along this line. Recent heavy purchases enable us to do so.

Tomorrow We Offer The Following.

Very fine 72 in Double Damask at $1.25 and $1.50 yd. Patterns are "inlaid" an expensive hand process. Goods are rarely beautiful and remarkably cheap. ¾ napkins to match at 3.75 and 4.50 (by the doz. only.) Also our regular 1.00 72 in Double Damask at 85c yd., and a pure linen 70 in Damask (75c quality) in five patterns at 50c per yd.

Half Bleached Damask.

63-in half bleached German Damask at		39c yd

These goods will bleach very quickly and give splendid service. This is an offering of linens to which every thrifty housekeeper should respond quickly. Our trade in ready-made Sheets and Pillows is also one of growing importance, due undoubtedly to the fact that we sell only good goods. We handle only the well-known brands such as N. Y. Mills, Utica Mills, Dwight Anchor, etc. All are torn, beautifully hemmed and clean, ready for use. A comparison of our prices with those of N. Y. City will result in your buying them of us.

Crochet and Marseilles Bed Spreads, another item we are warranted in calling your attention to. We believe we sell at 1.00 the best white Crochet Quilt ever sold at that price. Of course 1.25, 1.50 or 1.75 will buy a better one. Marseilles Quilts we carry up to 5.00 ea. and works of art they are. Plain and Quilted Table Padding at various prices.

New Tapestries.

Entirely new Bagdad Stripes, Denims, Turkish Cloths, Fancy Tickings, Satins and Silkalines in bewildering variety. New Patterns and new colorings make these unusually attractive.

We should be guilty of gross neglect if we failed to call attention to a special lot of Flannelettes at 6½c yd. that are really worth 8c yd. So far as we can judge the patterns are as bright and attractive as those we have at much higher price.

Sundry New Things.

Prominent among the latest arrivals are two numbers in Ladies' Kid Gloves at 1.50 pr. No. 1—2 clasp, real kid in Modes, Tans, Grays and Ox Bloods. Very pliable, elastic and perfect fitting. No. 2—Something entirely new in 2 clasp Suedes in Tans, Modes and Grays. A peculiarly novel stitching gives them a most stylish finish. We predict for these two numbers a large sale. Some new velvet stock collars, steel trimmed, will sell readily once they are seen. Prices 50c to 1.98. Some are trimmed with jet and have jet fringe to match. Positively the newest novelties in stock. Our shirt waists have been subjected to very radical treatment again. Our 1.00, 1.25 and 1.48 waists are now 50c each. THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, August 28—C. H. Hines, who is at Manilla, being attached to the cable staff of the U. S. ship Hooker, writes interestingly about this far off eastern country. In a recent letter to a Dunellen friend, he says: "The situation here is grave, and both sides are doing little else than skirmishing, owing to the rainy season which prevails. Disease is making sad inroads on our troops. The courage and ferocity of the natives remains unquestioned. Manilla is a dirty, apathetic and full of the Chinese, the course of the east, though they are cleaner and more industrious than the native. They are engaged in all branches of business, and the Americans will have to hustle to compete with them. This city has fine churches and palaces, but is two centuries behind all else. They have an electric light plant managed, and undersized ponies draw primitive street cars, which are overcrowded in a manner to make one long for the methods of Henry Berg and his society. The climate here during the rainy season is frightful. Typhoon follows typhoon. Last week alone over eight inches of rain fell and the soldiers are about drowned out. It is amusing to one who understands Spanish to enter a native place, and feigning, listen to the conversation and comments. It would be a good object lesson to those at home who think these people can be pacified or overawed. Extermination of this generation and education of the next is all that will ever do it. They are fanatical in their hate as a Moslem dervish."

Messrs. Manning and Staats have been designated by tho Board of Freeholders to look after the repairs to the Samptown bridge, work upon which is to be begun at once.

There is a good chance for a barber at New Market. The last one has become tired and returned to the city.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, August 28—Wm. Trayno, son of Wm. H. Trayno was brought before Judge Clark's court Saturday afternoon, charged with being disorderly and using indecent language to his stepmother, who made the complaint. The assault was committed several days ago, but the young man has kept out of Constable Walpole's way, having heard that his relative had secured a warrant for his arrest. Constable Walpole found the accused Saturday morning and apprehended him while he had the opportunity. The case was at once called before the Judge and the evidence showed that the young man was plainly guilty, not only of the assault and battery charge but of abusing his stepmother at other times. Mr. Trayno said he could do nothing with the boy and as he had been before the Judge upon several occasions the Judge fined him $5 or thirty days in the county jail. The fine was paid.

The contract case of Allen against Freeman was heard in Judge Clark's court Saturday. Judgment in full, with costs, was given Allen. Mr. Freeman, through his counsel, H. C. Runyon, gave bond and will appeal the case to Elizabeth. The Judge has never has never had a decision reversed in the higher court.

Albert Champion, who was sentenced in Paterson Friday of last week to two years in State Prison for atrocious assault and battery upon a dusky rival, formerly kept the village barber shop in town.

Rev. Mr. Shott led the monthly conquest meeting of the B. Y. P. U. in the Baptist church last evening. Four very interesting papers upon Triumphs in Cuba were read by members of the society.

The trolley company have nearly completed the double track from Berkman street in Plainfield to the terminus on Park avenue.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN.

Mrs. Ledyard Stevens and Her Work in the Paris Exposition.

Mrs. Ledyard Stevens, president of the commission of women who are working for a woman's department at the Paris exposition of 1900, is one of New York's leading spirits among progressive women. She is a native of South Carolina, and toward the close of the civil war was sent as a child to her grandmother, Mrs. John W. Chanler in New York, on a special pass issued by General Sherman.

Through the Chanler branch of the family Mrs. Stevens is a line descendant of John Winthrop, governor of the colony of Massachusetts. She is also descended from Peter Stuyvesant, the

MRS. LEDYARD STEVENS.

Dutch governor of New Amsterdam. Through her father, Dr. Octavius White, she is connected with the best families of the south.

Mrs. Stevens is a paragon of fashion, and is eminently fitted in an intellectual and social way for the large and important work she has undertaken.

Home-Made Skin Tonics.

Greasiness of the skin generally arises from lack of cleanliness or debility of the skin. Only an astringent has an effect upon it, and a very simple and entirely harmless one may be made from one pint of rosewater, half a pint of white wine vinegar and a few drops of the essence of rose. This lotion should be applied with a soft linen rag or a fine sponge.

Blackheads are difficult to get rid of once they appear. They are caused by the clogging of the pores of the skin by dust or foreign matter. Alcohol, 90 per cent., applied by means of a piece of chamois skin, will give tone to the skin and remove unsuspected dust and dirt, at the same time stimulating the small glands and removing, by constant use, the blackheads.

Tan and freckles may be removed by the following lotion: Two drachms of powdered sal ammoniac, four fluid drachms of cologne water, one quart of distilled water. As home remedies both lemon juice and borax are very efficacious for the same purpose.

For some skins which cannot stand constant washing, but needing to be cleansed after a walk or ride by other means than soap and water, lait virginal is a delicious preparation, and is made as follows: One pint of rose, orange-flower or elder-flower water, half an ounce of the simple tincture of benzoin and ten drops of the tincture of myrrh.

After exposure to a harsh or chilling wind it is well before retiring to rub a quantity of fresh cream on the face, removing after five or ten minutes, to be again applied, followed by a generous puffing of rice powder. Remove in the morning by lait virginal and tepid water.

Queen Wilhelmina.

Queen Wilhelmina's well-known disinclination to provide Holland with a prince consort by marrying is said by knowing ones in European courts to have a tangible practical reason.

The young Queen is now eighteen years old and is to be formally crowned this year and assume control of the fat, rich little kingdom so long administered by Queen Regent Emma. Not having yet tasted the bitter with the sweets of power, Wilhelmina is in no hurry as yet to contemplate giving up the reins of the kingdom.

If she should marry and begin at once, in the provident Dutch way, supplying Holland with heirs of the royal house, some of them would doubtless be boys. The eldest son of Queen Wilhelmina would, upon his eighteenth year, succeed her on the throne.

The Dutch law does not contemplate the possibility of such a case as that of Queen Victoria, who has ruled for thirty-five years beyond the legal majority of the English Crown Prince. If this were the law of Holland possibly Wilhelmina would have less objection to matrimony.

The Gamut of Souvenirs.

A housekeeper who dotes on "collections," and who has run the gamut of souvenir spoons, jugs, cups, beer mugs and candle-sticks, is now turning her attention to plates, and pronounces it the most fascinating of all. "One never can have too many plates," she declares, "and everywhere you go you are sure to find a variety of pretty and artistic ones to choose from."

Woolen Nets.

A woolen net is a decidedly new fabric, and netlike in pattern are some awfully fetching fabrics that seem to be of silk and wool, very soft and clinging to the touch, and in various netlike or lacelike meshes. These are quite the smartest things possible built over soft satins in closely clinging draperies.

THE UNQUIET SEX

Annette Crawford Gossips About Women and Some of the Things They Are Doing.

Governor Mount of Indiana has selected Mrs. Artie Goodwin Cullop of Vincennes as one of the five honorary commissioners from that state to the Paris exposition in 1900. Mrs. Cullop is a brilliant conversationalist and a fine linguist, speaking French as well as her native tongue. She has spent several years in Paris.

One of the most remarkable women of Texas is Mrs. Anson Jones, widow of the president of the republic of Texas from 1844 to 1845, when the republic ceased to exist. Mrs. Jones was born in Arkansas on July 24, 1819, and her eightieth birthday was recently celebrated by the Daughters of the Revolution of Texas at her home in Houston.

England is proud of the achievements of Miss Lilian Renneer, the female champion rifle shot, who has been at the Bisley range, firing with the regular troops and showing some of the old hands how to make a bullseye at 1,000 yards. She made a score of 103 out of a possible 105, astonishing the crack shots of England and breaking many former records. She is the best woman shot England has ever seen.

Governor Candler of Georgia has commissioned Miss Mamie Gertrude Morris, the southern authoress, as an honorary member of his staff. She is given the title of colonel.

For a woman to be admitted to the practice of the law in the federal courts of the United States is a somewhat unusual privilege. This distinction, however, was recently conferred upon Miss Mary M. Bartelme of Chicago, where she had for a number of years successfully practiced in the municipal, county and state courts.

The keeper of the lighthouse at Santa Barbara, Cal., is Mrs. Julia F. Williams, who is now 73 years of age, having been at Santa Barbara 35 years. Three times each day and three times each night she climbs the 40 steps that lead up from her living room to the little glass tower from which are lighted 50 miles of rocky California coast. It is figured that she has taken 3,000,000 steps in her work.

Mrs. Marguerite Dickens, wife of Commodore Dickens, U. S. N., whose accidental death was some time ago reported in Washington, will be held in grateful remembrance by hundreds of volunteer soldiers in our war with Spain. Her work in behalf of the destitute families of volunteers, as well as looking after sick and wounded soldiers, was ceaseless and untiring.

One of the broadest philanthropies which touch the lives of city waifs has just been launched in New York under the title of the Sophia fund, its purpose being to rescue homeless and friendless children from lives of degradation and want. It was founded with the money left by the late Sophia Brauenlich for that purpose and named as a memorial to her. Mrs. Brauenlich was a prominent member of the Professional Woman's league of New York.

The champion female swimmer of Scotland is Miss Mary Livingston. Her latest feat, which made the young woman famous throughout the land of Burns, was a swim eight miles in the Clyde from Greenock toward the sea.

One of the most energetic of the so called new women is Mrs. Mary Walling, whose home is in the San Juan valley in southern Colorado. She is a mining prospector and lives alone in a rough cabin built by her own hands on the summit of Gold hill, perched like an eagle's eyrie 3,000 feet above the city of Buena Vista and 10,000 above the sea level. Here she protects her mining claim and continues her prospecting for gold, which she feels sure of finding in this mountain fastness. She is a very successful hunter, depending mainly for her food supply upon the game which there abounds.

Blind women connected with the institutions for those thus afflicted in New York are to publish a magazine, which is to be named The Milton, in honor of the great blind poet. It is notable that there is a strong literary tendency among the blind, especially in the line of poetry.

Mrs. Mary E. Stickney, who is at the head of the Women's Press club of Denver, is one of the most distinguished writers of Colorado. Her stories have been published in the standard magazines of the country since 1882, when her signature, which has since become familiar to the readers of high class literature, first appeared in Lippincott's.

Among the creditable philanthropic institutions of Cincinnati is the Home For Ambitious and Self Supporting Girls and Women, its object being to provide a place where working girls can have neat, clean rooms and board within the reach of those earning moderate wages, and in addition be surrounded by refined, Christian influences. The institution was founded by Miss Roma E. Gillman, an Ohio woman of wealth and influence, and is maintained principally by her.

Mrs. Kate Chopin, whose latest book, "The Awakening," has created something of a sensation in the literary world, is a native of St. Louis. Her father was Thomas O'Flarherty, an Irish gentleman of prominence and wealth, and the daughter was during her young womanhood a great society belle in the Mound City.

The assistant superintendent of the public schools of Chicago is Miss M. Elizabeth Farson, who has for some years been connected with the educational interests of that city. She is an alumna of the Chicago university.

At the art exposition in Berlin, which closed recently, Fraulein Hildebrand shared the honors with her father, the celebrated Ernst Hildebrand. Both the fraulein and her father are noted genre painters. The young lady is very popular in Berlin society.

The youngest old woman in America is Mrs. Sarah Doran Terry, who a hundred years ago was a demure little Quaker lass. She is the oldest inhabitant of Philadelphia and is 108 years of age. Her mental and physical faculties are well preserved. She distinctly remembers George Washington, and recalls having aided her mother in preparing a dinner for the Father of His Country.

Miss Grace Fernandez, a graduate of the University of Maine, has received an appointment in the educational department in San Juan, Porto Rico. Her father was a native of Spain, though a naturalized citizen of the United States. Miss Fernandez speaks Spanish fluently.

Mrs. Margaret Miller, the mother of Joaquin Miller, the poet of the Sierras, is 85 years of age, with mental faculties still undimmed. She spends her declining years tending her little garden in front of her home, The Heights, in the foothills near Oakland, Cal., and in reading and rereading her son's poems, of which she is very proud.

Miss Margaret Lee of Brooklyn has instituted a movement that affects all persons whose brains are a source of capital. It is an agitation to amend the copyright law now in force, by which the author's right to his books ceases to exist 42 years after publication, and to make the property right in brain work as real and permanent as property in stocks, bonds or real estate.

Chinese girls are employed in the silk factories, and, according to reports, know little of the sweatshop system. The factories are large, cool and clean. The sanitary conditions are good, and there is a methodical government that does not inspire strikes. The girls form a much prettier picture than the shabby, carelessly garbed women of the American factories.

The prize offered for the best design for a fountain to be erected in Providence by Paul Pajnotti of Turin, Italy, in memory of his wife, Carrie Mathilde Brown Pajnotti, was awarded Miss Enid Yandell, who is recognized as one of the most talented of women sculptors. The prize was secured in competition with some of the best known sculptors in New York, Boston and Providence. The design is said to be of singular beauty and artistic merit. Although Miss Yandell is only 28 years of age, she has achieved a wonderful success in her art. She is a native of Kentucky, being the daughter of the late Dr. Lunsford P. Yandell of Louisville.

CULT OF THE FORK:

MARION HARLAND WRITES ENTERTAININGLY ON TABLE MANNERS.

To Say of a Man "He Eats With His Knife" Is Either to Brand Him With Vulgarity or Asperse the Gentility of His Antecedents.

When the poor seamstress in "Timothy Quest" laments that she has been so poorly that she "could hardly get her knife to her mouth," we smile indulgent amusement.

When Mrs. Shoddy, seated in state among her congeners in a Bar Harbor drawing room, animadverts upon the barbarity of the original denizens of the region, who "used to give summer boarders steel knives to eat fish with, when everybody who knows anything knows that steel gives a disagreeable taste to fish—I pledge you my word, my dear, I couldn't bear to put those horrid knives into my mouth!"—the smile is a broad laugh.

When we recognize in a fashionable Boston restaurant a former Governor, who is also a former Congressman and an eminent jurist, and, while our admiring gaze is upon him, see him, in an absent minded sort of way, shovel peas into his mouth with the blade of his knife—we shudder, and straightway fall into grave thoughtfulness, says Marion Harland, in the New York Herald.

"Not ours to reason why" the use of the fork as a vehicle for transferring solid foods from the plate to lips should have become a stingent law among well bred people. The rule is as binding as that enjoining that every man who knows the rudiments of good manners should lift his hat in saluting a lady in the street, and uncover his head when he finds himself with ladies in a hotel elevator.

To say of a man, "He eats with his knife," is to brand him with vulgarity, or, as is oftener just, to asperse the gentility of his antecedents. His origin must have been mean, we assume, and his breeding defective. The adage that the cult of the fork, like correct spelling, must be mastered before the boy or girl gains the age of fifteen—or never—is grounded in truth and supported by daily observation.

We are nowise surprised to learn in reading the report of our former Governor's next professional triumph, that he was born of peasant stock. Until he was seventeen he ploughed the fields by day and cultivated his mind by night. By the time he entered college the knife-swallowing habit was established. Association with men and women who were born to the fork has so far modified his behavior that, in donning his dress suit and "imported" manners he is on his guard against unpardonable solecism. Lunching at his ease, and alone, in the Parker House, unconscious of the presence of any one who knew him by sight, his thoughts absorbed by political or legal questions, his right hand forgets its borrowed cunning. Early practices prevail over artificial civilization. Out of (and in) his own mouth he is convicted as a clownish rustic.

The phrase is none too strong. No man has a right to outrage the sensibilities of others by the unclean trick of thrusting the laden blade between his jaws and withdrawing it, reeking, for another onslaught upon the provisions set before him. The nimble fork approaches the lips—the knife plunges into the mouth. The concensus of refined judges of social manners and customs on this head makes for decency as well as for propriety. So well established is the bylaw that it ranks with constitutional sections.

As, for instance, when a woman, neither charitable nor hypocritical, based her private doubts as to the social antecedents of another upon the circumstance that the "suspect" cut up her fish before bringing the fork to bear upon it. "There was something amiss with her home education," was the shrewd and reluctant conclusion.

The importance of this home education cannot be exaggerated. While seven out of every ten business men lunch in restaurants, and five out of ten seek promiscuous sustenance three times a day in chop houses, "hash halls" and business hotels, table etiquette must be one of the least considered of trifles. Hardly one out of a score of prosperous citizens can eat his soup without audible suction, and the discusion of the breakfast orange commends to the squeamish spectator the wisdom of the dear old maids in Cranford, who always took their oranges in their own rooms, there to eat them without danger of annoyance to others. I have seen a millionaire pare his carefully, divide it into quarters and convey each quarter to his mouth upon the point of his silver fruit knife. The act may have been filially reminiscent of his early life. The effect upon unsympathetic beholders was peculiar and not appetizing.

Few "live" American men learn to eat slowly until the national dyspepsia has struck its fangs into their vitals. College boys in mess halls, clerks and salesmen and bookkeepers, however carefully trained at home, fall into slipshod table tricks that would horrify their mothers. But the cult of the fork is tenacious in its hold upon the most reckless. The collegian may gulp his coffee and bolt his steak and smack his lips over his soup. He would as soon double up his negatives and follow a plural noun by a singular verb as to carry his food to his mouth with his knife if taught in childhood that it is not decent to do it. Our young fellow—lazy or diligent, drunk or sober, prosperous or a "dead beat"—never violates the principle drilled into him by the time he could feed himself of absolute divorce between his lips and his knife. As a sign manual of polite education—taking "polite" at its just meaning—the use (or misuse) of the table fork is a faithful test, and an invariable one.

For the Turn of the Stairs.

Old Dutch candlesticks are odd and ornamental for the halls of the country house. They stand four feet high, and are enameled in a variety of colors. The shade of the candle is as large as a lamp-shade, and if the candlestick is in blue and white Delft figured cretonne is a suitable fabric. On the staircase landings these candlesticks are very effective. Tall silver taper holders of Russian workmanship are shaped like altar candlesticks and are as costly as they are handsome.

A ROBIN'S APPETITE

THE DAILY RATIONS FOR A SONG BIRD ARE STARTLING.

Food of the Little Beings That Flutter, Fly and Feed—Their Value to the Farmer—Man's Attitude Toward His Most Industrious Friend.

If a man ate as much daily in proportion to his weight and size as does a wren or a robin, to compass his food his statue would need be so great as to have the crowning head several feet further from the ground than is the capstone of the George Washington monument at the Capital City.

This statue estimate is based on the premise that the man with the big appetite would only need to gain in heigh. If he were 600 feet high and only a foot and a half thick he would be somewhat ungainly, and to bring him down from the clouds a bit, and still keep up the bird and food comparison, the man, to eat as much daily proportionately as a robin, must necessarily be thirty feet high, ten feet thick from back to front and five feet broad across the shoulders.

Moreover, if a man did his duty by his fellows in the selection of food, as do the wren and the robin, his diet would consist in the main of centipedes, scorpions, skunks, rattlesnakes, gophers, and tarantulas, and other creatures whose living is supposed to be a menace to the world.

It has been freely asserted by some scientists within the last few years that if all the birds which make the earth beautiful and musical were to die, the departure of all mankind from the world would not long be delayed.

From man's attitude toward the song and insectivorous birds, killing them and robbing their nests in the compunctionless way that he does, it does not appear that man has much dread of the fate which awaits him if his feathered friends take their flight to a better land. Notwithstanding human indifference to possible impending annihiliation if milliners' agents and hunters go on slaughtering the songsters, it is really not a difficult matter to demonstrate fairly conclusively that ornithological students are not far wrong when they say that man's life depends upon birds' life.

As a plain matter of fact, it is believed by everybody who has watched the little beings that "flutter, fly and feed" about his door, that if their appetites were not as vigorous as they are, and if the nature of their food were not such as it is, the insect plague of Pharoah would visit the land, so that it would be darkened with the multitudes of the visitants, and that they would "eat every herb of the land and all the fruit of the trees," and there would remain "not any green thing in the trees or in the herbs of the field." The farmer who sees a robin or a catbird pecking away at a cherry is likely to shoot the bird, forgetting in his wrath at the fruit theft the good offices of the bird in killing the insects which would have devoured the husbandman's trees, stalk, stem, leaf and fruit.

A GREEDY ROBIN.

A robin nestling, two-thirds grown, is fed by the mother bird every day food to the amount of four times the little one's weight. The mother bird, and the father bird, too, for that matter, probably eats proportionately the same amount. Now, a little calculation will show what this means. An average robin household contains four children. Let it be assumed that each little one weighs three ounces. This will make a food supply of twelve ounces daily for each nestling, or forty-eight ounces for the four birdlings. During the same time the father and mother, unless they are starving themselves for the benefit of the young, as sometimes seems much more than probable, will eat one pound of food apiece, making a total for the robin family of five pounds of provender for the day. During some months almost every bit of food consumed by old and young birds is of an insect nature, fruit forming but a smaller part of the diet. Early in summer a robin family was watched hourly, the head of the observer being within five feet of the nest, which the old birds visited fearlessly and fed their young, utterly ignoring the presence of six feet of humanity and a pair of staring eyes. A large part of the food which the redbreasts brought consisted of those green slugs which are seen so often feeding on the leaves and tender stems of the trees. It is this creature which invariably "humps" itself as it moves on its devastating way. Angle worms were, perhaps, more in evidence as food than any other single species of crawler, though caterpillars were fed frequently. At times each bird would bring as many as three insects at once. The feeding process was constant from sunrise until sunset, the old birds going not more than fifty yards from home for their food supply.

Angle worms, grubs, slugs, and the like are heavy provender, and the estimate of twelve ounces a day for the young and sixteen ounces a day for the old is doubtless on the under side of extravagance. If a man should undertake to eat as much in proportion to his size as does a robin he would supply his stomach every day with between 600 and 1,000 pounds of solid matter, the amount varying, of course, with his weight and stature. A man six feet tall, weighing 180 pounds, in order to keep pace with the robin, must need eat 750 pounds of solid matter a day, and if he would do the same amount of good in proportion to his size that a single redbreast does he would confine his diet to pestiferous animal and plant nuisances.

WHY THE HORSE SHIES

Sensible Explanation of the Habits of Well-Known Animals.

Dr. Louis Robinson, an English zoologist, has just given to the world an account of the habits and mode of life of certain animals, and the conclusion at which he seems to arrive is that all such phenomena may be explained on the ground of atavaism. Thus he claims that the horse of our day derives his swiftness and power of endurance from the fact that his ancestors in former days were obliged to flee from and frequently to defend themselves against their great enemies—the wolves. In like manner he claims that the reason that the horse shies is because his ancestors were forced to be constantly on the alert against hidden enemies, and that the reason that he rears and plunges is because only by pursuing such actics could his forefathers shake off wild animals who had leaped upon their backs.

Sheep when frightened immediately rush off to the highest point they can reach. The reason, says Dr. Robinson, is because all sheep originally inhabited mountainous districts. And this, he claims, is also the reason why they wear a thick fleece of wool all the year through, the summer temperature in mountainous districts being almost as cold as that of winter. Finally, we are assured that the reason sheep invariably follow a leader is because their ancestors were obliged to go in Indian file through the narrow mountainous passes.

Pigs have also engaged Dr. Robinson's attention. He was puzzled for a good while as to the cause of their grunting, says the Chicago Times-Herald, but now he thinks he has discovered the real reason. The pigs of to-day, he says, evidently grunt because their ancestors made their homes in thick woods, and only by making this sound could they keep track of each other and guard themselves against going astray from the common herd. Commenting on this latter explanation, a scientist suggests that Dr. Robinson might now do well to spend some time in trying to find out why the horse neighs and why the dog barks.

Well-Dressed Man Arouses Sympathy

The generosity supposed to be hidden under the mask of the ancient highwayman is sometimes present under the rags of his modern edition, the street tramp. A well-dressed man, who had just left the ferryhouse in New York after crossing the river, started to pick his way through the mud of the crossing. His patent leathers, his silk hat and his shining evening dress made him an obvious prey for the tattered dock bandit, who slouched up to him with the usual piteous cry for help to get a night's lodging.

"My dear fellow," said the well-dressed man with a sudden instinct of frankness; "I'm in my store clothes, but the fact is I've got to walk up town because I haven't a nickel to pay my car fare."

"Is that so?" said the other in an excited whisper. "Well, it ain't goin' to be said I left a pard in the lurch when he was dead broke."

And putting his hand into his rags, he hauled up a bewildering heap of silver and offered anything the other wanted.

The "pard" burst into a shout of laughter and insisted on shaking hands with the beggar, though he refused the nickel. And all through his trudge home he had plenty of food for thought, humorous and otherwise.

An Expert Swordfish.

Hank Carruthers, of Block Island, R. I., an old-time fisherman, last year caught a young sword fish, not more than two feet long, which had refused to leave the dead body of its mother, which he had harpooned after an exciting fight. The young fish survived the transportation to a tidal pond behind the Carruthers homestead and the entrance to the pond was closed with a net to prevent his escape. Since then Mr. Carruthers has tamed the fish so that it will feed from his hand, and the neighbors had become so accustomed to the sight that they did not notice it any more. Last month a French gentleman, who is a well known fencing teacher, M. Tierce, had been training the fish furtively. He had made a soft pad of leather, which he adjusted on the tip of his sword, like the button on a foil, and the two gave an exhibition bout of fencing which could not be equalled for nicety of action and correctness of dash in the Fencers' Club. The fish apparently knows all the rules of the game and carefully refrains from committing fouls. He cuts and slashes swiftly, and several times he caught M. Tierce unawares, says the New York Press, and nearly transfixed him. The Frenchman has offered Mr. Carruthers a large sum of money for the fish which he wishes to exhibit.

Hot Baths.

Here is a point that English folks might learn from the Japanese. The reason we are inclined, in this country, to catch cold after taking a hot bath in the daytime, is that we do not take it hot enough. If only you have the water as near boiling point as possible, there is no fear of your getting cold afterward. The Japanese revel in these hot tubs, says Chambers' Journal. They take them three and four times a day. In some districts of Japan, I believe, the people are amphibious; for months at a time they live practically in the water. A Japanese once called upon me, and he apologized at the outset of our conversation for being so unmannerly and dirty, for he had only had time to take two hot baths that day.

A Dangerous Indulgence.

AN OLD WEATHERCOCK

This Vane Has Turned to the Winds For Four Centuries.

There has just been removed from the spire of St. Sidwell's Church, at Exeter, a vane with a history more than usually interesting. Its career began more than four centuries ago.

It was in 1484 that Bishop Courtenay, of Exeter, heard that a great bell at Llandaff might be acquired, and, having a passion in that direction, he journeyed to the South Wales town and managed to secure the monster in exchange for five smaller ones. He successfully removed it to Exeter, and had it hoisted to the top of the northern tower of the Cathedral.

The tower, however, had not been designed to accommodate such a campanological giant, and room could only be found for it then by removing a portion of the roof. To protect his treasure the Bishop had erected over the tower a spire of oak, covered with lead, and he surmounted this by a vane, the conspicuous feature of which was a representative of a rooster in copper.

Its extreme length was two feet nine inches and height two feet six inches, while it was eight inches thick in the centre, being cast hollow. The chanticleer remained in this lofty position for 268 years, discharing the useful duty of telling the residents of the "Ever Faithful" city which way the wind blew. During the long spell of service it looked down on some strange and moving sights, for the period covered by its lofty exertions was rich in history making incidents.

In 1752 the spire was taken down, and the Peter bell was lowered in the tower far enough to allow the original level of the roof to be reverted to. The spire was re-erected on the tower of St. Sidwell's Parish Church—a tower, by the way, whic halso has a history.

For sixty years the old copper rooster rested from his labors in the Cathedral store, but in 1812 it was mounted on the St. Sidwell's spire, and there it remained until a few days ago, when it was removed preparatory to the demolition of the spire, which had been found to be in a dangerous condition. The old weather cock has braved the storms of 415 years, but it is believed that there is another century of active service in it yet.

Made Him Disgorge.

The following interesting story was published many years ago, but it authenticity cannot be vouched for, says the Albany Argus. In the year 1776, when Gov. Geo. Clinton resided in Albany, there came a stranger to his house one cold morning soon after the family had breakfasted. He was welcomed by the household and hospitably entertained. A breakfast was ordered, and the Governor, with his wife and daughter who were sitting before the fire employed in knitting, entered into conversation with him about the affairs of the country, which naturally led to the inquiry as to what was his occupation.

"The emotion and hesitation with which the stranger replied aroused the suspicion of the keen-sighted Clinton. He communicated his suspicions to his wife and daughter, who closely watched his every word and action. Unconsciouso f this, but finding that he had fallen among enemies, the stranger was seen to takes omething from his pocket and swallow it. Mme. Clinton, with the ready tact of a woman of those troubled times, went quickly into the kitchen and ordered hot coffee to be immediately prepared, and added to it a strong doze of tartar emetic. The stranger, delighted with the smoking beverage, partook freely of it, and Mme. Clinton soon had the satisfaction of seeing it produce the desired effect. True to Scripture, "out of his mouth he was condemned." A silver bullet appeared, which, upon examination was unscrewed and found to contain an important dispatch to Burgoyne. The spy was tried, convicted and executed, and the bullet is still preserved in the family.

He Wasn't Sure.

"Do you think I'm a simpleton, sir?" thundered a fiery Scotch laird to his new footman. "Ye see, sir," replied the canny Scot, "I'm no' lang here, an' I dinna ken yet."—Exchange.

POWER OF WATER

Hole Bored in a Bluff as if by a Cannon Ball.

A little group of solid citizens was standing on Baronne street, New Orleans, watching a cleaning gang at work with the hose.

"That reminds me of old days in California," said one of the party as the stream veered slightly and shaved off the corner of a pile of dirt. "I never realized how much force could be delivered by a jet of water," he continued, "until I tried hydraulic mining. It was in 1870, up on the Sacramento River. They had brought a stream down the Sierra Nevada Mountains in a big 'flume' that ended in a length of wire-wrapped hose and a six-foot nozzle with arm on the side for a couple of men to take hold of.

"They played the stream on a big bluff directly opposite, and it bored out the solid, packed foundation like living fire eating into tinder. For a dozen feet from the nozzle the water seemed like a hard blue bar and there was something strange and murderous looking in the way it drove straight out that made by flesh creep to watch it. Several laborers had been accidentally struck by the stream and in each case the man was killed as suddenly as if hit by a cannon ball.

"I remember on one occasion some rival claimant came down from Shasta and took possession of a cabin not far from the end of the flume line. Our boss, who was a big Irishman named Murphy, told us to play the stream on the place, and as we were all spoiling for a row we lost no time in obeying. I never saw such a demolition in my life. The shanty flew seven ways for Sunday and one of the fellows inside was pitched bodily through the air and landed in the river. The distance was so great nobody was hurt, and after that our gang was known as 'Murphy's light artillery.' Mark Twain draws a very vivid picture of hydraulic mining in 'Roughing It,' and from personal experience I can assure you he hasn't embroidered the facts in the least."

A Tornado's Freaks.

John R. Musick of Kirksville, Mo., thus describes, in the Century, certain madcap pranks of a tornado which passed through tht city.

"Many strange freaks were played by the tornado. In a tree-top was found a woman's hais, supposed to have been torn from her head as she was carried through its branches, yet no person was found near it. A human scalp was found three miles from the city limits, under a bridge. Notes, letters, and papers were blown from the city into Iowa, and found ninety miles away. One promissory note of $400 was found in a field near Grinnell, Iowa, nearly 100 miles away, while clothing and papers were scattered along the entire distance.

"One woman was decapitated by a tin roof, and her child was killed near her. Some persons who were outside the rotating current were killed or injured by flying timbers, which, like bolts from the catapult of Jove, flew with deadly force for a great distance, while others in the very center of the storm escaped with little or no injury.

Perhaps the most remarkble experiences were those of Miss Moorehouse, Mrs. Webster, and her son. The three were caught up in the storm, and were carried beyond the Catholic church, nearly one-fourth of a mile, and let down on the common so gently that none were killed. Mrs. Webster had some slight cuts about the head, her son had one arm fractured, but Miss Moorehouse was uninjured.

"I was conscious all the time I was flying through the air,' said Miss Moorehouse, 'and it seemed a long time. I seemed to be lifted up and whirled round and round, going to a great height, at one time far above the church steeples, and seemed to be carried a long distance. I prayed to the Lord to save me, for I believed he could save me, even on the wings of the tornado, and he did wonderfully preserve my life. As I was going through the air, being whirled about at the sport of the storm, I saw a horse soaring and rotating about with me. It was a white horse, and had a harness on. By the way it kicked and struggled as it was hurled about I know it was alive. I prayed to God that the horse might not come in contact with me, and it did not. I was mercifully landed upon the earth unharmed—saved by a miracle.'

"Young Webster says he saw the horse in the air while he was being borne along by the storm. 'At one time it was directly over me, and I was very much afraid I would come in contact with its flying heels.' The horse, it is said, was caught up and carried one mile through the air, and, according to the accounts of reputable witnesses, at times was over 200 feet high, passing over a church steeple. Many who were not in the storm say that they saw horses flying in the wind. Beyond being well plastered with mud, the white horse was uninjured by his aerial flight."

A Fine Job.

Two park laborers sat on the curbstone of the Eastern Parkway in Brooklyn eating dinner out of their pails, for it was the noon hour, and discussing their surroundings in a brogue which suggested that they hadn't been over very long. One of them fell to admiring the Museum of Arts and Sciences, which stands back from the Parkway.

"It's a foine big buildin'," he said; "an' solid enough put up to last forever."

"'Tis thot," agreed the other. "But what is it fer?"

"To kape dead boogs an' other crachures in," said the first. "It's a museum, it is."

"An' are them big letters cut into the stone above the windies the name uv it?"

"I dono what thim leters wud be," said the first speaker. He fell to spelling out the words, and presently a ray of intelligence succeeded the puzzled expression on his face.

"Sure, I hav it," said he. "Thim is the names av the contractors."

"'Tis a foine job they done, annyway," observed the other admiringly. "They'd be big men in their own line wid slathers of infloence, belike."

And Patrick made a good guess, for the names graven in the stone were Aeschylus, Sophocles, Pericles, Herodotus, Socrates, Theydilles, and Demosthenes.

BATTLES IN THE SEA

COMBATS BETWEEN BLUE CRABS AND MINNOWS.

The Crab Bails Its Claw and Walls for a Bite—Little Cannibals and Their Ways as Practised in the Brimy Deep—Soft Shell Crabs.

The blue crab is a pretty fair hand at catching fish. It will lie in shallow water motionless, with its pincer claws extended and its pincers open, waiting for a chance to nip a minnow. If one, coming swimming along through the water, should happen to pass between those open jaws, suddenly the jaws close and that is the last of the minnow. But the blue crab can do better than this; sometimes it will hold motionless in one claw a shred of something on which it has been feeding as a bait for minnows, holding at the same time its other big claw, with the pincer open, waiting. The minnow comes up, charging for the food held in the closed claw, but there are likely to be enough of them to spread, and they may come from various directions, so that more than likely one will come within the waiting pincers of the open claw, and when one does the proceedings are closed for the time being.

But sometimes the minnows get the blue crab, as they do when the crab is shedding. The crab knows when that time is coming, and then it makes for a place where it can shed its shell and stay in safety until its new shell is sufficiently hard to protect it. The crab comes in with the tide and makes for some place on the bottom, in shallow water, perhaps along the edge of the eel grass, or under some protecting patch of ulva, and then proceeds to dig a hole in which it can stay after it has shed its shell until it is strong enough to go about. It digs the sand or mud up around from under itself, and, as likely as not, leaves its discarded shell, in a most lifelike form, up on the sand on the edge of the hole in front of it. This shell would frighten away some small fishes that would not dare to tackle a crab in its ordinary condition. The discarded shell is a help to fishermen who are hunting crabs, because it shows where a crab may be found, and weakfish, which come in shore in shallow water to feed, hunt up soft crabs by searching the neighborhood of the spot where they find a shell, just as a fisherman would do.

Sometimes a fisherman discovers a soft crab by the splashing that the minnows kick up around it. If undisturbed the minnows swarming around the helpless crab kill it and eat it. But sometimes another blue crab will appear nd break up the minnow's feast. This is a blue crab that has not shed its shell, but has its armor on. It comes stalking in among the minnows, perhaps nipping one of them in one of its pincer claws as it comes up and dispersing the rest.

The blue crab is a cannibal; it will eat its own kind. If when this crab comes up there is any of the soft crab left, the newcomer will very likely eat that first, with one claw, holding meanwhile in its other, the wriggling minnow which it had seized at the outset, keeping that to top off with.

A Dog and the Elephant.

Visitors to the New York Zoo recently have been surprised to find a Newfoundland dog chained in one of the elephant cages living in apparent peace and contentment.

DOG AND ELEPHANT.

Every one expects to see the great elephant kill his companion with a single sweep of her trunk, and crowds ferquently gather at the cage expecting a battle, but the dog eats and sleeps without being molested.

The secret of this strange companionship, which no one ever guesses, is that the dog Prince is really the master of the household and the elephant lives in constant fear of him.

On more than one occasion Prince has succeeded in quieting the great beasts when the keepers were powerless to master them. Elephants are naturally nervous and easily excited, and when once aroused are difficult to control. The keepers have found that when everything else fails they need merely send Prince into the cage and the furious monsters will back to their corners and remain quiet.

Men who are always in a hurry, and most men are, want a soap for the toilet that will lather quickly and freely in hot or cold water. Other soaps than Ivory may have this quality, but will likely contain alkali, which is injurious to the skin. Ivory Soap is made of pure vegetable oils, no alkali, produces a white, foamy lather, that cleanses thoroughly and rinses easily and quickly. Money cannot buy a better soap for the toilet.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

A good programme of races was presented at the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park Association Saturday afternoon and the usual large crowd was in attendance. These races have caused a good deal of friendly rivalry and most every week low time is made. An additional attraction was offered Saturday when P. C. Kellogg and P. H. Powers, of New York, well known horsemen, were present. Two colts, "Aglow" and 'Guess Again," owned by Mr. Kellog, and being trained by Peter Osborn, of New Market, furnished an exciting race. "Aglow" won in 2:45. A. C. Vail's horse "Kenelm," gave another fine exhibition driven to a road wagon. He was paced by "Myrtle Twig," and made the mile in 2:26. Two other interesting match races were given as follows:

Trolley Cars Delayed

The trolley system of the Brunswick Traction Company was generally disorganized Saturday afternoon owing to trouble at the power house in Milltown. Several times the cars stopped and once the passengers were compelled to wait fifty minutes before the trouble was overcome and the power was in evidence again.

News of the wreck was sent to Jersey City and Phillipsburg. Four wrecking trains arrived at the scene of the wreck an hour after it happened and worked steadily until 6 o'clock last evening, when the westbound track was opened. Two hours later the first eastbound train passed through Whitehouse. Trainmaster J. T. Olhansen was on the scene in charge of the operations. Jack Gaffney, of Plainfield, was the operator at the special railroad telegraph office established at the scene of the wreck.

Traffic was at a complete standstill over the main line of the Central west of Bound Brook. The morning trains came as far as Whitehouse and then backed down to Bound Brook where they went over the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The paper train went over the Lehigh Valley and was stalled by a washout.

From early morning to sundown the wreck was visited by several thousand people.

Bismarck Contemplated Suicide.

Herr Harden, Prince Bismarck's intimate friend and companion, has caused a sensation in Berlin by the publication of some curious facts about the great German.

The most sensational revelation was that, when his political career closed, Bismarck—the monumental man of the last half of the century, the most successful of mortals, if success be measured by achievements—actually contemplated suicide.

He says:

"Bismarck undoubtedly contemplated suicide as a relief from his intense sufferings, the full extent of which was only known to those about him; but he was restrained by pride.

"His own words to me were: 'People wish me long life. It is very kind of them. If they could take away my pains I also would consent to their wishes. But, as it is, my duties now consist of washing, shaving and cutting the nails of my hands and toes and such matters.

"'I have become a useless member of human society. Since I can no longer go out my pleasures have been reduced to the modest dimensions of a good glass of wine, which is too often forbidden to me now, and, again, a pinch of snuff. Should one wish to live longer thus? My good wife is no longer with me.

"'I am completely contented to die and long for Euthanasia. It is no longer considered respectable and moral for a man to put an end to a used-up life. It was different in classical days. We have all read Cornelius Nepos and what he says about suicide. We have become more sentimental.

"'If one were to end his life now the motive would be twisted, the wildest reports circulated. No one can blame me for not being able to do more. I have had to give up political business; the sight of the development of affairs furnishes no pleasure for me; I have too long looked on agriculture as a minor employment to let it rule my life now.'

"Then, after a pause, Bismarck said: 'People do not know what it is to feel one's self slowly dying, and there are, in addition, the pains with their innumerable shades.'"

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World

"In Greater York" which is to be seen at the Music Hall tonight, is a sort of farce-comedy extravaganza displaying the eccentricities and comicalities of some of the people who make up the population of the metropolis, and a vehicle for the introduction of numerous clever specialties.

Bright sayings, catchy music and pretty costumes mark the production, and the entertainment is of a fresh and varied sort throughout. That clever comedian, Mark Murphy, as the porter, Darby Goleary, has ample opportunity to present a budget of his own drolleries in the most mirth-provoking manner. His monologue is a delightful mixture of Irish wit and humor.

Next in point of excellence may be rated the songs and specialties of Miss Amy Lee, and Jenny Reynolds with a neat travesty of the regulation vaudeville entertainment of the period. Others in the cast worthy of mention are Harry West, Miss Gypsy Ward, Miss West, John T. Hanson, Maybele Drew, Billy Raymore, Miss St. Clair, Nat Wixon, W. F. Gilmore, H. A. Barnett, Alice Morton and W. J. Alexander, and the "Fifth Avenue Swells" and "Tenderloin Rounders." The music of "Greater New York," arranged and performed by Orville L. Mayhood, is a pleasant feature of the farce comedy.

A novel entertainment, pleasing throughout, free from all vulgarity, and the singing of which is phenomenal, virility and power is given by John W. Isham's Octoroons, the next attraction at Music Hall, Thursday night. There is nothing tawdry or dizzy about this show. It is a high-class affair in every respect. There are 40 people in this company, the girls being handsome, while the comedians are all eccentric. The opening sketch, "7-11-77," is original, and deals with policy playing, crap shooting, etc. During the action of the first part specialties are introduced and the latest songs are sung. Dancing also forms part of the entertainment. The olio is a strong one, headed by Belle Davis, who was the hit of Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, New York, all summer, followed by Smart & Williams, the Brittons, Hampton & Johnson, Wm. Mozambique English, Billy Miller, P. L. Plankey and others. The last portion of the programme is devoted to Thirty Minutes Around the Operas, cast to the full strength of the company. The chorus is noted for its tunefulness and harmony, and some extraordinary singing is done during the operatic soiree. The scenic equipments and costuming is all that could be desired. Taken as a whole the programme presented by this famous organization will go ahead of that seen in more pretentious houses. The Octoroons enjoyed an all-summer run at Madison Square Roof Garden, New York, and were an immense success.

The announcement is made even this early that Labor Day will be appropriately celebrated at both the Proctor theatres—the Twenty-third Street Theatre, just West of Sixth avenne, and the Pleasure Palace, at Fifty-eighth street and Third avenue. The important fact, beyond the statement that extra stars will be specially engaged, is that the entertainment will run all day from 10:30 a. m. until 11 p. m. without interruption. Truly, this is a vast amount of entertainment for 25 and 50 cents. This week a plentitude of uncommonly diverting comedy acts and sterling features mark the programmes arranged at both the Proctor theatres. The waning summer season seems to have developed more than usually good entertainments at these continuous theatres of Mr. Proctor's. Hot weather provokes no fears to the Proctor management. At the Pleasure Palace, week of Aug. 28th, the feature will be Robert Downing who will play his farewell engagement in vaudeville here.

SEARCHING FOR A HERMIT'S CASH.

Nephew of Bill Gould of Scotch Plains.

HEIR TO A SMALL FORTUNE.

RELATIVES OF JAY GOULD READS HIS UNCLE'S WILL.

The Gratitude of a Dying Man Who Bequeathes Mrs. Eva Brown Money for Nursing Him Back to Life—Search Being Made in This City for the Horded Earnings of a Well Know Old Miser.

Scarcely any one is to be found in Scotch Plains and vicinity who doesn't remember William Gould, who lived away back of the 'Plains on a small farm. All the boys recall old "Bill" Gould. His face was as familiar as the frowsy little mule which was his constant companion when on a visit to the village. "Bill" was as eccentric as one could immage. Seated behind his mule, on a two-wheeled gig, the old man attracted more or less attention because of his quaint dress and unkempt appearance. He was tall, raw-boned and angular.

For more than thirty years "Bill" Gould had lived the life of a recluse. His farm of about seven acres was located on the New Providence road. He was of a reticent disposition and made but few friends. To those whom he made even the lest pertence of confidence he would tell but little. He had said that his early life was passed up in New York State.

Inquisitive neighbors, who occasionally had the temerity to pry into the old man's private affairs, were not infrequently snubbed. Gould admitted that he knew Jay Gould, and when pressed for an answer as to whether he was related to the distinguished financier, he would reply brusqely: "I suppose I be." The old man had sometimes spoken of Delaware county, N. Y., and many of his neighbors believed that he had at one time been associated with Jay Gould in the latter's early struggles. "Bill" Gould is thought to have been a second cousin of Jay Gould, and it is possible that they were brought up together in Delaware county. However, it is well known that Jay Gould lived near Roxbury, Delaware county, and that he attended the old academy at Fayetville.

It was along in the early '70's that Gould secured the small plot of land that for a number of years he cultivated. He built a rude frame structure away up on the brow of the mountain, a most picturesque spot, which in after years came to be coveted by men of more advanced ideas of civilization than was possessed by the occupant.

When Gould had occasion to go to town to sell the products of his small farm he would invariably drive down from his moutain home behind the sure-footed mule.

His old gray hat was generally pulled half way over his eyes, while creeping from beneath it long locks of iron gray hair protruded above his face, which was fringed by a heavy, bushy beard streaked with silver. He was truly a quaint looking character.

No one troubled him and he troubled no one. Along in 1890 Gould was taken sick, and but for the kind attention of Mrs. Eva Brown, a neighbor, he would have died alone in his crude home on the mountains. Mrs. Brown had missed the old man for several days and she thought it passing strange. Finally the good woman decided to investigate. The poor mule was found tied to a pole in the rear of the shanty. It was the strange conduct of the beast that at first led Mrs. Brown to think that all was not right at the old man's home.

With some difficulty Mrs. Brown finally succeeded in gaining admission to the interior of the house. What a sight met her gaze! Stretched upon a miserable apology for a bed she found the old man, sick unto death. Mrs. Brown immediately set to work to make him comfortable, and then looked after the mule, which was nearly starved, having had nothing to eat in several days.

Mrs. Brown set the squalled place to rights. Then for days she never ceased to administer to the unfortunate man's wants.

But the serious illness of the old man had told on his previously good constitution and he was compelled to give up farming. From time to time efforts had been made by various persons to buy the Gould farm, but they always failed. Finally, in the summer of 1891, Ernest C. Kieb, of Fanwood, succeeded in purchasing the land, paying Gould $2,100 for it.

When the farm was sold Gould moved to the village of Scotch Plains, where he boarded with a well-known family until the spring of 1898, when he died.

Not many months after Gould sold the farm he made his will. The instrument was drawn by Harry C. Runyon, of this city. Although it was always supposed that Gould was a poor man, it is now believed that he had accumulated considerable money. In the will Gould bequeathed $100 to Mrs. Eva Brown, the woman who had nursed him in his serious illness. The balance of his estate he divided equally between his two sisters, Miss Mahaley Gould, of Manchester, N. H., and Mrs. Lucy Morton, of Monson, Me.

The will was deposited in the First National Bank of this city, but was never admitted to probate, tne relatives seemingly not thinking that the old man had any means.

It appears that after Gould had received the cash for the sale of his farm he went to New York and deposited the money in the Seamans' Bank, where it is also supposed he had made previous deposits. Soon after making his will, however, the old man withdrew his money from the Seaman's Bank, but what he did with it is not definitely known. The fact that Gould had left any will or that he had made a deposit in the Seamans' Bank was not known until quite recently, and that was learned by mere accident.

It came about in this way: A. H. Morton, a son of Mrs. Lucy Morton, of Monson, Me., who lives in Chicago, where he is connected with the extensive establishment of Marshall Field & Company, had business in New York. One day Mr. Morton ran across a relative, who made inquiries regarding his eccentric uncle, and was told that he had died some years ago. The stranger, who had known the old man in his younger days, then informed the nephew that his uncle had been in the habit of making deposits in the Seamans' Bank in New York, and he believed that he had money in one of the banks of Plainfield. A visit was paid to the Seamans' Bank, but Mr. Morton was told that his uncle had transferred his account to another bank.

Dilligent search in New York threw no light upon the matter and Mr. Morton came to Plainfield to ascertain what he could regarding his deceased uncle's money. Accompanied by Mr. Runyon, Mr. Morton visited the First National Bank in this city last Saturday morning. There to his surprise he found the will, which was opened and read. But no cash was on deposit in the name of William Gould, and the bank officials said there never had been. The only thing Mr. Gould had placed in the custody of the bank was the will. It is believed that when Gould sold his farm and it was necessary to look up the original deed that he had then transferred what money he had in the Seamans' Bank to some other instiution or else had concealed it about his personal effcets, which he always kept in an old wooden box.

The matter has been placed in the hands of Attorney H. C. Runyon, who has been authorized by Mr. Morton, of Chicago, to make a dilligent search for the missing cash. It is the belief of those who knew the habits of old "Bill" Gould that he had amassed quite a small fortune. His frugal, almost penurious characteristics, were known to every one and it is highly possible that he has horded upwards of $8,000 or $10,000. A thorough search is to be made at once among the old man's personal effects, which are still at the home of the family with whom he boarded previous to his death.

BIG DYNAMITE BLAST.

Mayor Smalley to Shatter Rock in Sight of the Clambake Visitors.

As an extra attraction for the clambake to be held tomorrow afternoon at the Mountain Park Inn by the Plainfield Advancement Association, Mayor Smalley, who has stone quarries not far off, will arrange for a big blast of rock. It will be one of the most extensive made in sometime, and a large amount of dynamite will be used. It has also been arranged to have a photograph of the blast taken. The blast will take place at 3 o'clock.

Among those who are expected to speak at the Advancement Association clambake is the popular Silas Dewey Drake. It was feared that his health would not permit, but the management are now assured of his presence.

PROJECT TO WIDEN SOMERSET STREET

Mayor Smalley is Promoting Plans for the Improvement.

THE TAXPAYERS FAVOR IT.

TROLLEY TRACKS NOW MONOPOLIZE TOO MUCH SPACE.

The Plan is to Widen the Street From the Green Brook Bridge to Jackson Avenue, Taking a Few Feet From all the Properties Between Those Points—Many Interested Ones.

Mayor Smalley, of the borough, has a reputation for being progressive, and he is maintaining this in more ways than one. He now has a scheme whereby the borough will have a great improvement that is apparent to everyone. It is that of widening Somerset street, from the county bridge to Jackson avenue, thus giving carriages and cyclists more room. This is needed in view of the amount of room monopolized by the trolley. In rainy weather, when the street is muddy, it is very difficulty to get along and the need of a wider street has pressed itself on the minds of the Mayor.

The idea is to take a little off of both sides where it is possible, and where it is not, only one side will be touched. Mr. Smalley has the scheme figured out in his mind, but it is a little early to give the thing away in detail. However, he has seen a sufficient number of property owners along the street, and they all declare themselves in favor of the project, for they can readily see the advantages to be gained by it.

The distance selected from the bridge to Jackson avenue is deemed sufficient, but it is learned that those living beyond want the street widened and there is an opportunity of doing the work it will be continued for a further distance. His Honor will present his scheme before the Council before anything is done in the matter.

COMING TO CRANFORD

Telephone Exchange to Follow Free Postal Delivery.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Cranford, Aug. 29—The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is endeavoring to locate an exchange at this place. For the past week Special Agent Irving I. Ross, of Westfield, has been in town endeavoring to secure the fifty subscribers necessary for the establishment of the exchange. So far thirty subscribers have been secured, and in all probability the exchange wille be located here, which with the free postal delivery system, will be another improvement for Cranford.

Block-Signal System Completed.

After several months of preparation the installation of the new automatic block signal system on the New York division of the Pennsylvania Railroad was completed yesterday by the placing in service of the last connecting link between New Brunswick and Monmouth Junction. Between Jersey City and Rahway and Trenton and Philadelphia the system has been in operation for about two years.

Now that George Thatcher has returned to minstrelsy and is traveling on the road with his own minstrel company, the "Maples" is likely to change hands. Mrs. Thatcher is still there but is anxious to find a new lessee for the well-known road house on South avenue.

Broke His Ankle.

AFTER THE CONTRACTOR.

SOMERSET COUNTY ROAD WORK IS NOT SATISFACTORY.

Adjoining Property Owners Will Not Pay Their Assessments Because They Claim That the Macadamizing is Not Good.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders are meeting today at Belle Mead for the purpose of ascertaining the condition of the macadam road leading from Somerville to Belle Mead which was improved sometime ago. The property-owners along that road, which is nearly six miles long, refuse to pay their share of 10 per cent. for the work of repairing the road until Hugh Reel, of Somerville, the contractor, completes his work. Mr. Reel is under contract to put the road in the best of condition.

A portion of the road was repaired, but not to the satisfaction of the property owner or Freeholders. As the matter has been held in abeyance for sometime past, the Freeholders thought it time that something should be done.

The Freeholders are of the same opinion as the property owners, and after examination they will ascertain if Contractor Reel intends completing his work. If he will not finish it the Freeholders will call in the services of the County Engineer and he will complete the work. The Freeholders will then deduct the amount and cost for the repairs from the amount to be paid to Mr. Reel.

A NEW WATER COMPANY

WOULD LOCATE ON SECOND MOUNTAIN BACK OF WASHINGTONVILLE.

New York Capitalists are Interested in Scheme and Promise to Push It—Might Extend Lines to Plainfield.

The value of the high ground back of Scotch Plains and Washington Valley as a source of water supply is just beginning to be generally appreciated. The Feltville Water Company has prepared to supply the neighboring towns and cities with water on a large scale. Now comes a statement from one who should certainly know what he is talking about, that another company is in process of organization and will establish itself on the second range of mountains, back of Washingtonville.

The statement is made that several New York capitalists are interested in the scheme and have looked the situation over and are satisfied that it is a good investment. The authority for it is one who is largely interested in property in that section, and keeps fully in touch with any movement looking toward the advantages of that section.

It is said that the company will furnish Washingtonville and Somerset Park with water and may also try to enter North Plainfield and Plainfield.

To Furnish Music at the Play.

George Rogers, who has conducted the Hotel Hunterston orchestra during the summer months, will resume his duties as musical director of the orchestra at Music Hall next week. The orchestra at the hotel will still be under his charge, but he will personally direct the one before the footlights.

Appraising the Stock.

The stock in the store of VanEmburgh & Son has been inventoried, and today the appraisers, Andrew Love, Sr., Howard Pope and Peter Schultz, are going over the stock. Judge Codington, the assignee, expects to open the store for the sale of the stock in a few days.

Judge Runyon at Home.

City Judge William N. Runyon is once more on duty as local magistrate. He returned Sunday evening after spending a week with friends in the Catskills. The Judge is looking very well since his return from his vacation and is ready for the fall campaign.

No Barmaids in Hoboken.

The Hoboken Innkeepers' Protective Association, to which nearly all saloon keepers in that city belong, has placed the seal of its disapproval on the employment of barmaids, and will not admit to the association any saloon keeper who employs a barmaid to attract business.

Counties to Pay for New Walk.

Work was started yesterday under the direction of the freeholders of Union and Somerset counties to lay a concrete walk on Somerset street over the county bridge. A good substantial walk will be laid at a total expence of about $200.

Conferred Three Degrees.

At the meeting of Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., last night, two candidates received the third degree. Routine business was transacted.

F. M. Ward and family, of Fairview avenue, are spending their vacation in the Adirondacks.

A SUPERIOR POSTAL SERVICE TO BE HAD.

Changes to Go Into Effect at the Postoffice.

THREE MORE CARRIERS.

THE CITY AND BOROUGH HAS BEEN REDISTRICTED.

One of the New Carriers Assigned to North Plainfield—Another Will Be Mounted for the Outlying Territory of the City—The New Districts and the Men Who Are Assigned to Them.

Increased postal facilities, accompanied by better service, will go into effect Friday, Sept. 1st. Since Postmaster Bird was notified that the office had been allowed three extra carriers, he has been busily engaged in redistricting the city and making thorough and complete arrangements for introducing the additional carriers and shifting the others to obtain the best possible service. After Mr. Bird had completed his task he forwarded his plan and map to the postal authorities at Washington for approval. They were approved and yesterday returned to Plainfield.

An additional point in favor of Plainfield secured by Mr. Bird is the securing of an additional mounted carrier, making three in all. No. 12, Robert Loughlin, has secured this position. The other two are Edward Dunn and Patrick Reville.

North Plainfield is well cared for by having three carriers who do nothing but deliver mail in that section, while there will be a separate business delivery on Somerset street to Manning avenue.

The business section of the city will have four deliveries a day as at present, and if possible a good portion of the city will receive three deliveries, while the rest will have two deliveries. The carriers will commence work at 6:45 a. m., fifteen minutes earlier than at present, and will quit when their eight hours are up. John Hines, one of the new carriers, will be stationed at the carriers' window in the afternoon in place of Carrier Shea, who has had the position four years. As for the redistricting it will be seen by the following that the whole territory is well looked after, and the plan is one of credit to the postmaster who arranged it.

Carrier No. 1, Oliver Pierson, will cover a territory from Madison avenue east to Centre street, Netherwood; No. 2, Daniel Shea, will take in Watchung avenue and Sixth street out as far as Hillside avenue; No. 3, Charles Stephens, covers a territory between Fourth street and Stelle avenue and Madison and Plainfield avenues; No. 4, John Hines, will go from Fourth street to West Front street and from Madison avenue to Plainfield avenue; No. 5, William Demarest, will look after the territory from Greenbrook to Linden avenue and from Somerset street to West End avenue; No. 6, J. W. A. Bauersachs, has from Somerset street to Franklin avenue and from Greenbrook to Grandview avenue; No. 7, Charles Glaentzer, will have the business section and will make a business delivery on Somerset street to Manning avenue; No. 8, Edward Dunn, will cover everything west of Grant avenue; No. 9, Edward T. VanWinkle, will look after the route between Central and Watchung avenues, taking in Ninth street and Fifth street between Watchung and Central avenues; No. 10, Patrick Revelle, will have a portion of Netherwood district, East Front street and Farragut road; No. 11, Chas. Gies, will look after Watchung avenue to Farragut road and from Greenbrook to East Third street; No. 12, Robert Loughlin, has from Plainfield to Watchung avenues, southeast of Ninth street: No. 13, John Burns, will have the territory between Plainfield and Grant avenues and from the Railroad to Ninth street; No. 14, Robert Tingley, will take care of the route from Linden to Fritz avenue and from Grove street to Westervelt avenue.

WOMAN'S SUDDEN DEATH

THE WIDOW NANKIN FOUND DEAD ON THE FLOOR.

Discovery Made By One of Her Step children at Her Home on Carlton Avenue—Two Children Left Alone

Mrs. Theodore G. Nankin died suddenly at her home, 330 Carlton avenue, early yesterday afternoon.

She was found by her little daughter lying upon the floor in an upper apartment.

The girl notified one of the neighbers, who hastily came to the house and attempted to revive the woman, Then Dr. Murray was notified, but the physician saw at a glance that the woman was beyond medical aid.

The police authorities were apprised of the death and Chief Grant visited the house about 2 o'clock. He then notified County Physician Westcott who later examined Mrs. Nankin and decided that death was due to heart failure. Later the body was removed by Undertaker Runyon to the morgue.

The couple came to Plainfield from Canada several years ago, and for a time they formerly lived at 330 Richmond street, where her husband died about fifteen months ago of dropsy. Before coming to the states, Nankin had been a stock dealer, but he did not follow that occupation here because of ill health.

Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Nankin has had a struggle to support herself and children. But for the kindness of the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church she would have fared poorly.

Recently Mrs. Nankin has complained of not feeling well and yesterday went up stairs to rest after dinner, telling the children to keep quiet for a short time while she took a nap. About an hour afterwards one of the children had occasion to go up stairs and looking in the room was surprised to see her mother lying upon the floor near the bed. The children consist of a boy aged 13, and a girl of 11 years. Both were children of her husband by his first wife.

Until some of the relatives of the deceased can be notified the body will remain in charge of Undertaker Runyon.

Unless word is received from the woman's relatives or friends in Canada the body will be be buried beside that of her husband in Hillside Cemetery. In the meantime kind neighbors are looking after the orphaned children.

WILL SPLICE CABLE.

Splicing Will Complete the New Telephone Lines to New York.

The cable which is to connect the four new trunk lines of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company with the system of underground wires of the company in Plainfield, has been put in position. It runs from Netherwood where the trunk lines end to South avenue and Richmond street where the underground conduits begin. The cable is in four sections and will have to be spliced. It was used in the city but was taken down at the time of the removal of the overhead wires. Several of the company's expert cablemen are expected here today to splice the cable.

Wires to Go Underground Soon.

The work of putting the wires of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company under ground will start very soon. The cable and other necessaries were ordered some time ago and are now expected every day. As soon as they arrive the work will be begun at once. It is expected that the underground system will be ready for use this fall, but the overhead wires will probably not be removed until spring

Tore His Bonds in Two.

Samuel Devoe, of Spotswood, ten miles from New Brunswick, has lost faith in banks since the Valentine defalcation, and accordingly he has withdrawn his deposits in the New Brunswick banks. Taking some bonds which he had in bank, he tore them in two and kept one half and left the other half with the bank, secure in the belief that no one would care to do anything with half a bond.

An Exchange of Properties.

LaRue & Cuming have made an exchange of properties for P. Warburton, of East Front street, and Isaac Ireland, of Somerset street. Mr. Warburton will make his home in England and Mr. Ireland now occupies the East Front street property.

For the accomodation of those desiring to make application for naturalization papers, the County Clerk's office will be open on the evenings of Thursday, Aug. 31st, and Friday, September 1st, from 7:30 to 9:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pope and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Pope are to have a musical tomorrow evening at their home on East Fifth street.

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR MUSIC HALL.

Manager Maze Edwards Has a Fine Season.

MANY GOOD PLAYS BOOKED.

SOME OF THE LEADING ONES TO BE SEEN THIS WINTER.

Joe Jefferson Has Promised to Come—Also Mme. Modjeska—"The Christian" and "The Children Of The Ghetto" are Booked to Appear in Music Hall—Many Other Fine Attractions Promised.

If there is one busy man in Plainfield today that individual is Manager Maze Edwards, of the Stillman Music Hall. It may appear an easy thing to direct operations in a theatre in a suburban city, but it isn't when the work is properly done. The theatrical season in Plainfield has practically just opened and Manager Edwards is an exceedingly busy man looking after all the details of his charge. This is third season that Mr. Edwards has been in charge of Music Hall and it promises to be an eminently successful one.

It is the intention of Manager Edwards to give the theatre going people of Plainfield two plays a week. All of the first-class plays are slow this season in booking their stands, but Mr. Edwards has been quite successful in securing the promise of a number of the best now on the American stage. Others will be booked if possible later in the season. Mr. Edwards believes that Plainfield will give him good support if he, in turn, gives them the best of the performances now on the stage. And that is just what he is going to do this season.

One of the first of the leading actors of the day is Joe Jefferson. He is now booked to appear in Plainfield in a dramatization of Dicken's "The Cricket and the Hearth." Mme. Modjeska, the world renowned emotional actress, will be here in one of her best selections.

Leiber and Co., the theatrical managers, have promised their two great attractions to Manager Edwards. One is "The Christian," which played to crowded houses in New York all last winter. It will be presented by a very strong cast. The other is "The Children of the Ghetto," that is to appear in New York this season and which is predicted to be one of the successes of the coming season.

Frohman's "The Little Minister" played to a large audience at Music Hall last season and made a great hit. The same company is booked for another appearance here this fall.

Last winter New York was over-run with different versions of Dumas' "Three Musketeers." Among the best was James O'Neil's "The Musketeer," which played for many weeks to large audiences. O'Neil and his New York company will appear in Music Hall as one of the strong attractions for the coming season.

Then there will be the great rival to "The Old Homestead," "Way Down East," which had such a successful run at the Manhattan Theatre. One of its successors at the Manhattan, "Mile Fifi," is also booked by Manager Edwards.

"The Heart of Maryland," with its famous bell ringing scene, in which Mrs. Leslie Carter made such a success, will be presented by a powerful cast, and will lose none of its effectiveness when presented on the local stage. There are a host of other well-known dramas on the list as well. The spectacular "Dan'l Boone," Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Fred Miller's American opera, "Davy Jones," "Blue Jeans," and many others are now booked to appear.

Several of Lincoln J. Carter's superbly staged dramas will come to Plainfield. Wm. Barrie will appear in his father's new play, "The Rising Generation." A successful southern drama, "The Knobs of Tennessee," has been booked.

Washburn's Minstrels are coming again. So is John W. Vogel's Afro-American troupe. Thursday night John W. Isham's Famous Octoroons open in Music Hall with Belle Davis, of Hammerstein fame, as one of the stars.

Repertoire companies will be few and far between this season. The Borroughs Company and three other equally good ones are all that Manager has booked. Altogether he has a decidedly satisfactory lot of attractions for the fall and winter, which gives promise of many a pleasant evening's entertainment for the many theatregoers of Plainfield and vicinity.

Mrs. Carr, of West Fifth street, is detained at home by illness.

Mrs. Moses Haven, of Washington, is visiting Plainfield relatives.

THE INTEREST CONTINUES

Crowds Attend the Captain Dreyfus Court-Martial at Rennes.

MERCIER SITS IN COURT.

He Has Not Fled to the Island of Jersey as Reported, But Occupies His Usual Seat.

Witnesses Against Dreyfus Gather Nightly and Prepare for the Following Day's Proceedings—French Government Decides to Prosecute the Edair.

Rennes, Aug. 9.—The fourth week of the trial of Capt. Dreyfus has thus far gone on with no cessation in the public interest. The court-room is thronged at every session.

Gen. Mercier, who, it was rumored, had fled to the island of Jersey, occupied his usual seat. It is now known that he is under constant espionage, and that any attempt on his part to take French leave would result in his immediate arrest. He is living with his wife in absolute seclusion. All the shutters of the house are closed. It looks abandoned.

M. Cavaignac, a former Minister of War and one of Dreyfus's bitterest enemies, did not leave town, as supposed, after finishing his testimony two weeks ago. He is still in Rennes, living in absolute secrecy in a little apartment on a narrow, unfrequented street near the theatre. There nightly gather Mercier, Gonse, Boideffre and others, and plan the campaign for the following day.

There was much excitement when it was learned that the Cabinet had met and seriously considered the question of arresting Gen. Mercier at once. This arrest was to be based on his admissions last week. The conclusion reached, it is believed, was to postpone his arrest until the end of the present court-martial. The Ministers do not like to take the risk of provoking a great public convulsion.

M. Jafay-Laval, the draughtsman, continued with the aid of a blackboard his presentation of the argument of M. Bertillon. M. Trireux, a Senator and former Minister of Justice, was one of the star witnesses of the day.

The Government has decided to prosecute the Eclair for printing the "Canaille de D——" paper, one of the four documents secretly communicated to the Dreyfus court-martial of 1894, which has been shown not to refer to Dreyfus at all. The object is to discover who gave it to the Eclair, whether Du Paty de Clam or Gen. Gonse.

Captain Freystaetter is the new hero of the day. His testimony last week confounding Gen. Mercier and Col. Maurel, is the most important so far received.

Capt. Freystaetter, like Dreyfus, is an Alsatian. Though only forty-two years old, long, hard service in the field has made him gray. He has fought in thirty-four battles in the provinces. Tall, erect, dignified, wearing numerous decorations, he makes an imposing appearance, and his calm, firm bearing in court, contrasting with Manrel's fury and Mercier's abuse, added weight to his evidence.

Etienne Charavay, the famous handwriting expert, produced a decided sensation by his testimony contradicting Bertillon and his own former statements. Instead of the repetition of his charges, the astonished court and audience heard him declare that he had been misled by the striking likeness between Dreyfus's handwriting and that of the bordereau, but said that opportunity for further observation and comparison had undeceived him. He said that it was impossible that Dreyfus should have been the penman.

The expert's retraction created a sensation among Dreyfus's foes and friends alike. The latter were delighted and expressed the belief that M. Charavay's testimony could not fail to impress the court profoundly. The generals and their clique could not conceal their chagrin.

Each ship carries a picked crew and a general cargo.

ACCUSERS DENOUNCED.

Wayne McVeigh Presents His Brief in the Carter Case.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 29.—Wayne MacVeagh has presented to Attorney General Griggs his brief, asking that the conviction of Captain Oberlin M. Carter, of the engineer corps, be set aside. In it be vigorously denounces "the enemies of Captain Carter" and makes a personal declaration that his client is blameless. The brief says:—

"I began the examination of the record of the trial with the strongest impression that Captain Carter must be guilty. A most careful study of the evidence has completely satisfied me that Captain Carter is as innocent a man as I am. It is not only that there is absolutely nothing in the proofs submitted which is entirely compatible with his innocence, but many facts are proven which are absolutely irreconcilable with his guilt.

"A serious misrepresentation is that the President has been desirous of shielding Captain Carter. The President, to my knowledge, has never asked of anybody but two questions concerning this case. First, was Captain Carter's trial conducted in accordance with law, and in the second place, is he innocent or guilty?

"Innumerable falsehoods have been communicated to the press during the last year concerning this case, but I hope that here after the enemies of Captain Carter will cease furnishing them, or that they will have the courage to sign them with their proper names, or all honest men must believe them to be not only wilful, but also cowardly, defamers of an innocent man.

"I desire to assume the entire responsibility for Captain Carter's silence. He has often begged for permission to bring his maligners into a court of justice, but I have insisted that sooner or later his case would be fairly heard and properly decided, and that it was impossible for him to enter into disputes before that hearing had taken place."

Think Bribery Helped Them Out.

Wallace, Idaho, Aug. 29.—George A. Craddock, Joseph Inman, Jerry Cronin, Alexander Wills and Patrick Addudel, under indictment for the murder of Cheyne and Smith in the Wardner riot of April last, escaped from the stockade at Wardner. One of the soldier guards is also missing. The manner of the escape is unknown but no one doubts that bribery played an important part.

During his boyhood days Mr. Bryan was a member of this church.

Earned, Not Bought.

Staying Power Counts in A .

Plainfield people need not be told how hard it is to earn and maintain a good reputation, and how easy it is to lose one. After such a loss it is well nigh impossible to recover the ground and the majority of those who have slipped by the wayside have been forced to stay there. As with a man's reputation, so it is with medicinal preparations. Some achieve a reputation which stays with them. It is founded on intrinsic merit and not sustained by elaborate advertising. It faces the public backed up by honesty and works its way quietly but thoroughly. Plainfield people want no better proof of the reputation earned by Doan's Kidney Pills than the following experiance from a citizen:

Mr. C. E. Hepburn of 123 Duer street, formerly of Canada, where he first heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, says:—"Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement for they cured me of a long standing case of backache which annoyed me very much, especially if I took cold, for at such times I was in pretty bad shape. I heard different people speak very highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and concluded to try them. I got a box from my druggist, Mr. L. W. Randolph, and used them according to directions, with the above good results. I do not hesitate to give my endorsement of a preparation like Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know they can be relied upon and possess the merits claimed for them."

GAVE A KINDLY GREETING

President McKinley Says Some Pleasant Things to the 10th Pennsylvania.

FEELS PROUD OF THEM.

Says the Fight in the Philippines Will be Pushed Until the Victory is Won.

The Bravery and Patriotism of the Volunteers Praised Without Stint—Was Pleased to Participate in the Magnificent Welcome to Soldiers of the Keystone State.

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 29.—President McKinley addressed the members of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, on their arrival here, welcoming them home after their service of more than a year in the Philippines.

He praised the loyalty which had caused the volunteer troops in those islands to serve after their legal term of enlistment had expired, and asserted that the responsibility for the present conflict lay not upon the United States Government or its army, but upon the Filipinos.

The title of the United States to the islands was clear, he said, and he declared that there would be no useless parley and no pause till the insurrection was suppressed and American authority in the Philippines acknowledged and established.

Among other things the President said: "I am very glad to participate with the families friends and fellow-citizens of the Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteers in this glad reunion. You have earned the plaudits not alone of the people of Pennsylvania, but of the whole nation. Your return has been the signal for a great demonstration of popular regard from your landing in the Golden Gate on the Pacific to your home-coming, and here you find a warmth of welcome and a greeting from joyous hearts which tell better than words the estimate of your countrymen and their high appreciation of the services you have rendered the country. You made secure and permanent the victory of Dewey, you added new glory to American arms. You and your brave comrades engaged on other fields of conflict have enlarged the map of the United States and extended the jurisdiction of American liberty.

"Every one of the noble men of the regulars or volunteers, soldiers or seamen, who served their country in its extremity, deserves the special recognition of Congress, and it will be to me an unfeigned pleasure to recommend for each of them a special medal of honor. While we give you hail and greeting from overflowing hearts, we do not forget the brave men who remain, and those who have gone forward to take your places, and those other brave men who have so promptly volunteered, crowding each other to go to the front to carry forward to successful completion the work you so nobly began. Our prayers go with them, and more men and munitions, if required for the speedy suppression of the rebellion, the establishment of peace and tranquility, and a government under the undisputed sovereignty of the United States, a government which will do justice to all and at once encourage the best efforts and aspirations of these distant people and the highest development of their rich and fertile lands.

"The Government to which you gave your loyalty welcomes you to your homes. With no blot or stain upon your record, the story of your unselfish services to country and to civilization will be to the men who take your places at the front and on the firing line, and to future generations, an example of patriotism and an inspiration to duty."

The President's speech was enthusiastically received and the thousands who listened to it with marked attention sent up a thunder of cheers as the last syllible was spoken.

ARE RELEASED ON BAIL.

Two of the "Angel Dancers" Out of Hackensack Jail.

Hackensack, N. J., Aug. 29.—Mary Storms and John McClintock, who were arrested with others of the so-called "Angel dancers" at the "Lord's Farms," at Woodcliffe, have been released from the Hackensack Jail on bail. They were charged with disorderly conduct. They were admitted to bail by Justice Cummings, and the bonds were signed by Frederick Van Riper, a wealthy farmer of Woodcliffe. The others under arrest include Huntsman Mnason, Garry Storms and the two Lamb girls, Emily and Lucy, whose ages are fourteen and sixteen years, respectively. The charges against Mnason, who is the leader of the band, is keeping a disorderly house and committing criminal assaults on the Lamb girls. The case will come before the Bergen County grand jury, which meets at Hackensack on Sept. 12.

Frederick Van Riper explained that he was not a member of the "Angel Dancers" and that his only interest in them was of a business nature. He said at the beginning of the season he entered into an agreement with Mnason and Storms to work one of his fruit orchards on shares. This orchard is now loaded with fruit which will go to waste unless it is picked without delay. The "Angel Dancers" would not permit any one else to pick the fruit and this was why Van Riper was anxious to get them out of jail.

May Close the Schools.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 29.—President M. C. Murphy, of the New York City Board of Health, has written a letter to Dr. Smelzer, secretary of the State Board of Health, in which he complains of a lack of co-operation on the part of the Boards of Education of the boroughs of Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond in enforcing section 200 of the health laws relative to the vaccination of school children. President Murphy says in his communication that unless the borough boards co-operate with the city board drastic measures will have to be taken and the schools ordered closed.

Climbed Pole to Escape Warrant.

Fairmount, Ind., Aug. 29.—Lee W. Pogue, a lineman on the local electric light plant, was wanted in a Justice's Court on a minor offense, and a Constable went after him. The officer commenced to read the warrant when Pogue made a dash for an electric light pole, and with the aid of his climbers, was soon at the top. The Constable was unable to catch him before he reached the pole, although he made frantic efforts to do so. The officer stood guard for a while and then departed.

Dewey Day Interferes With a Fair.

White Plains, N. Y., Aug. 29—The Board of Managers of the Westchester County Fair Association has decided to hold the fair one week earlier than was announced at first. Instead of being in the last week of September it will be begun in the middle of the month. The reasons assigned for the change of date are that among other things the Dewey celebration in New York would greatly affect the attendance if the fair were held at or about the original date.

Thirty Filipinos Killed.

Washington, Aug. 29.—A despatch has been received at the War Department from Gen. Otis, stating that Dato Mundi, of Zamboanga, attacked and defeated the Filipnos there, killing thirty of them. A city official of Elizabeth, N. J., consulted a physician in the country, where he was spending his vacation, about a chronic dyspepsia with which he had been a good deal troubled. It took the form of indigestion, the food not becoming readily assimilated. After prescribing for some time, the physician finally told him he would have to be treated for several months with a mild laxative and corrective—something that would gradually bring back his normal condition without the violent action of drastic remedies. A little later he sent to the Doctor a box of and wrote him what he understood the ingredients to be and the Doctor forthwith pronounced the formula a good one and just what was needed in the case.

Great Britain Gets Final Reply in Transvaal Dispute.

Cape Town, Aug. 29.—Replying to the latest propositions of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, the Government of the Transvaal has informed him that it adheres to its latest offer and will not take any further concessions. According to reports from Johannesburg the burghers everywhere are exchanging Martini rifles for Mausers. A heavy load of ammunition, including 300 Mausers, have arrived in Johannesburg from Utrecht, the Netherlands.

The Cape House of Assembly again is debating the question of the transit of arms intended for the Orange Free State and presumably for the Transvaal. Evidently a state of extreme tension exists, as every speech made was received with almost absolute silence in the Chamber.

Alarm at the Plague.

London, Aug. 29.—Advices from the plague-stricken sections show the disease is on the increase. Two more deaths and four new cases are reported at Oporto and there are increasing fears that the plague is spreading toward Lisbon. Reports from Tamatave, Madagascar, says that one death has occurred there. The population is alarmed and the ships in the harbor are refusing to take on cargoes. A suspicious disease has also broken out at Kolobocka, near Astrakhan. The symptoms resemble those of the bubonic plague.

Returns After Fifteen Years.

Columbus, Ind., Aug. 29.—George Thompson, a farmer, who disappeared from his home fifteen years ago, leaving his wife, farm and children without any apparent cause, has returned home unexpectedly. He was mourned as dead, but the wife remained true to his memory and stayed upon the farm, earning a living for her family. Thompson came back and his wife received him with open arms. He said he had been living in the Indian Territory since he left Indiana.

Grace for Mercier.

Paris, Aug. 29.—The Figaro announces that the Goverment has decided to give Gen. Mercier a free hand regarding the evidence reflecting upon his administration of the War Office and his connection with the anti-Dreyfus cabal brought out in the past few days at Rennes. The question of proceeding against him, the Figaro says, will not be raised until after the conclusion of the present trial.

In Opposition to Oil Trust.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 29.—Among the passengers who arrived on the steamship Tacoma from the Orient was a Pennsylvanian named Barker, who had been in Sumatra for seven years. Schweinfurth a Christian Scientist.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 29.—The latest convert to Christian Science is George Jacob Schweinfurth, the former leader of the "Church Triumphant," who has abandoned the old faith and his entire flock and is now investigating Christian Science. The change in the views of Schweinfurth has been slowly developing for several years until he is now an ardent Christian Scientist.

Creditors After Motor Stock.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 29.—The stock here of the National Motor Carriage Company has been attached by various creditors, including among them several employes. Claims against the company are believed to aggregate about $10,000. Superintendent T. G. Graham stated that the difficulties were due to the reorganization of the company and that all claims will soon be paid.

Christian Science Funeral Stopped.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 29—Coroner Roberts has prevented the interment of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reibert's six-month old daughter to have a jury pass upon the question of whether or not the parents of the child are guilty of criminal neglect in not calling a physician to minister to the little one during its prolonged illness of cholera infantum. The parents are Christian Scientists.

New York, Aug. 29.—Frank C. Ives, champion billiard player, has gone to Mexico for his health. He is dying of consumption.

Just a Little Wrong.

There is a lad of tender years out West who is inordinately fond of conundrums, and resembles Oliver Twist in his capacity for asking for more.

The other day his mother, driven to desperation, gave him the time-honored one about an old man being like a dog's tail, on account of being "infirm."

The youngster did not understand at first, and had to have the thing explained to him, but having at last caught on, he was delighted, and immediately flew up to his grandfather to puzzle him with the same question.

Of course this was a model grandpa, who is always ignorant in the right place, and after much wild guessing he had to be told, whereat the youngster yelled out: "Because it sticks tight, grandpa; because it sticks tight!" and was immensely pleased with the heartiness of grandpa's laugh.

NINE CRUSHED TO DEATH

The New Coliseum at Chicago Collapses With Frightful Results.

STEEL ARCHES GIVE WAY

Without a Moment's Warning Workmen Are Buried Beneath Tons of Iron and Rubbish.

Huge Iron Beams Fall and Crush the Lives Out of Those Who Are Penned up in the Collapsed Structure—Hundreds at Work Removing Dead and Injured.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 29.—Twelve steel arches, each weighing thirty-three tons, which were to have supported the superstructure of the Coliseum building, in course of erection in Wabash avenue, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, fell to the ground with a crash. It is known that six lives were crushed out. The bodies of at least three more are supposed to be under the wreckage. Seven are in the hospital with injuries received in the accident, and of these two will die. One may recover and the rest are injured seriously.

The dead are: John Fay, head crushed; Edward Murray, head and both legs cut off; Richard Sherman, head cut off; Stephen J. Thompson, crushed to death; Theodore Thorne, crushed to death; Charles Walpot, crushed to death.

The missing are: Frank Logan; A. Millas; and Samuel Smith.

The mortally injured are: John W. Dowd, both legs broken, both eyes knocked out, internal injuries; John A. White, cut on head and right side, internal injuries.

All the twelve arches were standing, the twelfth and last one, having just been completed. It was the intention of the steel contractors, the Pittsburg Bridge Company of Pittsburg, Pa., to turn over its work to-day to the general contractors.

The immense "traveler" or derrick which had been used in the erection of the arches had been removed and the agents of the bridge company were accounting their work practically as completed, when suddenly and without the slightest warning the arch last put in place fell against the one next to it. The weight was too much for this, it gave way, crashed against the third, and then one by one the great steel spans fell over to the south.

Nearly all the men who were killed were at work on top of the arches, forty feet above the ground. Some of them made futile attempts to slide down the side of the arches, but before they could save themselves were hurled to the ground. Many of them uttered piercing shrieks for aid as they fell. Most of them were killed outright. The skulls of the men were crushed, their limbs were cut off as if by a monster knife and they were mangled beyond recognition.

The immense structure began falling slowly, each arch being sustained by the cross beams supporting the entire structure. As the mass gained impetus, bars of steel, three inches thick, snapped with a loud report and the great mass moved faster and faster in its descent. With a crash that was heard blocks distant the structure fell, leaving the walls practically uninjured.

An immense crowd gathered around the place and, despite the efforts of the police, the people swarmed over the mass of wreckage, making desperate but ill-directed efforts to drag out the dead and to save the wounded. It was only with the greatest difficulty that the police were able to drive back the crowd and give the firemen and uninjured workmen a chance to rescue the injured.

The Convent Holocaust.

Nyack, N Y., Aug. 29.—In a fierce fire which wrecked the Convent of St. Agnes, at Sparkill, N. Y., four children lost their lives and a dozen others, sisters and pupils of the convent, were so badly injured that their injuries may result fatally. It is thought to be the work of an incendiary. The dead are: Theresa Murphy, sixteen years old; Jane ——, servant, seventy-two years old; Helen Brown, six years old; Emma Mackin, seven years old. The injured are: Sister Ignatius, jumped from fourth story; concussion of spine; burned about the hands; may die. Sister Marie, concussion of spine and shock; badly burned; may die. Sister Sienna, suffering from shock, may die. Sister Agnes; jumped from fourth floor; slightly hurt. Sister Bertram, jumped from fourth floor; slightly hurt. Sister Catherine; jumped from fourth floor, arm broken. Helen Shea, inmate, twelve years old, hip broken.

A dozen or more other sisters and inmates were injured by jumping or burned in the work of rescue. The wooden buildings which comprised the home burned like tinder and were destroyed in a very few minutes. Practically nothing was saved from the institution.

In all there were 326 children, of whom sixty were girls, in the institution when the fire broke out. There were also forty Sisters in charge, under the direction of Mother Peters. Most of the children were sent to the orphanage through the Gerry society and police magistrates. All of the Sisters and children, as well as the wounded, are being cared for at the Blauvelt Convent, which is about two miles from the scene of the conflagration. About twenty-five of the children received injuries, none of which the doctors think will prove fatal.

The convent was a Catholic institution and its pupils came from all over the country. Children were educated until they were eighteen years of age. Nine frame buildings very close together and covering about three acres composed the convent.

The Tax Rate.

Deducting the 2 cents increase in the county tax rate, over which the city has no control or voice in making, the local tax rate has gone up 12 points for this year, meaning that on the $8,000,000 taxable valuation of the city there will have to be raised $9,600 more for city expenditures than last year. But adding the 2 points increase in the county rate, which compels Plainfield to raise $1,600 more under this head this year than last, the total sum in excess of the amount raised last year by the city will be $11,200. For practical purposes, however, in considering how much more the municipal government is going to cost, the county tax must be eliminated.

Divided into the departments where the increases prevail, the extra sums that will have to be raised are as follows: City and city lights (including streets) $3,200; library, $2,400; fire department, $1,600; free schools and bonds, $2,400.

In our news columns yesterday we explained why it was necessary to raise larger sums in the above departments, but notwithstanding that they are all for needed and legitimate maintenance of the city government up to a standard that the constituency of the city—taken as a whole—demand, it is to be regretted that the increase has been necessary.

High tax rates usually have a desultory affect upon the growth and prosperity of a town, but it is to be hoped that this sequence will not be Plainfield's misfortune.

While the Watchung Silk Company's mill in this city is a minute factor in that industry in this country, there is a striking contrast in the prosperity that attaches itself to this enterprise, according to the promoters, as compared to the condition that prevails in one of the greatest silk making centers in the world—the city of Paterson. The Paterson Press reports the silk business very quiet there, and says that "like Micawber, the manufacturer is simply waiting for something to turn up, though the analogy ends there, for unlike Micawber he is eager to get to work. The maker is waiting for the women of the land to say what they intend to favor for fall and winter wear."

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Gov. Foster Voorhees could have had a Supreme Court Justiceship several years ago. The appointment was offered him by former Gov. Werts, who, although a Democrat, was obliged to appoint a Republican to even up matters, as the court was overwhelmingly Democratic. Gov. Voorhees was then a State Senator. His ambition at that time was to be elected to the office he now fills. As a Governor cannot succeed himself, he will be out of office in 1901, and his friends are hoping that another chance to go on the Supreme Court Bench will be offered him.—World.

The people of Oak Tree have been annoyed for some months past by a series of burglaries that have been conducted with the greatest boldness. Oak Tree is in Middlesex county. It appears that the residents of that section have no confidence whatever in the ability or willingness of the county authorities to protect them, and they are determined to take the law in their own hands. Every householder sleeps with his shot gun within easy reach, and any intruder will be given a leader welcome. Prosecutor Voorhees' determined efforts to keep down the expenses of court administration and Judge Strong's acknowledged determination to treat criminals with leniency do not seem to be operating with results satisfactory to the people of Oak Tree.—New Brunswick Times.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The artist who can write the verses to accompany his sketches has a great advantage over his one-talented brethren. Such a one is George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, whose stories and drawings are both well known, and who is just beginning to appear as a writer of verse. In the current number of Collier's Weekly, the magazine of which Mr. Edwards has lately assumed the art management, there is a short poem, entitled "Cupid With the Roses," accompanied by a half-page drawing. Both are the work of Mr. Edwards. The verses are quaint and suggestive, telling of a lover who, having himself felt the darts of the archer-god, implores him to try his skill upon a marble-hearted damsel. The god, however, only taunts him with faint-heartedness, and aims new rose-wreathed shafts at him. The illustration shows the distracted lover almost upon his knees before Master Cupid, who, seated among the roses, smiles in scorn. The work is at once delicate and strong, with the air of finish that always pervades Mr. Edwards' drawings. Verses and illustration are in entire harmony, and show the touch of the same hand.

—The Grand Union Tea Company claim that their baking powder is as pure as any sold in the market, and they will guarantee the same in every particular. If goods are not satisfactory money refunded in every instance.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World

John W. Isham's "Octoroons" will be at Music Hall, Thursday night. This company does not aim to elevate, but to amuse. The performers themselves are chiefly responsible for the fun injected into the entertainment. Whether it be a fad or not, one thing is certain, that this attraction draws larger houses whereever it appears than many plays worthy of artistic consideration. The attraction is one which any one of the slightest grace of humor in his veins can enjoy. The nature of the programme is a varied one, opening with an original ragtime farce, called "7 11-77," which depicts the negro as a fiend of policy playing, playing the gigs appertaining to his dreams of the night before. The olio is a strong one, featured by Miss Belle Davis, who was the hit at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, New York city. The rest of the olio is made up of prominent artists only. Mr. Isham has also gone back to his initial success, that of opera. Thirty minutes around the operas forms an interesting finale, and introduces a wonderful and excellent trained chorus. The Octoroons number 40 people, and is considered the leader of all colored attractions en route today. The Octoroons appeared at Madison Square Roof Garden in New York all summer and were immense success.

GRAIN-O BRINGS RELIEF

to the coffee drinker. Coffee drinking is a habit that is universally indulged in and almost as universally injurious. Have you tried Grain-O? It is almost like coffee but the effects are just the opposite. Coffee upsets the stomach, ruins the digestion effects the heart and disturbs the whole nervous system. Grain-O tones up the stomach, aids digestion and strengthens the nerves. There is nothing but nourishment in Grain-O. It can't be otherwise. 15 and 25c. per package.

FINE TABLE DAMASK

Our sales in this department are increasing in a most remarkable manner, and we propose to encourage trade by offering some extraordinary values along this line. Recent heavy purchases enable us to do so.

Tomorrow We Offer The Following.

Very fine 72 in Double Damask at $1.25 and $1.50 yd. Patterns are "inlaid" an expensive hand process. Goods are rarely beautiful and remarkably cheap. ¾ napkins to match at 3.75 and 4.50 (by the doz. only.) Also our regular 1.00 72 in Double Damask at 85c yd., and a pure linen 70 in Damask (75c quality) in five patterns at 50c per yd.

Half Bleached Damask.

63-in half bleached German Damask at		39c yd
60-in " " " "	extra heavy, at	50c yd
68-in " " " "	(reg. pr. 65c) at	50c yd

These goods will bleach very quickly and give splendid service. This is an offering of linens to which every thrifty housekeeper should respond quickly. Our trade in ready-made Sheets and Pillows is also one of growing importance, due undoubtedly to the fact that we sell only good goods. We handle only the well-known brands such as N. Y. Mills, Utica Mills, Dwight Anchor, etc. All are torn, beautifully hemmed and clean, ready for use. A comparison of our prices with those of N. Y. City will result in your buying them of us.

Crochet and Marseilles Bed Spreads, another item we are warranted in calling your attention to. We believe we sell at 1.00 the best white Crochet Quilt ever sold at that price. Of course 1.25, 1.50 or 1.75 will buy a better one. Marseilles Quilts we carry up to 5.00 ea. and works of art they are. Plain and Quilted Table Padding at various prices.

New Tapestries.

Entirely new Bagdad Stripes, Denims, Turkish Cloths, Fancy Tickings, Satins and Silkalines in bewildering variety. New Patterns and new colorings make these unusually attractive.

We should be guilty of gross neglect if we failed to call attention to a special lot of Flannelettes at 6½c yd. that are really worth 8c yd. So far as we can judge the patterns are as bright and attractive as those we have at much higher price.

Sundry New Things.

Prominent among the latest arrivals are two numbers in Ladies' Kid Gloves at 1.50 pr. No. 1—2 clasp, real kid in Modes, Tans, Grays and Ox Bloods. Very pliable, elastic and perfect fitting. No. 2—Something entirely new in 2 clasp Suedes in Tans, Modes and Grays. A peculiarly novel stitching gives them a most stylish finish. We predict for these two numbers a large sale. Some new velvet stock collars, steel trimmed, will sell readily once they are seen. Prices 50c to 1.98. Some are trimmed with jet and have jet fringe to match. Positively the newest novelties in stock. Our shirt waists have been subjected to very radical treatment again. Our 1.00, 1.25 and 1.48 waists are now 50c eaeh. If you can find your size you will get a rare bargain.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

Dresden. Der 40jährige Bauunternehmer Ferdinand Schwipps wurde dieser Tage wegen Betrugs zu zwei Jahren Gefängniß und fünf Jahren Ehrverlust verurtheilt. Schwipps, der Anfangs Maurer war, aber bald den Bauspekulanten in sich entdeckte, hatte zeitweilig sechs bis acht Grundstücke „im Besitz," kam aber nie zu Gelde. Fortwährend klopfte der Gerichtsvollzieher bei ihm an; er wurde wegen Beträge von insgesammt 77,779 Mark mehr als 80 Mal erfolglos gepfändet und 6 Mal zur Leistung des Offenbarungseides vorgeladen. Einem hiesigen Kaufmann schwindelte er 4200 Mark in drei Darlehen ab. Außerdem schloß er einen Vertrag über den Ankauf eines hiesigen Gasthofes zum Preise von 120,000 Mark, wobei er unter der Vorspiegelung, sofort 60,000 Mark anzahlen zu können, mit einem falschen Namen unterzeichnete.

Chemnitz. Der im Vorjahre wegen Unterschlagung von Mündelgeldern zu einem Jahr neun Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilte Superintendent Merbach ist nachdem er etwa neun Monate seiner Strafe verbüßt hat, begnadigt worden. Der Herr hat sich zu dem Pastor v. Bodelschwingh nach Gadderbaum bei Bielefeld begeben, wo er irgend ein Thätigkeitsfeld finden soll.

Grimma. Hier hat sich ein Soldat, der eines Eigenthumsvergehens sich schuldig gemacht haben soll, durch einen Schuß in den Mund getödtet. Es ist das der dritte Fall in kurzer Zeit, daß in der hiesigen Garnison Militärpersonen die Waffen gegen sich kehrten.

Leipzig. Der Schriftsteller Wedekind wurde wegen Majestätsbeleidigung, begangen durch zwei auf die Palästinareise des Kaisers bezügliche Gedichte im „Simplizissimus," von der Strafkammer des hiesigen Landgerichts zu sieben Monaten Gefängniß, unter Anrechnung von einem Monat Untersuchungshaft, verurtheilt. Wedekind war nach Paris geflüchtet, hatte sich dann aber freiwillig gestellt.

Pirna. In der Nähe von hier fand, in Folge Verwechselung von Weichen, eine Bahnkollision statt, bei der zehn Personen mehr oder minder schwer verletzt wurden.

Zschöllau. Hier ist der Typhus ausgebrochen.

OLD FASHIONED PURSES

They Have Come Into Fashion Again and the Homlier the More Popular.

Purses carried by women nowadays are in fancy grains and fancy colors the grain of the leather giving an appearance of shading, while the edges are bound in a plain shade of the same color or in a contrasting color. These purses are all made in the common patterns, with change and bill compartments.

There is a revival of an old German purse, which is a big flat pouch when opened and has a flat top frame of steel in four pieces. The sides of the purse are flat and bound with straight pieces of steel, while the leather forms a bag hanging from these side steels. The end steels are half as wide and are hinged to the side pieces, folding across the top and meeting in the midddle with a clasp like a change purse.

When opened wide the whole purse is spread out about eight inches long. There is a place for everything and everything in its place in one big bag. Its bulk, when filled with the usual array of memoranda and samples, must be detrimental to its popularity, as it must be held clasped in the hand, and it makes a pretty good handful.

The popular purse, however, is of the plainest and homliest type. It is the "finger purse," named from the women's habit of carrying it with the fingers thrust through the big retaining strap across the front. This purse is made of three plain strips of roughly finished pig skin, making two compartments in the simplest form. One is gussetted for change and the other is a flat pocket for bills. The flap of both compartments slips through a strap across the front piece. The whole is sewed about the edges with harness stitching, with no attempt at ornamentation.

To individualize this purse there are big brass initials, the same as are used in ornamenting brass trimmed sets of harness. These are furnished with retaining pins on the back, which are easily thrust through the leather and pressed down flat.

There is something rich about the appearance of these simple purses, and their oddity has made them most popular among the young folk.

The Latest From Paris.

Paris is simply muffling itself up to the ears—feminine Paris, of course—and New York will probably follow suit in short order.

There are ruffled chiffon boas whose soft fluffiness clings lovingly about the wearer's throat during the most torrid weather. These boas are triumphs of sartorial art, and no French woman's toilet is complete without one.

Then there are wonderful scarf fichus, with huge ruffled collars and much glittering and decorated cloth capes, with floated ends of mousseline or chiffons.

A particularly stunning boa effect in white with black polka dots has long ends ,which reach almost to the skirt hem.

PARISIAN STYLES.

Collars, too, if they are plain, have side tabs which reach up lovingly in an attempt to embrace the ears.

If one has neither a very high collar nor boa nor fischu, she swaths her neck and ears in voluminous bonnet strings. These strings are very wide and very long and serve the purpose of muffler quite well.

Girls' Birth Month.

Acording to an old astrological prediction:

If a girl is born in January she will be a prudent housewife, given to melancholy, but good tempered.

If in February, a humane and affectionate wife and tender mother.

If in March, a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarreling.

If in April, inconsistent, not intelligent, but likely to be good-looking.

If in May, handsome, and likely to be happy.

If in June, impetuous, will marry early and be frivolous.

If in July, passably handsome, but with a sulky temper.

If in August, amiable and practical, likely to marry rich.

If in September, discreet, affable and much liked.

If in October, pretty and coquettish, and likely to be unhappy.

If in November, liberal, kind, of a mild disposition.

If in December, well-proportioned, fond of novelty and extravagant.

A WOMAN GLOBE CIRCLER

Eliza Archard Conner, Homeward Bound, Tells of a Sail Through the Suez Canal.

Probably the best way for Americans to go around the world is to start in at the westward, sailing from San Francisco and taking in beautiful, radiant Hawaii on the way. A round the world steamer ticket can be obtained with stop over privileges.

It is best to travel westward round the world because of the heat in the Red sea and Suez canal. The prevailing winds there are from the north. When a steamer passes through from Europe to the orient, she has a sluggish wind behind her which the motion of the vessel makes null.

Vessels passing through the Red sea from Europe in summer have sometimes to turn about and go northward for some hours in order to relieve their fainting passengers. For these same considerations of temperature it is likewise better to make the journey through southern Asia and the Suez canal in winter.

Indeed, in summer the passage of the Red sea is almost as serious a business now as it was when the children of Israel crossed it on dry land. The hottest known region of the earth is along the shores of the Persian gulf. The next hottest is the Red sea country. In summer, with the hot wind from Arabia blowing across, it becomes like the old hardshell preacher's fiery furnace of the Hebrew children, which was "seven times hotter than it could be het."

One of our passengers suggests that the name Red sea may be merely a short way of saying redhot sea. However, you will not suffer from the heat if you make the trip in winter, especially if you go from southward to northward through the Red sea and Suez canal, as I have said.

For me, I shall never in this life make a journey that interests me more than the picturesque passage of the Suez canal did. All day long, with the temperature so high that in the sun the mercury just bobbed up to the top of the thermometer and staid there, and in the shade, in the coolest part of the ship, with a brisk north head wind blowing upon the instrument, it registered 99 degrees.

I could only go from one side of the steamer to the other, looking now at the great, fearful sea of glittering yellow brown sand, now at one of the restful palm and garden embowered canal stations and again at the alternating tracts of sand and water, a ribbon of yellow brown, a ribbon of shining emerald green.

A fresh water canal runs side by side with the salt one to supply the people who live at the stations and signal vessels when they must tie up to the shore and wait for another to pass, for when two ships are to pass each other in this waterway one of them must be stationary. The canal is only 150 feet wide.

Like our own Arizona and southern California, this whole desert ocean has only to be irrigated to blossom and fruit in prodigal abundance. The stations, at intervals of two to five miles apart, are pictures of plenty and prettiness. Graceful, waving date palms, flowers and vegetable gardens smile in the vibrating sunshine, while the domestic live stock of two zones grazes peacefully around. Odd it looks and a little unsettling to the western eye to see handsome dairy cows and Arabian camels chewing in calm meditation upon the same pasture.

The Suez canal is 87¾ miles long, from the town of Suez on the south to Port Said on the north. In its center, where its depth is greatest, sloping off shallower toward the banks, it is 27½ feet deep.

Steamers are only allowed to go through at a speed of five miles an hour. Dredges are at work continually widening and deepening it. Indeed, unless they kept at work the channel would soon fill with the drifting desert sands. The passage of the canal requires from 14 to 18 hours, according to the number of times a vessel must stop to let steamers coming in the opposite direction go by. The steamer that is going against the tide must stop to await the one traveling with the tide, for sea tides are as strong and as regular here through the channel's whole length as elsewhere in ocean waters. According to Mr. Rudyard Kipling, Port Said is the wickedest place on earth.

Finally, the Suez canal being a subject of interest to Americans just now because of our own Nicaragua canal that is to be, I may mention that in spite of the enormous expense required to keep it in running order it pays immensely. Ship owners are taxed $1.75 for every ton of freight and $2 for every passenger conveyed through it. When it is considered that a single ship often carries several hundred passengers or a cargo vessel sometimes 9,000 to 10,000 tons of freight and that 8 to 20 ships, going and coming, glide through the channel every day, it can be understood that Suez canal stock is a good investment.

And yet, if you, the traveler, are what I take you for, it will not be so much of the canal returns in dollars and cents that you will be thinking as you glide through this strange, story haunted clime of sky and sand, of desert oasis and green water, of mirage and burning sun. For a week you have been passing regions known and noted in the world's oldest history.

Far to your right as you steamed up the Red sea you beheld, outlined huge and grand in the mystic haze, the sides and top of Mount Sinai. Kantara, 25 miles south of Port Said, is and has been time immemorial the great camel caravan crossing from Syria and Arabia into Egypt. Before the bondage, before the tables of the law were delivered, wild wanderers of the desert, with yellow brown camels, the color of the sands, with women swathed to their eyes in cruel, smothering black drapings, crossed and recrossed the border as they do today here where the nineteenth century man's cable now passes, flashing messages through Syria, through India, through Palestine. These very sands may have been pressed by the feet of Joseph and Mary, bearing their sacred burden of the Blessed Child during the flight into Egypt.

Old Bible tales, long forgotten, roll back in a flood of memory. The splendor of Hebrew romance and poetry dazzles you with a vividness you never knew before. Its spell is on you. Silently, softly, you search in an out of the way corner among your luggage and find a Bible, long neglected, half forgotten, and read once more of the journeyings of ancient peoples, of wells of sweet water and desert visions—if you are what I take you for.

THE CLUB AND SALON.

ARE THE WOMEN OF TO-DAY TAKING TOO MUCH INTEREST IN THEM?

Mrs. Amelia Gere Mason Thinks American Women, With Their Splendid Initiative and Boundless Aspirations, Are Assuming Too Much Responsibility.

In the Century there is an article on "Club and Salon," by Mrs. Amelia Gere Mason, author of "Women of the French Salon." Mrs. Mason says:

Of women's clubs there is literally no end, and they are yet in their vigorous youth. We have literary clubs, and art clubs, and musical clubs; clubs for science, and clubs for philanthropy; parliamentary clubs, and suffrage clubs, and anti-suffrage clubs—clubs of every variety and every grade, from the luncheon club, with its dilettante menu, and the more pretentious chartered club, that aims at mastering a scheme of the world, to the simple working-girls' club, which is content with something less; and all in the sacred name of culture. They multiply, federate, hold conventions, organize congresses, and really form a vast educational system that is fast changing old ideals and opening possibilities of which no prophetic eye can see the end. That they have marvelously raised the average standard of intelligence cannot be questioned, nor that they have brought out a large number of able and interesting women who have generously taken upon themselves not only their own share of the work of the world, but a great deal more.

One can hardly overrate the value of an institution which has given light and an upward impulse to so many lives, and changed the complexion of society so distinctly for the better. But it may be worth while to ask if the women of to-day, with their splendid initiative and boundless aspirations, are not going a little too fast, getting entangled in too much machinery, losing their individuality in masses, assuming more responsibility than they can well carry. Why is it that lines too deep for harmonious thought are so early writing themselves on the strong, tense, mobile, and delicate faces of American women? Why is it that the pure joy of life seems to be lost in the restless and insatiable passion for multitudes, so often thinly disguised as love for knowledge, which is not seldom little more than the shell and husk of things?

Is the pursuit of culture degenerating into a pursuit of clubs, and are we taking for ourselves new taskmasters more pitiless than the old? "The emancipation of woman is fast becoming her slavery," said one who was caught in the whirl of the social machinery and could find no point of repose. We pride ourselves on our liberty; but the true value of liberty is to leave people free from a pressure that prevents their fullest growth. What do we gain if we simply exchange one tyranny for another? Apart from the fact that the finest flowers of culture do not spring from a soil that is constantly turned, any more than they do from a soil that is not turned at all, it is a question of human limitations, of living so as to continue to live, of growing so as to continue to grow. Nor is it simply a matter of individuals. Societies, too, exhaust themselves; and those which reach an exaggerated growth in a day are apt to perish in a day. It is not the first time in the history of the world that there has been a brilliant reign of intelligence among women, though perhaps there was never one so widely spread as now. Why have they ended in more or less violent reactions? We may not be able to answer the question satisfactorily, but it gives us food for reflection.

Her Secret Signal.

Nervous housewives whose husbands frequently bring home company to dinner without preliminary warning often worry in their secret hearts for fear there may not be food enough to supply the unexpected guests. A matron living in one of the prettiest suburban residences in West Philadelphia, whose husband persists in bringing home guests at the most inopportune times, has hit upon a happy expedient to meet possible emergencies.

In passing any dishes at the table of which there may be a limited supply the hostess makes a point to mention the enigmatical letters "F. H. B." in such a manner as not to attract the attention of the guests around the board. Immediately the members of the family are aware of the circumstances and discreetly partake very lightly, if at all, of the viands in question. The secret of the three letters was solved by a quick-witted guest a few days ago, and the hostess afterward laughingly confessed her little scheme. "F. H. B." in this instance stands for "family hold back."

Rubber Plants.

Every week sponge your rubber plant with tobacco juice. Take a plug of tobacco, pour water over it, and when the water becomes deeply colored wipe the leaves off with a sponge dipped in the juice. This will give them a wax-like appearance and is good for the plant. Every two or three weeks dig about the roots of the plant and pour in a teaspoonful of castor oil.

Dining Room Temperature.

Never let the temperature of the dining room rise above sixty-five degrees; sixty degrees is not too low. If the lights and the number of people in the room raise it after the meal has begun, lower the windows slightly from the top.

BROADWAY TUNNEL OPEN.

Removal of Debris From Warren Street Fire Exposes a Famous Passage.

FROM DAYS OF TWEED.

The Underground Tunnel Was Projected in the Sixties, When the Famous "Boss" Was King.

It Was Known As the Beach Pneumatic Tube, or Railroad Tunnel—One Car Was Built, and it Now Lies in the Tunnel, An Entire Wreck.

The removal of the debris caused by the great fire on the southwest corner of Broadway and Warren street has opened to daylight the entrance to what was known as the Beach Pneumatic Tube or Railway Tunnel, which was projected in the days of "Boss" Tweed, late in the sixties, and which met with reverses on the downfall of the Tweed dynasty.

With the aid of a bright light from a bicycle lamp a reporter explored the tunnel its entire length. It extends from a point about twenty feet below the surface of the sidewalk on the southwest corner of Broadway and Warren street, whence it curves southward under the westerly roadway of Broadway, and terminates abruptly at abrick wall aparently under the northwesterly corner of Broadway and Murray street.

At this point,, on the easterly side of the tunnel is a lateral tunnel about six feet in diameter, whose base is about five feet higher than that of the former, proceeding easterly and at right angles with Broadway This lateral spur was no doubt intended as an elevator for the main structure, for it ends at a shaft the orifice of which opens upon one of the grassplots in City Hall Park, nearly under the westerly window of the Mayor's office.

The diameter of the main tunnel at its entrance from Warren street is about eight feet and in the shape of a circle with a sedgment appended. The roof and sides of the tunnel, for a distance of forty feet, are constructed of iron, while beyond, where the tunnel is about a foot less, the tunnel is built of brick.

At the southerly end of the tunnel stands the wreck of what was once a car, entirely dismantled. This car was to be cylindrical in shape and was intended to occupy the whole of the diameter of the tunnel excepting about six inches all around to allow for necessary oscillation.

Whatever rights or franchises may have been owned by the projectors of the enterprise have beyond doubt reverted to the city, as the company did not begin operations within the requisite twenty-five years from the time the franchise was granted.

For a time after its construction the tunnel was used as a shooting gallery, but that was also a failure. Should some enterprising market gardener get possession of the tunnel he might realize a fortune raising mushrooms all the year around, as the temperature could be kept normal regardless of the frosts of winter and heats of summer fifty feet or more overhead.

Shows How Flowers Bloom.

Michael Corday, of the Ecole Polytechnique, has devised a novel method for utilizing the cinematograph, applicable not only to to exhibition purposes, but of the highest utility in the scientific investigation of the growth of living organisms nd plants.

M. Corday photographed a rosebush twice daily from the first appearance of the buds until the roses were in full bloom. These photographs were combined in series in the order of taking and projected on a screen by means of the cinematograph, so that the entire development of bud and blossom passes before the eye of the spectator.

The method has proved of the very highest value in the chemical and biological laboratory. Successive photographs of crystals in process of formation and of cultures of bacilli and various disease germs furnish, when projected on the screen, a valuable adjunct to the lecture rooms of Paris, where the student has the complete and continuous development of various germs and microbes presented vividly before his eyes while listening to the lecturer's comment and explanation.

The special cinematograph used by M. Corday is constructed after his own design, and the resultant pictures are said to be entirely free from all perceptible vibration.

Grewsome Musical Instrument.

A ghastly, but nevertheless unique, musical instrument from far-off Paraguay was among the curios offered for sale the other day in a London auction room in the West End. It consisted of a human skull, the upper part of which is cut away, the skin which covered the instrument as well as the hair ornamentation being from the same victim.

AN INTERESTED AUDIENCE.

A Crowd Will Stand and Gaze at a Trifling Occurence.

The interest which a street crowd will display in the most trifling occurrence and the easy unconcern in which its members will abandon their business cares to stand and gaze is a matter of common knowledge. An unfortunate pedestrian on Jackson Boulevard had this fact brought home to him in a particularly embarrassing way recently. The foundations for a new building were being dug near Franklin street, and a board sidewalk protected by a railing runs along the edge of the embankment. As the man passed this spot his hat was caught by a passing breeze and whisked over the rail into the depths below. The man ran down the plank road into the excavation and found the hat placidly bobbing around in the middle of a pool of water. He tiptoed bravely in, and tried to fish the hat out with his cane—but the headgear floated out of reach. Then he tried the depth of the water with the cane, and, finding that it barely covered the surface of the ground, he took three long strides, and on the last his right leg went into the water half way to his hip, and in staggering to regain his balance he plunged his hands and arms into the soft mud. He had stepped into a partly finished hole for a pillar. Then he waded around and got the hat, and as he shook the water from it a hoarse cheer broke from the half hundred people who had lined themselves along the railing to watch the performance.—Chicago News.

A Blue Rose Found.

A blue rose has long been the desire of those who, in their appreciation of flowers, place a higher value upon mere novelty than upon perfection of form, beautiful coloring and delightful fragrance, but the Gardener's Magazine does not credit the report that this treasure has at last been found in Bulgaria. Our horticultural contemporary has been told often in the course of the past quarter of a century that the blue rose has made its appearance, and has seen plants of what his friends assured him were those of the veritable black rose, but when the season of flowering arrived the only things that were black were the looks of the owners, who were naturally vexed that they should have wasted their money and made themselves objects of ridicule. In the case of the blue rose he has not even been able to catch a glimpse of a plant bearing blue flowers, nor has any one stated that he has seen either flowers or plants.

The Bulgarian blue roses would appear closely to resemble the chameleon, which freuently changes color to the eye of the obserever, for in one case they are reported to be of beautiful azure blue, and in another they are said to be of a greenish blue, the latter hue recalling the delicate tints of the turquoise. A sample of the soil in which the bush is growing has, it is said, been sent to a chemical laboratory to be analyzed, but surely, says the Gardener's Magazine, it would have been more sensible to have taken as many buds as possible from the branch and worked them on other stocks, with a view to a perpetuation of so remarkable a novelty.

Backsliding Indians.

In a report to the Classis of Amsterdam on the state of religion in the New Netherlands, in 1657, Rev. Johannes Megapolensis and Rev. Samuel Drisius made the following somewhat discouraging statement in regard to the effort to convert the Indians. It will be noted that the conclusions arrived at by the reverand gentleman in the first sentence of the extract, says the Albany Argus, were in the nature of a prediction which has been completely fulfilled:

"Of the conversion of the Heathens or Indians here, we can say but little, nor do we see any means thereunto until by the numbers and power of our nation they are subdued and brought under some policy and our people show them a better example than they have hitherto done.

"We have had one Indian here with us full two years, so that he could read and write good Dutch; we instructed him in the grounds of religion; he also answered publicly in the church and repeated the prayers. We likewise presented him with a Bible in order to work through him some good among the Indians. But it all resulted in nothing. He has taken to drinking of brandy; he pawned the Bible and became a real beast who is doing more harm than good among the Indians."

No Gentleman.

"Did I understand you to say that dress you admired so much to-day was a dream?" inquired Mr. Smokehart.

"Yes," answered his wife, hopefully.

"Well," he proceeded very kindly, "you keep your mind on it when you go to sleep to-night, and maybe you will dream one of your own."

Doing His Best.

"Do you know, Paul," said Ethel trembling. "I sometimes fear that you don't love me any more?'

"Right you are," said Paul, embracing her. "I couldn't."

And Ethel heaved a sigh and settled down contentedly.—Somerville Journal.

AUTOMOBILE CANNON

Major Davidson Thinks Mounting Cannon on Self-Driven Carriages the Next Step.

Dr. Maxim discovered that a machine gun could be made to act automatically. That is, that the recoil of the weapon could be used to repeat the fire indefinitely. Some Frenchman then went to work and designed a device by means of which a carriage could be made to progress with speed and smoothness without horses. Maj. Royal P. Davidson of the Illinois national guard, commandant at Northwestern military academy, has put two and two together and decided that a cannon could be mounted on an automobile carriage and made to do effective service.

Maj. Davidson has progressed so far with his idea, says the New York Journal, that he has mentally fashioned two armored gun carriages which may in time revolutionize methods in handling small machine guns and heavier field artillery. That the idea will work satisfactorily over smooth streets in cities and be a valuable adjunct in suppressing riots is beyond doubt; whether it will work as well across country and taking in all kinds of ground remains to be demonstrated.

So many things must be thought of in designing such a carriage that Maj. Davidson frankly says he is by no means out of the woods. The carriage must be light, so that with the piece mounted and four men aboard the motive power can be generated in the machine. Electricity as a motor was abandoned by Maj. Davidson almost as soon as suggested. The motor to be used will be gasoline, compressed air or naphtha. The success of the latter with water craft has recently inspired the young inventor with the belief that it is suitable to his purposes.

The main difficulty will be to secure a power strong enough to move the heavy armored vehicle over all kinds of bad ground. The automobile carriages in use operated by electricity have power only sufficient to run the carriages with from four to eight persons as a load. Compressed air has almost no limit in power but is somewhat limited in speed. Speed is an essential in handling a battery.

It is the purpose of Maj. Davidson to go overland to New York in case he receives a gun properly mounted in time. He expects to train a company of his cadets from the Northwestern military academy to handle the gun and carriage. He says he will need at least two such guns before he can give the matter a fair test. These he will take across the country to New York.

PHOTOGRAHPS OF BIRDS

The Experiences of a Daring English Naturalist.

The extreme difficulty of photographing wild birds that build their nests on cliffs is aptly shown in the illustrations which accompany this article. The first thing necessary in searching for such nests is to find out the exact location of one by frightening off its owner, and this can be done by firing off a revolver of blowing a whistle close to the edge of the cliff. Care must be taken not to go too near the edge of the cliff and not to walk out to any overhanging piece of rock that might by chance give way. Indeed, it is the part of wisdom, even when engaged in preliminary investigations, to have one end of a guide rope tied around one's waist. This begets confidence in the naturalist and enables him to obtain a better view of the yawning abyss below him.

An excelent authority on this subject is Richard Kearton, F. Z. S., author of a book entitled, "Wild Life at Home," recently published by Cassell & Co. According to him, after a nest has been located the next thing to do is to drive a fairly stout crowbar into the ground at the top of the cliff from eight to twelve inches, according to circumstances. The crowbar should scant backward—that is, away from the head of the cliff—and to it the rope guide should be securely tied. To pay out, and haul in the rope there should be two strong, cool-headed men, who would not be frightened by the wierd, almost human, cry of a sea bird and take it to be a wail of distress from the photographer dangling from the rope a hundred feet below.

Mr. Kearton shows the wrong and the right way to begin the descent of a cliff. The novice usually instinctively clutches the rough edges of the rock as he begins his descent, and the result is the skinning of his knees and elbows. The climber who is skilful and knows his business steps boldly out over the edge of the cliff, trusting to the stout Manila ropes and the men who are attending to them. But even then he must look out sharply for himself and avoid swinging against overhanging crags. At times he must walk down the face of the cliff, and if he is wearing boots his feet may slip out, causing his body to be dashed against the rocks. Not long ago a cliff climber in the Shetland Isles was killed in that way.

Mr. Kearton and his brother have climbed and descended the steepest and most inaccesible cliffs in all parts of the British Isles, successfully photograhphing eagles, falcons, ravens and hooded crows. Some of their hardest work has been done in getting pictures of shags, puffins and kittiwakes. They have had good luck in the famous Noup of Flugga, the most northern piont in the British Noss, in the Shetlands, as well as on Muckle Islands, where there are a few fulmar petrels, a very rare and shy bird. Some idea of the daring of Richard Kearton may be had from the fact that the first time he put on the climbing ropes he went down an overhanging crag seventy feet deep.

To Renew Life.

A discovery which, it is claimed, solves the problem of circumventing old age, has just been made public by Prof. Joseph R. Hawley and Alex. C. Weiner, of the Chicago Clinical School.

The return to youth, it is asserted, is produced by hypodermic injection of the lympathatic fluid of animals, particularly young goats. The discovery was made a year ago, and subsequent secret demonstrations of its efficiency are asserted.

The general theory of the discovery is that if the mineral deposits which accumulate in the bones in the process of life can be replaced with the "life cells" contained in the lymphatic glands of goats, deterioration of the bone will be prevented and elasticity and youth will be retained in the system much longer. In one of his experiments at the Clinical School Dr. Hawley administered hypodermic injections of the fluid of the lymphatic glands of a goat to a dog known to be fourteen years old.

A diagnosis of a portion of the femur before the injection showed the bone contained large deposits of phosphate, carbonate and soda. The dog was watched carefully for two months, during which frequent injections of the lymph compound were made.

At the end of that time another diagnosis showed the larger part of the mineral deposit had been removed and the animal was as lively as a puppy.

A number of human beings, it is said, in the same way and with the same results have been experimented on in Chicago.

The apostles of the discovery do not claim that a man or woman thus charged with goat's "life cells" will live forever, but they say life will be prolonged, perhaps doubled.

AUTOMOBILES FOR MAILS.

Experiments In Buffalo Show Advantages In Their Use on Collection Routes.

GREAT SAVING OF TIME.

Uncle Sam's Letters Collected Almost Twice as Quickly as Is Possible With a Horse and Wagon.

A Specially Designed Wagon to Be Fitted With a Box Immediately In Front of the Automobilist Will Be Put Into Service and Reports Made On Its Performance.

Postmaster Dorr, of Buffalo, N. Y., has demonstrated that there is a great field for the use of the automobile in the postal service of large cities, and their use will reduce expenditures and expedite the collection of mails.

Through the kindness of Dr. Truman J. Martin, who owns an automobile trap, the postmaster was able to make practical experiments in the collection of mails, and his report on their result has just been received by the Post-Office Department. He says that Dr. Martin offered the use of his automobile for trial in the collection of mails from street letter boxes to demonstrate its advantages over the horse collection wagon.

The first trial was made recently when Dr. Miller managed the automobile, carrying with him Superintendent of Carriers Loeb, who collected the mails from forty boxes on a route eighteen miles long in one hour and thirty minutes. To cover the same route with a horse wagon required more than three hours.

Trial was made on another route the next morning, when the mail was collected from sixty-three boxes in one hour and fifty minutes. The time required for a horse wagon to cover this route is three hours and five minutes.

A third test was made three days later on another route, fifteen miles in length, with fifty-four boxes, and the collections were all made in ninety minutes.

Postmaster Dorr informs the department that Dr. Martin has ordered a specially designed wagon to be fitted with a box for receiving the mails immediately in front of the driver, and that when it has been received it will be put into service and a report will be made of its performances. This report will be awaited with much interest and it may lead to experiments in other cities.

TYPE OF ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE.

Buffalo experiments show an average saving of time of nearly one-half over the wagon service, and if this can be maintained it will enable the department to give more frequent collections and to extend the collection and free delivery service further into the suburbs of cities without any increase in cost.

Rev. John Jasper Getting Old.

Rev. John W. Jasper, of "The Sun Do Move" fame, has just celebrated his eighty-seventh birthday at his home in Richmond, Va. Talking with a reporter about his life and career, he said:

"I was born in Fluvanna County in 1812, and I lived in Richmond for 74 years. I never had much schooling. Just what I could learn from an old New York spelling book, and I never studied that more than seven weeks.

"What I know comes from inspiration. I was inspired before I was born. My father told my mother so. She didn't believe much about it until I had got to be 10 or 11 years old, for I was just as bad as any other little nigger.

"But when I commenced to get big, and commenced to notice, I knew that I was inspired, and the word of the Lord came to me like a flash.

"For 60 years I have been a minister, and as I look around me I am unable to see any preachers that were here at the time I started. Richmond was a little city then, and I have seen it grow and prosper all around me.

"I reckon I have brought thousands of souls from perdition. If I havn't it ain't my fault, for I have worked hard enough.

"I don't read much . My eyes are bad, and I don't keep up with the news of the day.

"About hats in church, I don't care much. People go to chuch to hear things, not to see. And when a lady wears a big, showy hat to church she does it to show to her neighbors, and if her neighbors pay more attention to the hat than to the sermon, then we ought to be glad that such people come to church, for they need to be converted.

"Every day I get letters from people and societies all over the country asking me to deliver my sermon on the sun's rotation, but I can't comply with their requests. I've been over the country a good deal and have made that sermon a thousand times."

Why St. Patrick Didn't Sign.

"Oi say, father," said little Timmie O'Brien, "whoy didn't Saint Patrick sign the Declaration of Independence? Didn't they ask him?"

"Yis, Timmie, they asked him all right," said Mr. O'Brien, "but, ye see, he t'ought th' man that brought it to him was wan o' these autygraft-hunters, an' he chucked him out o' the house."—Harper's Bazar.

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

Perhaps no events in the annals of the trotting and pacing sport during the past twenty-five years has anywhere near approximated in importance and in widely-awakened interest the construction of Empire City Park, at New York, for the occupation of the light harness racers, and its great inaugural meeting beginning Labor Day, September 4th, and continuing one week. From all sections of the country came words of encouragement, and when the dates of the inaugural meeting were claimed, and the first instalment of $30,000 worth of purses was announced, the entries that came exceeded in number and character those of any Grand Circuit meeting of the year. All the greatest horses and the most famous drivers in America are represented, and the eyes of the trotting horse lovers all over Europe and America are turned with expectancy towards the opening of the grand and beautiful track September 4th to 9th. The track is singularly easy of access. Trains on three lines of road running out of Grand Central depot lead to it, and the journey is made in about thirty-five minute, with trains from five to fifteen minutes apart.

GOLF.

Among the new candidates for golfing honors at the links of the Park Golf Club is Charles Dupee, one of the Plainfield young men now studying at Yale University. Dupee has played the game but very little but his general prominence in athletics has brought him well up in the game for a novice. His drives are the talk of the caddies who always admire a good drive. When he does drive the ball it goes well and for a long distance. He has been driving to the green on the first, fourth and eighth holes repeatedly. He will spend much of the remainder of his vacation on the links and will undoubtedly prove a good player.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The third diamond race meet of the Brunswick Bicycle Club of New Brunswick, which will be held Labor Day, September 4th, on the Driving Association track, bids fair to be a great success. The secretary, William A. Groben, reports having received an unusual number of inquiries for information and entry blanks even at this early date. The one-mile L. A. W. New Jersey State Championship race seems to be a drawing card, although the diamond prizes for the one-mile novice, one-half-mile handicap and the two-mile tandem open, are up to the standard of the L. A. W. regulations. The wheelmen of that section appear to be almost unanimous and enthusiastic in their allegiance to the L. A. W. organization and a great meet is expected.

MARRIED IN A SALOON.

PLAINFIELD GIRL WEDDED QUICKLY IN HOBOKEN.

Miss Amelia Sherer, a Dressmaker, the Record Says She Is — Met Her Husband at the Plattdeutscher Fest.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Hoboken, August 29—It was past midnight when the couple strolled into the saloon at the corner of Clinton and Newark streets, with the name of D. Henchen on the door.

"Just returning from the Plattdeutscher fest," volunteered the man. "Met there for the first time this afternoon, think we like each other and want to get married. Where can we find a squire?

The bartender told him that squires in Hobcken were called justices of the peace, and that one, happily, lived only a few doors away. "Take seats and I'll try and find someone to hunt him up for you," he added.

The couple did so. They had not long to wait before Justice of the Peace Peter Quinn, aroused from his bed and ooking sleepy, appeared with a pocket Bible. The party repaired to a rear apartment, where the knot was tied. Here are the names given by the principals:

Miss Amelia Sherer, 21 years old, dressmaker, Plainfield. Daniel W Jones, 25 years old, bookkeeper, 566 Broome street, New York.

THE MAREORAMA.

One of the attractions of the Paris exposition of 1900 will be Hugo d'Alesi's "Mareorama," the principal feature of which will consist of a large ocean steamer, the passengers upon which will have an opportunity of making a voyage from Marseilles to Constantinople; that is to say, an imaginary voyage, since the vessel will not move forward at all, the illusion of sailing being introduced by an arrangement that has already been employed upon the spectacular stage.

The vessel will be mounted upon a spherical pivot, and the only motions that it will have will be those of pitching and rolling, which will be given it through the maneuvering of four pistons.

It will be surrounded with genuine boiling and foaming water; and in the ventilators will be placed seawreck and algae, traversed by a current of air that will become impregnated with marine odors.

The spectators, or passengers rather, will walk about at their pleasure or sit at ease in chairs upon the deck, which will reproduce that of a genuine steamer with the minuest accuracy, with all the details of masts, rigging, smoking and vibrating funnel, and a crew executing various maneuvers at the command of an experienced captain.

At the same time, to the starboard and port of the vessel will unroll canvases 50 feet in height, painted with all the perfection that might be expected from the brush of M d'Alesi, and representing the port of Marseilles flying to the rear, Frioul, Chateau d'If and fishermen's boats, and then the high seas and the Algerian and Tunisian coasts toward which the vessel will be apparently steering.

Over half a mile of canvas will unfold all the sites and episodes of this picturesque voyage. Every one is acquainted with the phenomeon; the displacement of an object which occupies the entire field of vision gives the stationary spectator the impression that he himself is moving.

It is the intention to change the canvases after the exposition is over, and then, perhaps, make a trip to the north pole.—(Revue International des Expositions de 1900.

WAR TO BE MADE ON THE SLOT MACHINES.

Many of Them Said to Run in Union County.

THE GRAND JURY WILL ACT.

PROSECUTOR ENGLISH EAGER TO SEIZE AND DESTROY THEM.

A Complaint Has Been Made That the Gambling Devices Are Operated in Cranford—Scotch Plains Has Been Rid of Them By the Complaint of Rev. Mr. Shott's Citizens' League.

The October Grand Jury is likely to be asked to investigate the charges that gambling devices of the slot machine order are being used in saloons in various sections of the county, and if all reports be true the violations are quite numerous and flagrant.

Prosecutor English, whenever his attention has been called to these alleged violations, has immediately taken steps to suppress the evil practice. The State law gives to the prosecuting attorneys authority to capture and destroy all gambling paraphernalia, and the slot machines are gaming devices which come under this statute.

In Camden county Sheriff Sell, with forty deputies, raided fifty saloons in Gloucester and captured 400 gambling machines. The raids were planned and directed by D. O. Gibboney, secretary of the Law and Order Society, who had been collecting evidence for some time past. In nearly every case the officer met with resistance, and as a result more than a dozen men were badly injured. Knives, pistols and blackjacks were freely used, the patrons of the various saloons being under the impression that the police were there to arrest them.

In this county the war against the slot machines has been carried on without trouble, and no resistance was made to the officers, who visited the places complained against and warned the proprietors.

Prosecutor English has already received a complaint against slot machines said to be maintained in Cranford.

Some time ago he received a notification from a representative of the Fanwood Law and Order Society, headed by Rev. G. M. Shott, that these gambling devices were being used there. He at once referred the complaint to County Detective Keron with instructions to have the gambling practice suppressed. Detective Keron and other officers from the prosecutor's office visited fourteen saloons and places where the machines were alleged to be in operation, and warned them that the gambling must cease. That warning was apparently effective, for Mr. English received a letter from the law and order people thanking him for his prompt action, and stating that the evil had been eradicated.

Mr. English said he would proceed against any offenders at once when informed of the violations. He had been told that there were slot machines in Elizabeth, and he had instructed Chief Tenney to capture and destroy them.

MORE CENTRAL CHANGES.

Old Employes at Elizabeth to be Supplanted by New Ones.

The Central railroad is still making changes in the heads of its departments and yesterday it was announced that Robert Stewart, superintendent telegraph, and William J. Husbands, yardmaster in Elizabeth, are to be relieved of duty on the first of the month. An official of the great Northwestern road named Adams will succeed Mr. Stewart and it is said Mr. Husbands' successor will come from the same direction.

Pipe is Stopped Up.

Of late the sewer pipe leading to the building on West Front street, occupied by T. J. Carey, has been stopped up causing great inconvenience. Several examinations have been made, but the trouble cannot be located. On one occasion the street was opened and an examination of the pipe failed to disclose the stoppage. If the difficulty continues Mr. Carey will compel a thorough examination. A few nights ago water was found running in his cellar and if it had continued great damage would have resulted.

To Enter the Normal School.

Miss Conroy graduated from the North Plainfield High School last year. Miss Codwise was one of this year's graduates from the same institution.

INHUMAN ACTION OF A MAN IRRITATED BY A FELINE.

Cat Was a Depredator on Chickens and a Howler Under Bedroom Windows—Its Assassin May be Prosecuted.

A severe case of cruelty to animals has just been reported, wherein a Plainfield man, thoroughly exasperated with troubles brought to him by a well-known feline owned by Mrs. Firstbrook, of West Fifth street, is responsible for the inhuman act.

The cat in question was a type that wandered from place to place and made a practice of eating small chickens, and otherwise making a nuisance of herself. She had given neighbors plenty of trouble and on more than one occasion her life was threatened with a shotgun. When there was nothing left to do she would find a convenient place beneath a window and cause the inmates of the house to suffer nightmare in its worst form. This sort of thing continued until a certain man could not bear it any longer. He avowed that he would have that cat's life if it took all summer and part of the winter, and his determination was followed with a successful effort.

A few nights ago he caught the cat, placed her in a small cloth bag, carried her to a point near Plainfield avenue and Eighth street. There he erected a stout stick in the ground, after which he fastened the bag and contents to the stick. He then saturated the same with kerosene, after which he set fire to it. It only required a few minutes for the fire to accomplish its purpose, and the man then destroyed every evidence that might lead to the detection of the deed, and felt satisfied that the cat would not come back.

It is reported that Mrs. Firstbrook was perfectly willing that the cat should disappear, but when she heard of the horrible treatment used she was highly indignant and threatened to make trouble for the man who dared to practice such cruelties. Thus far nothing further has been heard regarding the case.

DEMOCRATS NOT TALKING

BUT LITTLE GOSSIP ABOUT NOMINEES FOR COUNTY OFFICES.

The One Thing That is Regarded With Somewhat Envious Eyes is the Shrievalty—Several Mentioned for That Office.

The Elizabeth Journal says that there is not very much open talk among the Democrats as to probable candidates for the county ticket. For some reason there are more Democrats who have their eyes on the shrievalty plum than for anything else the voters in the county could give. Some of these have booms that have the advantage of early start, and if they are not vigorous booms it is not because of any neglect in the nursing. Jacob Glaser for several years has shown an aspiration along this line, and Wickliffe B. Sayre, the former president of the Board of Education in Elizabeth, is another whose name is mentioned always in the same breath with any reference to the shrievalty nomination. Oliver Conlin, the constable-at-large and district court sergeant at-arms, is another who seems to be very close to the goal, and Edward B. Kelly, the Summit pooh-bah and detective, is said to be on the trail of delegates, and is expecting to capture enough to give him the convention's vote.

This announcement of Kelly's candidacy was a surprise, but it is admitted that it is a matter to be taken seriously, and it causes the other aspirants to be less serene than they were. Summit will go into the convention this fall with an expanded estimate of its importance as a city, and will demand that its dignity be recognized by the bestowal of higher convention honors than were ever before given to it.

Trouble in Getting the "Stripes."

Warden Dodd of the county jail is meeting with considerable difficulty in securing cloth with which to make clothing for the prisoners. He has secured samples from southern states, which he finds are not suited for this climate, while other samples, which were made in Sing Sing prison, he finds are just the thing, but they cannot be used outside of New York State. The cloth required is of a peculiar kind, and he has yet to find a firm that makes it.

A Summer Night's Festival.

POWER FOR THE TROLLEY

HUGE CABLES GOING UP FOR FEEDERS TO TROLLEY LINE.

Big Cable Being Strung to Westfield—Three Other Cables Will Carry the Power to Other Points on the Line.

The power needed to run the through trolley line that is to connect Elizabeth and Plainfield in the near future will be furnished from power houses at the two terminals. Arrangements are now being made here to supply the power for the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company's line as far as Westfield. Four huge cables have been strung from the power house of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company on Madison avenue for that object.

Three of the cables are already up. They consist of forty No. 12 wires wrapped together and covered with insulation. They will act as feeders at Richmond street, a point west of Scotch Plains and another point west of that village.

They go from the power house to West Second street, to East Second street, to Watchung avenue, to East Front street, to Richmond street, to East Second street and thence along line of the trolley. The four cable, the largest of all is now being put in position. It consists of sixty wires of the same size as the others and weighs three pounds for every foot in length. This cable will follow the line of the trolley through to Westfield and feed the trolley line at that point.

The current that will pass through these cables will have a voltage of 500 volts.

SILAS ON DECK AGAIN.

HE ABSOLUTELY REFUSES TO TAKE A BACK SEAT.

Now That the Federation of Trade Unions Has Declined His Proposition He Comes to the Front With One for Printers

Not to be discouraged because the Federation of Trades at its recent session did not accept his proposition, Silas D. Drake has another move on foot, and is hopeful of success. He has secured a large tract of land on the south side of the Central Railroad at Lincoln, and proposes offering a large part of it for the location of a home for unemployed and disabled printers.

Near Bound Brook is a farm known as the Herbert estate. On it are about fifty New York printers, who are out of work, and who, during the last season, raised several carloads of vegetables of almost all kinds for the New York markets.

Mr. Drake paid a visit to the men recently, and when he told them that he left a printing office and shouldered a musket in defense of his country, coming home with an honorable scar, the men gave him a hearty welcome.

Mr. Drake is to lay his plans before the advisory board this week, and if it meets with a favorable response, it will result in the establishing of the home near Lincoln, where there is plenty of land, pure water, church privileges, etc. The farm will also be near the railroad, so that the products of the farm can readily be shipped to New York and elsewhere.

The matter may be decided upon this week, and then Mr. Drake will immediately proceed to stake out "the farm" and have the necessary buildings erected.

Dr. Shenck, the pastor, will assume his pastoral duties and preach morning and evening.

May Engage Him as Pastor.

Rev. Mr. Schaffer, of Liverpool, N. Y., preached morning and evening at the German Lutheran church last Sunday to large congregations. He will preach again next Sunday. There is a strong desire on the part of the congregation to engage Mr. Shaffer as pastor of the church.

THE JUDGE DIDN'T MELT.

AN OLD, OLD STORY HEARD IN POLICE COURT THIS MORNING.

Two Tramps Tried to Work Upon the Good Nature of the Cadi, But Failed—Will Take a Vacation in the County Jail.

They told the same old story. "Just a drop too much and had never been arrested before, so please, Your Honor, let us go this once and we'll never trouble you again." Charles Tulley, a weazened little umbrella mender from Bergen Point, fought with Patrolman McCue when he was arrested. John Mitchell, his companion from Newark, made trouble for Patrolman Flanagan. They were gathered in yesterday afternoon, charged with being drunk and disorderly.

City Judge Runyon was not inclined to believe their innocent little tale. Such faces as they possessed, he declared, were seldom seen out of State prison. Tulley, who tried to lick McCue, received forty days in the county jail. Mitchell wasn't quite so bad so the Judge limited his enforced vacation to twenty days. The prisoners bowed their heads to the judgment and shuffled back to their cells.

HORSE FELL IN THE POND.

EXCITING ADVENTURE OF HARRY ROBERTS AT NEW MARKET.

Driver Thrown Out of the Buggy and Then Horse, Rig and All Went Into Deep Water—The Steed Was Rescued.

Monday evening Harry Roberts and a friend furnished a great deal of excitement for the residents of New Market. They drove through the main street about 10:30 o'clock at night, and when passing the Baptist church the top of the buggy came off, taking the two occupants with it. This occurrence frightened the horse and he started off at a lively rate of speed with the wagon, leaving the two young men lying in the roadway.

The horse ran across the railroad track and instead of continuing on the road to New Brunswick made a sharp turn and followed the road along the pond. He continued his journey to the white bridge and after passing it his feet became entangled in the reins. This threw him, wagon and all, into the pond, where the animal floundered around in an excited fashion. The assistance of Wm. Roantree and Chas. Ward were secured and with the aid of a lantern an effort was made to get the horse, who by this time had broken loose from the wagon and was swimming in the middle of the pond. Mr. Roantree, more venturesome than the others, jumped into the pond and after a great deal of trouble caught the horse and brought him to shore. The wagon was then rescued.

The rig was placed in the stable at the hotel and another rig was fixed up for the young men to go home with. Yesterday morning Mr. Roberts went to New Market with the borrowed rig and took his own home.

LEHIGH TO ESTABLISH LOCAL OFFICE.

An Effort Will be Made to Secure Plainfield Patronage.

Now that it seems probable that the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company will be unable to get into Plainfield direct, the officers of the company are arranging to establish a city ticket office here.

The office will probably be established within a month, and in connection with it buses of an up-to-date pattern will run between here and South Plainfield to meet all through and many of the local trains both night and day.

The company will make a special effort to secure passenger traffic for the west, and all who purchase tickets from South Plainfield at the office in this city to Easton or points west will be transferred in the buses free of charge. To points this side of Easton a small fee will be charged for riding in the buses from this city to South Plainfield.

Where Justice May Hold Forth.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, August 30.—Owing to the controversy between Justice of the Peace Collins, of Westfield, and the Township Committee, over the use of the town courtroom, the trial in the series of Linden cockfight cases will probably be held at Etta Hall. In view of the action of the Committee in refusing the use of the rooms for out-of-town cases, Alfred E. Pearsall has offered the Justice a hall in The Standard building. William Ward offered Westfield Hotel Hall, and Charles E. Burtis offered the dining room at the Park House.

SAY HE IS A DISTURBER.

BUT THEY WERE UNABLE TO PROVE THEIR CASE IN COURT.

James Barlow Made a Complaint Against Dennis Sheehin, But His Testimony Proved Weak When Heard by the Judge.

Several of the residents of Richmond street declare that Dennis Sheehin is a disturbing factor in that neighborhood. This morning he appeared before the City Judge to answer to a complaint made by one of his neighbors. In the first encounter in the courts Sheehin was victorious.

James Barlow lives next door to Sheehin. Mr. and Mrs. Barlow say that the Sheehins make life miserable for them. Last Sunday they allege that a stone was thrown and struck a small child playing in their yard. They also allege that Barlow called Sheehin to account for making certain alleged remarks about the Barlow lad. Some of the names were decidedly improper and Barlow thought it a good chance to settle the trouble by having Sheehin arrested for using profane and indecent language.

In court this morning Barlow admitted that none of the names were applied to himself or any of his family. The Judge then explained that according to the city ordinance the case would not hold. So he discharged the prisoner. The Barlows received an explanation of the law and promised to go about any future charge in the right and proper way.

A WAREHOUSE FOR BEER

BALLENTINE'S WILL PROBABLY BUILD IN PLAINFIELD.

A Lot Purchased at West Second Street and Central Avenue Where a Distributing Station Will Be Located.

It is rumored on excellent authority that Plainfield is soon to have a new industry and that Ballentine & Co., the Newark brewers, are to locate a large distributing depot in town. It is understood that they have purchased the property next to the railroad on the south side of West Second street. Two properties at that corner have been purchased and it is the intention of erecting a large and handsome building to cost about $10,000. It will be of brick and stone and will be an ornament to that part of the city.

A railroad siding is to be run in the rear of the building making it possible to run in carloads of goods, which will be distributed to the various towns and places within a reasonable distance of Plainfield. Teams and trucks will be kept at the depot for this purpose, and the company will make this the central point in this section in the hope of regaining some of their lost patronage which is due to opposition that has been spirited.

BOUND BROOK WILL ACT.

N. Y. & N. J. TELEPHONE COMPANY WAITS THE RESULT.

General Opinion That Franchise Will be Granted at a Meeting of the Bound Brook Council Tuesday Night.
(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Aug. 30.—It is still a question whether the Borough Council will grant the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company the asked-for permission to run the company's lines through this place and establish an exchange here. The ordinance granting the franchise will come before the Council at the meeting Tuesday evening for final action.

So far the Councilmen have had little to say. It has been hard to get an expression of opinion from them. The general sentiment seems to prevail, however, that their best course of action for the interests of the borough is to grant the franchise on the most liberal terms they can secure from the telephone company as, in the end, the company seems bound to gain a foothold in Bound Brook.

Manager Charles W. Runyon, whose office is in Plainfield, says that the company wishes to enter Bound Brook with the full consent of the Council, and is willing to make certain concessions to gain that end. But the company is going to enter the town anyhow, for recent Court decisions in Jersey give the corporation the right to enter by a private right of way or go through process of law to condemn a right of way on a public thoroughfare and fix the damages.

The local press has had little to say on the subject, either for or against the big company. It is the general opinion in town that the Somerset Telephone Company, the local concern, is doomed, and that the Councilmen will see the wisdom of getting the best terms possible from the invading company for the right to enter.

An Unlucky Shanty.

Cause of Pollution of Rahway River Thought to be Fixed.

THE OFFENDER WARNED.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH CALLED UPON TO ACT.

Rahway Residents Were Loud in Their Complaints of the Bad Condition of the Water—Nicholas Wolfe's Practices are Said to be the Principal Cause for the Present Condition of Affairs.

Nicholas Wolfe, who resides along the banks of the Rahway river, near Meeker's Mills, at Milltown, has been ordered by the State Board of Health to abate a nuisance on his premises before the 1st of November, or the Board will take immediate action to have the nuisance abated.

Some time ago the citizens of Rahway complained to the local Board of Health at that place regarding the city water, the supply being furnished by the Rahway river, which also passes through that place.

The citizens at Rahway made such a time about the water that the local Board of Health at that place determined to ascertain just what was the matter with the water supply. Game Warden C. M. Hawkins, of Roselle, undertook the job to find out. After looking along the river banks for miles he finally ventured upon the property of Nicholas Wolfe, whose place is located at Milltown, about half way between Irvington and Cranford. Game Warden Hawkins discovered what he thought was causing the trouble, and spoke to Wolfe about it, ordering him to quit the practice. Wolfe became indignant and ordered the game warden off his property. Warden Hawkins went after he had made the discovery he set out to find.

Wolfe has from 200 to 300 pigs on his property, which he raises for New York markets. He also has contracts with the restaurant and hotel keepers of Newark, Irvington and Short Hills to remove all the garbage from their premises. Wolfe's wagons made their daily rounds, and the decayed vegetables and kitchen refuse were carted to his place at Milltown, where it was placed in a vat, and, after being boiled down, was fed to the hogs. The liquid from the vats was allowed to run into the Rahway river.

The State Board of Health looked into the matter Thursday last, at which time Dr. A. Clark Hunt of the Board and Game Warden Hawkins visited Wolfe's premises. After an examination Dr. Hunt ordered Wolfe to quit the nuisance, to clean the place up and stop running the filth into the river at once, or the State Board would take a hand and have it done. Wolfe was given till the first of the month to obey the order. It is understood Wolfe will quit selling pigs and go out of business.

WILL AID THE BUTCHERS.

Cattlemen of Texas to Aid in an Effort to Throttle the Big Meat Trust.

WON'T CUT OFF SUPPLY.

The Capital Company, of Northwestern Texas, Suggests a Plan It Believes Would Be Successful

The Company Declares Its Readiness to Deliver 100,000 Head of Cattle at Once and 290,000 More in One Year—Public to Share a Portion of Profits.

New York, Aug. 30.—There is no one on all the broad land more anxious to smash the great Meat Trust than the cattlemen of the Texas ranges. This was the joyous news given to the Retail Butchers' Mutual Protective Association, and it gave them assurance that in their proposed opposition to the Trust they would not be cut off from the supply as the Trust shouters have tried to make them believe.

There was a meeting in the Terrace Garden Assembly Rooms. Louis A. Meyer, financial secretary of an organization on the west side, presented a letter from the Capital Company of northwestern Texas, suggesting a plan, similar to that once carried out by the Marquis de Mores, of supplying consumers of beef with the article fresh from the ranch. The Texas company is ready to deliver 100,000 head of cattle at once in New York at from $28 to $38, and in a year promises to have 290,000 more.

This price, Mr. Meyer said, is four cents a pound less than the Trust now demands and would enable the butchers to go back to old prices.

The letter said that Armour, Swift and the other men who want the earth, have for years ground them down to the last notch in the matter of prices, and they have been scarcely able to keep going. They will turn in with heart and soul to help the retailers smash the Trust, and they hope that the Eastern men will perfect an organization for all time. There is no reason why retailers, producers and the public itself should not share the stupendous profits now enjoyed by a little handful of men.

The retail butchers here have been greatly encouraged by the letter from Texas assuring them of the support of the cattlemen and they are going into the matter of self-protection now with increased energy. Cattlemen in other sections of the country are also being heard from and all of them pledge hearty support to the new enterprise. Butchers in other large cities are expected to fall into line in the matter of protecting their personal interests and the interests of the consumer against the dictations of the meat combine, and it is proposed that when the war opens to make it one of extermination of trust business in the meat industry.

The Trade of Matanzas.

Washington, Aug. 30.—The War Department has announced that the imports and exports for the port of Matanzas for July were as follows: Imports—From the United States, $87,866; England, $8,800; France, $787; Germany, $5,604; Holland, $200; India, $14,047; Norway, $826; Spain, $6,668; grand total of imports for the month, $124,816. The total exports for the month amounted to $209,994, of which $201,878 consisted of raw sugar; $7,084 of molasses and syrup and the remaining $1,000 represented glass and glassware. All of these articles of merchandise found a market in the United States.

Policeman Shot By Prisoner.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 30.—Patrolman Byer was shot through the neck while taking James Fox, a laborer, to the police station. When within 100 feet of the station, Fox stopped suddenly drew his revolver and shot Byer. The wounded officer grappled with his prisoner and both fell to the ground. Lieut. Searles, Sergeant Prang and Patrolmen Conrad and Profant, who were at the police station, heard the shot and ran to Byer's assistance. They arrived in time to disarm Fox just as he was trying to fire another shot. Fox was locked up on a charge of shooting with intent to kill. Byer is in a dangerous condition.

Ammonia Causes Lawsuit.

Bordentown, N. J., Aug. 30.—A bottle of ammonia applied to a dog fight stopped the fight so suddenly that a suit for damages has been filed against the user, J. A. Ward, by Mrs. Sarah A. Bodine, the owner of the defeated dog. The dogs were fighting under the window of Mr. Ward's house and he got fired of the noise and threw the ammonia over them. They stopped fighting at once and ran home howling. Ward had not finished laughing when he was given notice of suit.

He will proceed to San Fernando tomorrow, after having spent a week in energetically visiting the lines.

Gen. Wheeler said to a newspaper representative:

"I am much pleased with the situation. I think that when Major-Gen. Otis gets more troops here he will make rapid progress.

"The country is more favorable for military operations than I supposed. The impression that the country is unhealthy is wrong."

The railroad to Angeles will be restored within a week and Gen. MacArthur will advance his headquarters to that place.

Off For Manila.

San Francisco, Aug. 30.—More recruits are being prepared at Presidio for transportation to Manila. The Puebla has sailed with 650. The Warren will leave Sept. 1 with 1,200, and the Columbia will leave about Sept. 5 with 800 more. This makes ten transports that will be ready to leave within the next fortnight, with two more about due from the Philippines, and which will leave again for Manila as soon as they can be equipped.

Short of Transports.

Washington, Aug. 30—As the number of transports available to ship soldiers to the Philippines will not hold the ten volunteer regiments within 2,400 men, the Transportation Department is now trying to secure the necessary vessels. It is at present negotiating with different steamboat lines for boats.

Neil Left Little Property.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 30.—The appraisement of the estate left by the late Robert E. Neil discloses the astonishing fact that Mr. Neil was entirely insolvent when he died. He had been considered one of the wealthy men of the city, and his estate was valued at $200,000 and upward. Stocks and bonds whose face value is close to $250,000, are declared valueless by the appraisers, and the real estate holdings in this city are covered with debts.

COL. CORDIER TESTIFIES.

Deputy Chief of Intelligence Department, on the Stand in Dreyfus Case.

MAKES JUDGES LAUGH.

Witness Tells How it Happened That His Belief in the Guilt of Dreyfus Was Shaken.

M. De Freycinet Makes Quite a Patriotic Speech to the Court—Labori Not Allowed to Question the Witness—Full Report of All the Proceedings.

Rennes, Aug. 30.—Gen. Mercier, the former Minister of War, and most of the other Generals interested in the case, were present in the hall of the Lycee when the trial of Capt. Alfred Dreyfus, of the Artillery, was opened.

Col. Cordier, Deputy Chief of the Intelligence Department, was the first witness called. He testified that the late Col. Sandherr, and not Lieut.-Col. Henry, received the famous bordereau. The witness deposed strongly in favor of Dreyfus, and was most amusing in delivering his testimony. He kept the court and even the judges in roars of laughter by his comical manner and witticisms. He is a short, stout man, with a jolly face and very red nose.

The Colonel declared that his belief in the guilt of Dreyfus was first shaken when the date of the bordereau was given as May, and later, the witness declared stoutly, he was now convinced Dreyfus was innocent.

The evidence of Col. Cordier was delivered in a loud voice, accompanied by humorous asides. He several times mentioned the Ambassador of Germany, which caused the President of the Court, Col. Jouaust, to intervene and tell the witness that he must not introduce the Ambassador's name or refer to Germany.

The hasty corrections of the witness when he repeated the same slip of the tongue, as he did more than once, and the amusing manner in which he avoided mentioning Germany at other times caused the greatest merriment.

During his testimony no fewer than five witnesses arose and asked to be confronted with him. But the Colonel received the interruptions with the utmost good humor.

Dreyfus spoke a few words at the conclusion of Col. Cordier's statements. He said the scene which preceded his arrest was so fantastic that it completely bewildered him and merely left a blunted impression on his memory.

The prisoner is now accustomed to his surroundings, and has apparently recovered his self-confidence, as he speaks readily and clearly and follows the witnesses closely, taking notes of various points of his depositions.

M. de Freycinet, the former Minister of War, former Minister of Foreign Affairs and Premier, followed Col. Cordier on the witness stand.

The court room was packed to its utmost capacity as the distinguished French statesman began his deposition. It was evident the public was anxious to see the former Minister at the witness bar. He is a venerable-looking man, with scanty, snow-white hair and mustache, and was dressed in a blue serge suit. He wore a little black bow for a necktie and gave his testimony seated and in a low voice.

M. de Freycinet began by expressing the pain which he experienced at the troubles his country ws undergoing, and later he said he remembered a conversation with Gen. Jamont, at which there was a reference to money coming from abroad in support of the Dreyfus agitation, "which, while disinterested in France, might not be so abroad."

The statesman, however, did not remember the details of the conversation, nor could he say if an amount was mentioned.

M. de Freycinet then alluded to his fears that "attacks on the chiefs of the army might be prejudical to discipline," adding:

"Might not these attacks lead to the disappearance of discipline, and what then would be the result if we found ourselves in difficulties with a foreign country?"

In short, M. de Freycinet delivered a patriotic speech rather than a deposition, concluding with these words:

"All the world will accept your cerdict, which will open an era of reconciliation."

The President of the Court, Col. Jouaust, declined to put to put to the witness some questions from Maitre Labori, leading counsel for the defense, on the ground that they had no direct bearing on the case.

M. de Freycinet was then conducted to the witness seats, where he sat for a few minutes beside Gen. Billot, chattin with that officer. He then left the court.

The testimony of two minor witnesses concluded the day's proceedings.

Conspirator Arrested.

Paris, Aug. 30.—M. Lissajoux, who supplied the Eclair with information from which the "Cette Cantille de D——" article was concocted, has been arrested. The prisoner declared that the article was made up from information received from several persons, not from documents, and that he did not know anything about its origin.

Struck on Head By Moving Train.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 30.—Jose Sanddospeditto, 43 years old, was working on the Boston & Albany railroad, at Chestnut Hill, in a trench that ran beneath the tracks, and stuck his head up between the rails to see what had become of a fellow workman, just as a train came along. Witnesses declare that the cowcatcher struck him full on the head. At the City Hospital, the surgeons could find no signs of injury. The man said that his neck felt a little stiff, but that otherwise he was all right.

He is Charged With Fraud.

Bellefontaine, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Silas Moss has been arrested by a Government detective here charged with securing a pension by fraud.

MRS. EYLER ARRESTED.

Arraigned on Cruelty Charge and Held in $300 Bail.

Trenton, N. J., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Myrtle B. Eyler, principal of the State Industrial School for Girls has been arrested and taken before Justice of the Peace William S. Mills and required to give bond in the sum of $300 for her appearance before a Mercer County Court of Oyer and Terminer, on a charge of extreme cruelty to Kate Barlow, an inmate of the school. The charge was preferred by Arthur W. Bishop, President of the Passaic Branch of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Capt. E. V. Richards, a prominent citizen of this city, indorsed Mrs. Eyler's bond.

The arrest of Mrs. Eyler was evidently pre-arranged. Constable Branin went by train to the school, where he served the warrant. Mr. and Mrs. Eyler, Mrs. E. J. Atterbury, a close friend of the Eylers, and Constable Branin then entered a school carriage and were taken to the office of the Justice on East State street. Mrs. Eyler seated herself at the desk and quietly attached her signature to the bail bond. The entire party then arose, re-entered the carriage and were driven back to the school. Mrs. Eyler looked pale and weak, the result of her late illness.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer convenes on the first Tuesday in October. Mr. Bishop will have to appear before the Grand Jury and state his charge.

Bryan Men Won Victory.

Plattsburg, Aug. 30.—A meeting of the Clinton County Democratic Committee was held, and October 10 was decided upon as the date for holding the County Convention. Caucuses will be held in all the towns next month. There was a contest at the meeting over the date of the convention. The Bryan Democrats, headed by Robert H. Rogers, wanted a late convention in order to give more time to the question of organization, while the Gold Democrats, led by John B. Riley, wanted to hold the convention early for the opposite reasons. The Bryan men won.

Had the Prince Decapitated.

He has been in exile since his birth and on May 2 returned and began to press his claims. At first he was arrested and adjudged insane, but when he persisted Lady Mo had his head cut off.

Kites Used for Wireless Telegraphy.

Boston, Aug. 30.—Experiments are making with telegraphy without wire between kites at Harvard. One kite is let up from the Harvard Memorial Tower in Cambridge, the other at Blue Hill Observatory, twelve miles distant. The messages are received at the earth on Morse instruments. The experiments have been partially successful.

Another Storm Brewing.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Another storm is brewing off the southeastern coats, out the officials of the weather bureau are unable to predict at present whether it will be of a damaging character north of Virginia. The storm was noted off the coast of Florida, and was increasing slightly in intensity.

Whitestone Landing, N. Y., Aug. 30.—A Sound steamboat, supposed to be the Laura M. Starin, on her way to New Haven, ran into and upset a rowboat containing three men in the middle of the Sound off here. Michael McGill, a blacksmith at Fort Schuyler, was drowned.

NEW YORK LIFE

Another Suicide in Central Park and Its Cause.

New York, Aug. 30—Alvis Zwick, supposed to have been a watchman employed by a contracting firm, killed himself in Central Park by sending two bullets into his head.

Policeman Nash was on the Ramble near Seventy-seventh street when he heard the shots in the rustic summer arbor, a hundred feet away.

In the dead man's pockets were found a card and a pawn ticket. The card had this note written on it in German:

"I am sick and don't wish to be a burden to my friends. You will find my family at 225 East Eighty-first street and my clothes at 237 East Eighty-first street.

"ALVIS ZWICK."

A watchmans badge issued by the contracting firm was also found. The pawn ticket was for a coat and waistcoat pledged for $4. The man was poorly dressed and was about 40 years old.

The body was removed to the Arsenal. The police found the dead man's wife and two grown sons at the Forty-sixth street address. Mrs. Zwick said that her husband deserted her last January.

"I haven't seen him since," she said. "I have no money to bury him and I dont want his body. He has a rich relative, Mrs. Greenthal, at 860 De Kalb avenue, Brooklyn."

Ligtning Stroke Ruins Speech.

Hudson, N. Y., Aug. 30.—A story of the queer results of a paralytic stroke comes from this vicinity. Mrs. Joseph Betz, a German woman, who resides at Red Rock, a small hamlet five miles from this city, sustained a stroke of paralysis several weeks ago, and her recovery was thought doubtful for some time. Now, however, the woman is recovering. Strange to say, Mrs. Betz regains her powers of speech, it is discovered that she is no longer able to speak English, which language she spoke fluently before her paralytic seizure. She understands the English language as well as ever, but her power to pronounce the words, as well as to use them in their proper order, seems to have left her entirely.

Prisoner Commits Suicide.

Haverstraw, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Daniel Ludwig, an aged prisoner, who had been committed to the county jail at New City, ended his twenty day sentence by committing suicide. Ludwig, when confined, was in a cell on the second tier from the floor. While out for exercise on the gallery, which runs around the jail in front of the cells, Ludwig sprang over the railing and plunged headforemost, landing on the iron floor, twenty feet below. When picked up by fellow prisoners, he was dead, his neck having been broken.

Reception to the President.

East Liverpool, O., Aug. 30.—The ovation for President McKinley, which started in Pittsburg, has not yet ended. At all the towns between Pittsburg and this city crowds were waiting to cheer as the President's train rolled past and 5,000 persons were packed around the railroad station here when the President and his party arrived. The people shouted and the piercing whistles at the various potteries shrieked. At ol. Taylor's house, where the President was entertained, the people thronged the streets and lawn.

Glass Factories to Resume.

Bridgeton, N. J., Aug. 30.—All the glass factories in Southern New Jersey, which have been idle during the greater part of the summer, will resume operations during the next ten days. Only one firm, the Cumberland Glass Company has so far failed to sign the union scale. The strike last spring, which caused most of the plants to suspend operations was a serious blow to this section.

Molineux Sees His Wife.

New York, Aug. 30.—Roland B. Molineux, accused of poisoning Mrs. Kate Adams, and now in the Tombs, has been visited by his wife. It was a pathetic meeting between the husband and the woman who has remained steadfast to him through all his troubles. Lawyer Weeks tried to prevent it because of the attending notoriety, and the prison officials vainly tried to suppress the facts.

Rev. Nathan Plum Dead.

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 30.—The Rev. Nathan Plumb, of Ohio, a veteran of the Eighty-eighth Ohio Volunteers, is dead at Foochow, China, after 32 years' missionary work. He was the first Methodist missionary honored in the Chinese Empire.

Killed His Family and Himself.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 30.—Frederick Johnson, a Gilbert Plains farmer, shot and killed his wife and three children and committed suicide. The family was a very happy one and no reason can be assigned for the deed.

A Broker Suicides.

New York, Aug. 30.—A. Mushsain, a broker fifty years old, committed suicide at No. 96 Spring street by shooting himself. The report of the revolver created considerable excitement in the neighborhood, which is a busy one.

How Malaria Is Communicated.

Study of the carrying of malarial infection by misquitoes has led to the conclusion that in this way alone is malaria communicated to human being. It is said tht demonstrations have proved conclusively that malaria cannot be acquired by drinking impure water or by inhalation. Only one way remains, then, for the germs to get beneath the skin of the human being, and tht is by an insect's bite. As the mosquito is the most common insect in malarious regions, at its door is laid the charge of infecting human beings by its bite.

Dental Floss for Children's Teeth.

Children's teeth require special attention. A spool of dental floss should be kept in a convenient place and a piece of the silk passed between the teeth after eating. If the first teeth are defective, or decay quickly, a dentist should be consulted and his advice followed in the hope that the permanent set may be benefited by it.—September Ladies' Home Journal.

WAR SEEMS VERY NEAR

Great Britain's Temper Ruffled at President Kruger's Defiant Remarks.

SITUATION LOOKS UGLY.

Leading Newspapers in London Declare That a Conflict is Now Almost Unavoidable.

Transvaal Could Put an Army of About 60,000 Men in the Field—Seriousness of the Outlook Greatly Increased—British Public Becomes Much Interested.

London, Aug. 30.—Commenting on the latest utterance of President Kruger, of the Transvaal Government, as cabled from Cape Town, that the South African Republic adhered to its latest offer and would not make any further concessions, the papers here unanimously draw attention to the increased seriousness of the Transvaal crisis.

But, in the same breath, they express uncertainty regarding the nature of the concessions beyond which President Kruger says he will not go. No official announcement has been made of these, though they are generally understood to be a five-year franchise and increased Outlander representation.

"If this is correct," the Globe says, "it cannot be long before diplomacy has to stand aside as of no further service."

The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"President Kruger's adherence to these would mean adherence to impossible conditions, and if so the situation has come to an ugly head."

The Westminster Gazete, while lamenting the immoderation which, it says, led to the present crisis, admits that "the country is within sight of a war which may shortly be as unavoidable as on the merits of the question, it would be inexcusable."

To whatever despatch or conditions President Kruger's defiant remark referred it has brought home sharply the keen possibility of an impending war against no weak-kneed adversary. It is said that with recruits from over the borders the Transvaal would have about 60,000 men at its disposal, whereas the most the British now could throw on the frontier would be 30,000, though, of course, this number would be materially increased within a month.

The British public is taking intense interest in the preparations of their own forces already in South Africa. Indignation against Hon. William P. Schreiner, Premier of Cape Colony, who in the Cape House of Asembly declared that under the Customs Convention the Orange Free State was justified in importing arms through Cape Colony, is fairly general, though that section which believes that a Boer war would be a crime are making, by editorials, petitions, &c., what they appear to think is the last effort to avert hostilities.

People Leaving Transvaal.

London, Aug. 30.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily Mail says:

"A pitiable scene was witnessed at the railway station here on the arrival from Johannesburg of 150 children whose parents are too poor to come themselves. It is estmated that 15,000 people have left the Transvaal since the crisis began.

"In the House of Assembly the Government announced that it was considering a proposal to afford greater facilities for women and children to leave Johannesburg.

"Bechuanaland is in a state of ferment, owing to fears of a Boer raid. Colonel Balden-Powell's forces there are wholly inadequate to protect such an extended frontier, and the Boers appear to be quietly concentrating in the western part of the Transvaal.

"A Boer spy has been arrested in Ramattabama Camp, in British Bechuanaland."

The Pretoria correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, telegraphing Tuesday, says:

"Events have taken an alarming turn. Great Britain, at the request of the Outlanders' Council, has enlarged the original demands of Sir Alfred T. Milner, the British High Commissioner, and is adopting the view of Cecil Rhodes that President Kruger will not withstand an ultimatum."

Business Greatly Injured.

Cape Town, Aug. 30.—Owing to the continued tension and warlike conditions trade in many places is practically at a standstill, and great distress prevails among the poorer classes, both at Johannesburg and here.

It is reported that 200 horses which were disembarked at Delagoa Bay, presumably for the Transvaal, have been held pending instructions on the subject.

McLean Sure of Nomination.

Zanesville, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Although the Democratic State ticket was not nominated yesterday, the result was forecasted decisively in the preliminary meetings. The McLean men carried a large majority of the twenty-one Congress districts, and will control the convention and party politics in Ohio until the next election for President. The nominations will be made to-day.

Strike Affects Price of Bread.

Havana, Aug. 30.—Bread is dear here as the result of a strike of 300 bakers. The men held a meeting and decided to accept a $5 advance on the month's salary instead of the $10 advance demanded at first. If the $5 proposition be rejected a general strike will be ordered. Cigarmakers also threaten to strike because they are not given work full time.

Strike Still Threatens.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30.—All the machinists and blacksmiths of Cramps shipyards threaten to strike unless a day's work is fixed at nine hours. It is also demanded that recently discharged men be re-employed.

Editor Runyon in Politics.

Having failed in his desire to be Postmaster of Plainfield, Editor Runyon, if we are to believe a political writer in the Elizabeth Journal, is anxious for a seat in the State Assembly as one of Union county's Legislative representatives. The Journal man says:

There seems to be no doubt about Mr. Murray's sincerity in wishing to go out of politics, and it is not at all probable that Elizabeth Republicans will obstruct the way of Editor Runyon if he can secure the first essential—the support of the Plainfield delegates.

The drift of political chat here at the county seat indicates that Plainfield Republicans do not intend to be aggressive in seeking nominations from the county convention. No one feels that Plainfield has been omitted whenever the plum basket has been passed around, and the delegates from the "Colorado of the East" are coming to the county seat on convention day with the single purpose of doing their duty as loyal Republicans.

One of his friends said yesterday that County Clerk Howard would have the support of the Plainfield delegation, and that Assemblyman Houston is regarded in that city as the logical candidate for Sheriff. B. Frank Corlell, who has a legion of friends in Plainfield, has been mentioned by some of them for the Shrievalty, but his candidacy is to be urged only on condition of a friction among the Elizabeth men in the convention.

There is some talk in sections of the county, especially around Fanwood, of course, that former Sheriff Kyte would make an acceptable candidate for re-election. Some who are known to be in pretty close relations with Mr. Kyte, however, say that evidently he is not kept up nights preparing the way for the honor.

The outing of the Union county Democrats tomorrow will be the meeting place for many of the prominent and influential leaders of the party, and will mark the opening of the preliminary campaign leading up to the nominations to be made at the county convention to be made some weeks hence. A good-sized delegation of Plainfield Democrats are expected to attend the affair for the purpose of enjoying a pleasant day and absorbing some of the political wisdom that will probably be floating around loose. Former Congressman McAdoo, who is an orator and political speaker of more than ordinary ability, will deliver the principal talk of the day.

If a speedway could be built in Plainfield by private enterprise it would be a splendid thing. Of course, under the present condition of things in the city government, it would be out of the question to ask the taxpayers to appropriate much money for such a project, since its use is limited to a small proportion of the inhabitants, and is a luxury to a large degree. But with a road devoted exclusively to the owners and drivers of fast-stepping horses Plainfield would undoubtedly prove an attraction for such men, who are, as a rule, liberal spenders in the community where there speeding proclivities are fostered.

SAN FRANCISCO'S WELCOME TO "OUR BOYS."

San Francisco dons her gala dress to welcome home our soldier boys every time a transport arrives from Manila. Flowers and bunting in profusion, with music and refreshment make the boys for a time forget the rigors of the Philippine campaign.

The clambake of the Plainfield Advancement Association, being held this afternoon at Mountain Park Inn, has attracted together a notable assemblage of substantial citizens from this and near-by communities. The result of such an affair ought to put a spirited interest and energy into the organization which is designed to promote Plainfield in a business way.

Editor Runyon's hypocritical pretensions of being a refined editorial writer are well evidenced in the following choice language which appeared in his editorial column yesterday: "When he had drank up what little water there was in it, he left a lot of slobber, which was not very appetizing to anyone who wanted a drink afterwards."

Mr. Croker is silent on the Ramapo job. But it is to be hoped that this is not a case of where silence gives consent.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Plainfield Press is urging the relegation of the name "hospital" and calling such an institution an "Invalid Home." What's the matter with the term "Sanitarium?" A hospital is not a "home" for invalids.—Hackensack Record.

George A. Dilts is not the only candidate for Senator in Somerset. There is Joseph Frelinghuysen, a relative of the former Secretary of State, and Charles A. Reed, the retiring Republican Senator. If Frelinghuysen really is in the race it is expected that Dilts will retire, leaving the contest open to Reed and Frelinghuysen. The Democrats are trying to draw Childs, the New York restaurant man, into the fight, and has promised him a walkover for the nomination.—New York Press.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Admiral Dewey has a double at Elizabeth in the person of Tudor B. Harris, who for many years has been paymaster in the United States Navy and stationed at Annapolis. His resemblance to the naval hero is very striking, and at Narragansett Pier, R. I., where he has been spending his vacation, he was frequently stopped and reminded by people of the fact. It so happens that Paymaster Harris is personally acquainted with Admiral Dewey, and he tells several stories of Dewey's popularity at the Naval Academy and at Washington.

* * * * *

A good story is related concerning the four-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. Asa R. Dilts, formerly of this city, but now of Northampton, Mass. The lad's name is Edward Judson Dilts, and with his parents were stopping at Watch Hill, R. I., recently. The boy had never seen any person smoke, except among the laboring classes, and there happened to be a number of college students at Watch Hill who indulge in the free use of the pipe. This puzzled the boy. He frequently and repeatedly asked one after another of the college lads why they smoked; his father never smoked, and he wanted to know why others did. The boy could get no satisfaction, until one day one of the college boys rather tired of the lad's persistent inquiry remarked: "Why, I smoke because I am hot!" "Well," replied the youth, "my father never smokes, and he is hot; as hot as you are and a great deal hotter, too." This reply completely prostrated the college man, and thereafter they had nothing to say to the boy who had so successfully knocked them out.

Speaking of troubles reminds the writer of some of the annoyances which beset the pathway of the average street car conductor. To say nothing of having to help the women with babies in arms, ring up fares and answer a half a hundred questions in making the run between Scotch Plains and Dunellen, the conductor must be attentive to his duties and be polite to everyone. If he carries a passenger by the street at which he wishes to leave the car, the poor conductor is called down in anything but polite language. Then, too, he is liable to be reported. No matter how much the passenger kicks, the conductor has no license to make reply. He is a servant of the public and must grin and bear it. However, I saw a conductor the other day who was real mad, and I don't know as I blame him. Five different passengers had tendered to him dollar bills. In order to secure their fares the conductor was of necessity made to give up four dollars and seventy-five cents of his change. By the time he reached the end of his run he was nearly bankrupt for small change. Was he mad? Well, that doesn't express it.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Aug. 30—The two story frame dwelling of Lawrence Reidy, situated in the rear of the water tank at Green Brook, was totally destroyed by fire about 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning. The fire is believed to have started from a defective chimney. The flames made such headway that it was impossible for the members of Mr. Reidy's family to check them. When the fire was first discovered the neighbors and some of the railroad employes went to the assistance of the occupants of the house and assisted them in removing the furniture, a considerable quantity of which was saved. The approximate loss is about $1,500. Mr. Reidy carried a small insurance on the house.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

OLD NEWSPAPERS.

Don't Throw Them Away, They Are Very Useful.

Just a hint for housekeepers about old newspapers. Don't throw them away; they cost practically nothing, and are so useful for domestic purposes. Dipped in cold water they make the best window cleaners; just rub the windows over with the wet paper, and they are clean with very little labor. Crush some paper in the hand and rub the cooking stove over when the cooking is finished; it removes the grease quickly, and keeps the stove in capital order if it is done frequently, so that the grease does not corrode. Rub the hair brushes every morning with a pad of paper; it removes the dust. A piece of newspaper rolled into a ball or pad is a good substitute for a saucepan brush. A few newspapers, perforated with small holes for ventilation, tacked on to a blanket, makes a very warm and comfortable bed covering on cold nights. Spills for lighting lamps and candles are most useful, but are not always to be found even in well regulated households, yet in idle moments dozens can be made out of an old newspaper. Again, torn into small shreds (a nice amusement for a child, by the way), curled up and put into a washing tick, they make a clean and wholesome bed for the baby, and can be constantly renewed. A few folds of newspaper under the cake tin prevents it burning while in the oven.

The clothes-moth, like other evildoers has an aversion to printer's ink. An excellent moth-proof bag, second only to expensive tar paper, and costing nothing, may be made of two thicknesses of newspaper, with the edges folded as if for an inch-wide hem, and securely pasted. Bags of the same kind are about the best thing you can use for keeping seeds and dried herbs. They are dust and insect proof, and can be labeled and hung in the storeroom until needed.

The Hindu Child-Wife.

A Hindo child-wife divides her year in two intervals, one of which she spends with her parents, this being a sort of vacation time, and the other she spends at the house of her husband's parents, this being the time of daily downright drudgery. Village girls in Bengal blacken their teeth with mishi, a coloring powder. The lips are black also, and this is supposed to make them exceedingly charming.

Writing letters, especially to her husband, is thought to be fearful immodesty in a Hindu girl; and she has no chance of improving her mind by intelligent conversation with anyone. She must write to her husband, though she has to do it by stealth in the night. The moon is her lamp, a stick out of the domestic broom her pen, the juice of the puin berry her ink, and probably the dried leaf of the banana her paper. A Hindu girl must always keep the inner apartment of the house. She is only let out when she goes to draw water for the household either from the pond or the well or the river. Hence the waterside is a great feminine resort, a sort of women's club, where there is much gossiping and plenty of stolen leisure.

Womankind.

A man causes some talk by deserting from one political party to another, but the real sensation is caused when a woman leaves one church to join another.

An Atchison woman rather lays it over all the other women in town by possessing a cut-glass and silver affair to fasten on an ear of corn while eating it.

When a woman bore calls, the hostess is compelled to get rid of her twice—when she gets up to go and at the front door.

There are different degrees of narrow-mindedness. The society woman who talks about "our set" is as bad as the church woman who believes that heaven was made to be filled by people of her church denomination.

A Woman Blacksmith.

A young lady living in California some little while ago took it into her head that she would like to make a horseshoe. It had been a favorite pastime of hers to watch a neighboring blacksmith at work, and she at last asked to be allowed to try her hand upon a shoe. Permission was granted, and she did so well that she continued the employment, and came to be largely patronized. Specimens of her handiwork were subsequently exhibited at San Francisco, and the blacksmith who taught her sent one of the horseshoes as a present to Queen Victoria.

In Washing Silk.

In washing silk there are four things to avoid—rubbing, wringing, soap and heat. Have the water luke warm, make a lather with a little dissolved soap, if very dirty; if not, use bran water. Don't allow the soap in lumps to come in contact with silk; swish round and round till clean. Rinse in cold water to which has been added vinegar, one dessertspoonful to a quart. Place between dry cloths and squeeze perfectly through a wringer. Shake well and iron at once through tissue paper.

Do Not Bite Thread.

If you are in the habit of doing much sewing do not bite off the thread; use a pair of scissors. Apart from the fact that biting the cotton is injurious, the trick often results also in a very sore mouth. When silk thread is bitten the danger is greater, for it is usual to soak the thread in acetate of lead, so the result may be very serious, and even lead to blood poisoning.

Silk for the Hair.

A hairdresser says that an old silk handkerchief is much better to use in stroking the hair night and morning than a brush.

FASHION HINTS.

Latest Developments of the Fashionable Wardrobe.

Cashmere is coming in again, and that is something upon which one may congratulate oneself, for no material is more serviceable or artistic. At recent garden parties and similar functions numerous gowns of fine French cashmere have appeared in soft but frank colors, ornamented with embroideries and incrustations of white, cream or ecru lace. Pastel and flax blue, pinkish mauve and fawn are among the favorite tints.

The straight sack is again to the fore, attempting to establish itself in favor. In its latest form it is a half long garment, falling below the knee. At the middle of the back and at each side it is sometimes slashed, and fans of silk are inserted. It closes with two large buttons in front.

Skirts of gowns of the rich and elaborate order are trimmed on the inside, about the foot, with ruffles, plaitings and lace.

The gown depicted is of pink silk with a black and cherry design. A deep flounce of lace over plain pink silk surrounds the foot, headed by a torsade of pink mousseline de soie. The bodice is fitted at the back and stretched in front and has a guipure yoke over pink silk, with a trimming of pink mousseline torsades. The sleeves have guipure tops, and the black velvet belt is fastened with ornamental slides. The pink straw hat is trimmed with green feathers and pink tulle. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ACCESSORIES.

Sashes, Wraps and Hats For Fashionable Wear.

Soft scarf sashes of crepe de chine, with fringed ends, are much worn with thin gowns.

Evening wraps are extremely elaborate and luxurious. The cape, which is long at the back and short in front, with the fronts much curved, is the favorite form and is lavishly trimmed both inside and outside, the lining usually consisting of puffs, fine plaitings and ruffles of lace.

Shepherdess hats are favorites for great occasions even, and to carry out the idea of their name they are decorated with heads of grain and such rural flowers as bluets, wild roses, periwinkles and poppies. Black and white plumes, however, are mingled with the flowers, and the hat is far from being of the simple order its name would indicate.

The directoire hat has established its position and will be much worn during the winter with the long redingote and the cape of the same period, which are to be revived also.

The picture shows a directoire hat which will give some idea of the fashion which will soon be seen in felt and velvet. This hat is of pink straw, the high crown being encircled by a brim consisting of five large tabs, lined with pink mousseline de soie. Black velvet ribbons are crossed around the crown, fastened at the side by jewels and crossed again over the hair, forming strings which are secured in front under a chou with long ends. Black plumes compose the additional trimming. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A Blue Grotto.

The famous blue grotto of Capri has a rival in Minnesota. It occurs in a lake on the shore of which there is a cavern of white limestone flooded with water. A swimmer enters the cave and, turning to look outward, sees the most beautiful shades of green and blue in the water and a silvery sheen over his submerged limbs.

TO STOP A COLD.

Long Breaths Will Do It When It Has Just Begun.

A cold, as nearly every intelligent person knows, is the result of a stoppage somewhere of free circulation of the blood, to which one is first sensitive through a feeling of chill.

So slight is the chill oftentimes that not until the preliminary sneeze comes is the victim aware he or she has been in the track of a draught or that the temperature has changed.

The usual notion is that by going indoors, changing to heavier clothing or retreating from the moist atmosphere the danger is averted. These precautions are all well enough, but the first and most efficacious measures should be to restore the quick flow of warm blood through every vein and so by heat instantly counteract the little chill.

One, perhaps the simplest method of doing this, has been learned by men who stand on sentinel duty, who are obliged to suffer more or less exposure in winter, or who scorn the comforts in cold weather of overcoat and umbrella.

Their method, when the temperature of the body or extremities is lower, or a sudden chill or quick change from warm to cold atmosphere is endured, is to inhale three or four deep breaths, expand the lungs to their fullest extent, holding every time the inhaled air as long as possible and then slowly letting it forth through the nostrils.

In doing this the inflation of the lungs sets the heart into such quick motion that the blood is driven with unusual force along its channels and so runs out into the tiniest veins.

This radiates a glow down to the toes and finger tips and sets up a quick reaction against the chill. The whole effect is to stir the blood and set it in motion as from rapid exercise.

Let any woman who goes to a dinner or ball in a low-necked dress, where the rooms are chilly and her wraps are not accessible, try this little cure, or, better still, this preventive against cold and enjoy its merits.

Let her try it when taking a cold drive or when condemned, by accident, to sit in wet garments. Let the maxim of a victim to colds be always: Keep the blood in rapid action; use the deep-held breaths when a first chill is felt.

Daughters of the Months.

Astrology says: If a girl is born in January, she will be a prudent housewife, given to melancholy, but good-tempered.

If in February, a humane and affectionate wife and tender mother.

If in March, a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarrelling.

If in April, inconstant, not intelligent, but likely to be good-looking.

If in May, handsome and likely to be happy.

If in June, impetuous, will marry early and be frivolous.

If in July, passably handsome, but with a sulky temper.

If in August, amiable and practical, and likely to marry rich.

If in September, discreet, affable and much liked.

If in October, pretty and coquettish, and likely to be unhappy.

If in November, liberal, kind, of a mild disposition.

If in December, well-proportioned, fond of novelty and extravagant.

The Japanese Room.

If the matting in your Japanese room begins to look grey and dusty do not wash it outright, but spread upon it damp sheets of newspaper. Now with a broom lightly gather the pieces of newspaper together; as the newspapers are pushed ahead of the broom they will gather the fluff and dust which might fly back and lodge. You will find that your matting screens can be cleansed in the same way. Lay them upon the floor and give them the wet newspaper treatment.

STUDYING ABROAD.

THE GREAT DIFFICULTIES AMERICAN ARTISTS MUST OVERCOME.

Miss Attalie Claire Says That if American Girls Would Devote Themselves to Home Teachers the Result Would be Far More to Their Personal Good and Happiness.

Miss Attalie Claire has, since her last appearance with Lillian Russell, devoted four years to study in Italy and Paris.

She has much to say of continental methods, and particularly of musical study in the French capital. Miss Claire does not hesitate to express herself with a frankness which is convincing as it is refreshing. She is particularly opposed to the studying of American girls abroad. She does not consider that they meet with anything like proper consideration or encouragement.

"It would seem," said Miss Claire, "as though professors and students were alike leagued against her. When an American girl unwisely chooses to exhibit her voice before the glaring lights of foreign public opinion it is not criticised on its own merits, but upon the personal attractiveness and other charms of its owner. The voice is forced to undergo an inevitable comparison with those of singers of the past and present. It is stoned, hacked and besmudged, and finally relegated to bitter obscurity, unless, perchance, she has powerful friends with an unlimited amount of both wealth and influence. The teachers make study a torture instead of a pleasure. They have a cast-iron set of rules, from which they allow no deviation.

"You must not go out at night. You must not dance. It dries your voice and weakens your vocal cords. You must not speak in the open air after singing. It gives you sore throat. You must not eat certain fruits or vegetables. It makes you hoarse. You must walk long and frequently to keep up your strength. You must renounce all your friends in order to have time to work.

"Finally," continued Miss Claire, "you must hope against hope, because you must work against people who are ahead of you through their especial talent for the basest of intrigues—with utter lack of refinement, with nothing holy or reverent in their purposes, with but one single idea in their souls—to be seen. Art to them is nothing; publicity everything. The one is simply a means to the end. American girl students in last year's coats and hats, their countenances pale and pinched with want, their eyes and lips sharpened with expectancy, throng the studios and haunt the offices of the impresarios. American pluck is proverbial in Paris musical circles.

"It is needless for me to remind you of the experiences of either Sibyl Sanderson or Marie Van Zandt. Their bitter trials turned the light of publicity upon the detestable power of the French claque and hatred of foreigners. But where these shining examples have finally conquered all opposition there are 9,999 American girls who every year are forced to retire beaten, discouraged and world-weary. Right here in Boston this was brought home to you the other day, where a young lady of family well-known and honored, had fruitlessly thrown away 12 years of her life in pursuing the musical will-of-the-wisp of Parisian musical study. Small wonder that she attempted suicide crossing the Atlantic.

"If American girls would but devote to home teachers and home study a tithe of the energy and ambition with which they pursue their musical life abroad, the result would be not only far more to their own personal good and happiness, but it would build up in this country a class of students and singers better voiced, and of purer lives than what are found abroad."

Proper Way to Mark Linen.

The "monogram hieroglyphics" which puzzled housekeepers are no longer fashionable in linen marking, the simple Roman letters, embroidered plainly, having taken their place. Plain script is also in good taste, and the work is done in a simple satin stitch on both table cloths and napkins. Bedclothes should have the name simply and clearly written in indelible ink, though towels are sometimes embroidered with the owner's initials.

It has been universally decided by women of good taste that the proper place to mark table linen is to embroider it with the initials of the house just below the hem and in the centre of the "breadth," the size of the initial to be one inch for tablecloths and half an inch for napkins.

Carving cloths and corn and hot potato napkins have the initials of the hostess sometimes wrought out below the hem or fringe, but it is considered better form to have them in dainty patterns that will be characteristic enough without the marking.

It is certainly in bad taste to make a display of one's initials or monogram; even silver should be unobtrusive in its lettering.

The best marking for the linen closet is to keep it in good order.

A Delicious Beverage.

Raspberry-vinegar is a delicious beverage mixed with iced water. Put a quart of ripe red raspberries in a bowl; pour on them a quart of good, strong vinegar—let them stand twenty-four hours, strain them through a bag, put this liquid on another quart of fresh raspberries, which strain in the same manner—and then on a third quart. When this last is prepared, make it very sweet with pounded loaf sugar, then bottle.

ELECTRIC VEHICLES.

THE IDEAL POWER FOR AUTOMOBILES IS ELECTRICITY.

New Ideas Being Worked Out Constantly and Weight of Storage Batteries Being Reduced—Its Reserve Power Instantly Available.

The wonderful development of electricity within the past few years, for power purposes, and its great economy, adaptability, and usefulness in that line, as shown by its universal adoption for the propulsion of street railway cars, also clearly demonstrate its superiority as a convenient and easily controlled power for motor vehicles, which are becoming so popular.

While the well known trolley car takes its power through the overhead or underground wires and conductors from an inexhaustible source of electricity, the motor vehicle is limited to the charge or amount it can carry, in consequence of the fact that it is intended to travel in places and over roads where there is no continuous outside supply of electricity. Hence, the means of storing electricity economically in the form of batteries is now one of the problems which is undergoing development.

New ideas are constantly being worked out, and it is confidently expected improvements will continue by which greater efficiency will result. At present, changes have been made in the construction of storage batteries whereby a surprisingly large quantity of active material is put into a small space, and this accounts for the neater appearance electric motor vehicles now possess over former designs. It is also a fact that the aggregate weight of battery for the amount of current discharge obtained is less than formerly.

The factor of weight is one of the features in electric vehicles that practical men are working to overcome, and it is said that whenever a storage battery or a system of storing the electric current is invented by which the weight of the battery is greatly reduced, there is certain to be an impetus given to the electric motor vehicle industry such as has never been thought of.

One of the essential requirements in a motor vehicle is that the reserve power shall be instantly available for a brief period of time, as, for example, when heavy grades are met with. In a storage battery this condition is perfectly met, the increase of current demanded being readily given off and accurately measured by the ampere meter, so that by observing the latter while traveling on an apparently level road one can detect slight grades by the varying position of the ampere needle.

The battery may be considered as an elastic equalizer capable of giving off in an instant the amount of current needed at various times and emergencies. This makes electricity an ideal power for vehicles, for it eliminates the complicated machinery of either gas, steam, or compressed air motors, with their attendant noise, heat, and vibration. It is not only serviceable as power ,but also as light at night.

The vertical steering shaft is connected underneath the carriage by a crank and rod with one end of an interior movable hollow hub, around which the front wheel runs on ball bearings; the hub is pivoted on its interior to the carriage frame. Another connecting cross rod extends from this hub to the same style of hub on the opposite side. So that the movement of one hub by the steering shaft operates the other in the same direction, both moving parallel to each other. This enables the steering to be done very easily.

The carriage frame which supports the springs is built of strong steel tubing, well braced and jointed. The foot brake lever projects slightly above the floor, and has side notches for holding the lever in any position it may be placed. From this lever under the carriage, the brake rod extends to a band brake wheel secured on the rear tubular propelling shaft adjoining the large gear wheel, also keyed on the same shaft. To exclude dust, these are covered by a metal casing which is removed in the illustration for more clearly showing the driving mechanism. An additional safety hand brake is provided, the lever of which will be seen just inside the front seat.—Scientific American.

Some Late Inventions.

Shears and scissors are to be made with ball bearings, the washer at the end of the connecting rivet being cut out on the underside to form a ball race, which not only decreases the wear on the rivet, but securely holds the cutting edges together.

A handy tool for carpenters' use is a nailholder, for starting nails in corners and places where the fingers cannot hold them easily, a steel punch having a pair of jaws attached to its face to grasp the nail and hold it while the hammer is driving it.

Pens can be adjusted at any desired angle in a new holder, which has the pen socket mounted on a ball set in a clamping head, so it can be moved in the position desired and held fast by turning a screw at the opposite end of the holder to lock the jaws in the head.

Ground is easily thawed for mining operations by the use of a new apparatus having a stove mounted on a sled, with a boiler over the firebox, the water being heated and discharged in the form of steam to a thawing chamber, which is placed over the ground to be loosened.

TOLD TO A MARINE

Wigwagging That Relieved an Angry Officer's Feelings.

The Spaniards had slunk away from the Plaza del Este. They had tested the American marine and they were satisfied. The buzzard-picked bones in the simmering valley of Cusco, where "Fighting Bill" Elliott and his 200 men trapped the lurking guerrillas, were a warning to which the Spanish troops at Caimenara paid heed. Camp McCalla was as peaceful as a State gathering of militia. The warships in the outer harbor of Guantanamo lay still on the warm blue waters, with no fierce booming of heavy guns to frighten out to sea the timid hammer-headed sharks so thickly crowding the bay. Boats filled with jackies were pulling about between the ships and the shore with rarely an anxious eye being turned at the wooded bluffs on either side of the camp where so short a time before were hidden the sharp-shooting Spaniards. On the beach the marines were busy with the police work of the camp and the officers off duty lolled beneath the shade of the mess tent at the base of the hill, glad of the respite from actual fighting. Peaceful as everything seemed, however, there was no relaxation in vigilance. The outposts were on duty at the crossroads and at the salt pond and the danger of a surprise was eliminated.

Among the officers under the mess tent the talk was about the three days of steady fighting they went through after landing. They knew that they had done good work, and they were telling one another incidents, some heroic and some amusing, and wondering what the folks at home were thinking about it all. Pretty soon there came up from the landing a tall young Lieutenant of marines. He looked as natty as on parade in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and the contrast he offered, coming as he did from one of the warships in the harbor, with the camp-soiled and fight-torn uniforms of the officers in the land battalion was very striking. His brother officers greeted him warmly, for, aside from any personal reason, a new face was welcome, as it meant news of some sort from the other world, from the fleet off Santiago, or perhaps from home.

The newcomer seated himself on a box of hardtack and joined in the conversation concerning the repulse of the Spaniards in their attack upon the camp.

"Boys," he said hesitatingly, "I heard something on one of the colliers to-day that I did not like. I don't believe it, but as it concerns you all, I think you ought to know it."

"Oh, we're not thin skinned any more," said one of the officers on shore. "It'll have to be pretty tough to worry us after our little experience of the last few days."

"Well, this will worry you, if anything will," replied the visitor.

"What was it?" asked several.

"Why, I heard," went on the visitor, "that if it hadn't been for the Cubans you fellows would have been wiped out. They say you flunked the Sunday night the Spaniards jumped you and that the Cubans had to rally you. The report is all over the fleet."

There was just a moment of silence, while several of the men who had faced death all through the fighting without flinching looked at one another a little queerly and then grew angry. The accusation was so unjust, so unexpected, coming from their own branch of the service, too, that they hardly knew what to say or do. Then a big fellow with a full black beard grew red in the face and stood up.

"Who told you that?" he asked as his eyes flashed in an ugly way.

His brother officer told him, naming a Lieutenant on one of the ships in the harbor.

"Go back to him," said the angry man, "and tell him for me that he's a liar. Tell him I'm sorry I can't get over there to say it myself."

So indignant was the speaker that the other officers forgot for the moment the reflection upon them contained in the galley gossip, and they laughed.

"No don't tell him," went on the angry officer. "I'll do it myself. I'll let him know what I think of him, even if I can't get at him."

With that he abruptly left the sheltering mess tent and strode out into the blazing sun along the trail leading up the bluff to where the camp proper was and where the flag, planted on the ruins of a Spanish blockhouse the day they first set foot on Cuban soil, still waved defiance to the impotent Spanish General in Caimenara. The others watched him as he stormed along through the chaparral, kicking the variegated land crabs from his pathway. They saw him climb laboriously up the steep winding ascent and slip in front of the signal tent where stood a signal boy leaning against a guy rope. In his hand the boy held the red signal flag with the white square in the center. Grabbing it from the private, the officer made three or four passes in the air.

"He's calling ——'s ship," said one of the officers in the mess tent as he read the signal.

"What's he going to do?" inquired one of the others, and we all stood up to watch him.

The man with the flag kept calling and calling, and finally there came an answering signal from the ship he wanted. Then the officers below read this message from the hill:

"Present Mr. ——'s compliments to Mr.—— and say to him that he's a damned liar."

Whereupon the wigwagger, having let off steam, came down the hill somewhat mollified. When he reached the tent again he was greeted with good-natured jeers.

"And you can tell him," he said to the visiting marine, "that I'll back it up the first time I get a chance."

This opportunity never came. Explantations followed the next day, the offending officer declaring that he had but repeated reports heard by him, and a lasting peace was arranged. However, had the Spaniards been able to read the American signal code, they would no doubt have been somewhat surprised by this particular message.

Queen Victoria's Lace.

Queen Victoria's collection of lace is said to be worth about $400,000. The Princess of Wales owns $250,000 worth of lace, and the ex-Empress Eugenie has a splendid collection. But that of Leo XIII. surpasses them all, being valued at almost a million of dollars.

A ROLLING STEAMER

PICTURE IS FROM A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

Snap Shot on a Water-Ballasted Tramp Ship That Rolled Twelve Times a Minute at Forty-five Degrees Angle.

This picture is from a photograph which was taken under rarely trying conditions. It shows the angle of roll of a water-ballasted tramp steamer without bilge keels. This steamer was in the North Atlantic trade, and westward bound. She was carrying water and coal to about two-fifths of her dead weight, being, of course, insufficiently immersed, and her weight was disposed badly, although better in these respects than most water-ballasted vessels. Her angle of roll was about 45 degrees, and her period of roll was about four and one-half seconds, or twelve to fifteen times a minute. At such a rate these vessels roll for hours, sometimes for days at a time without a let-up. The work of the fireman is exceedingly difficult, and it is simply impossible to stoke properly. The wing tubes of the boiler are uncovered at every roll, and the water is likely to be thrown from the boiler into the steam pipes and to be carried from them into the cylinders. The induction pipe of the condenser is rolled out of water occasionally, and as a result of all this the risk of damage to boilers and engines are exceptionally serious. The vesel is unmanageable, and the irregular, violent strains upon the hull, machinery and fittings is evident.

The people on board go through an infinite amount of misery. The officers of the watch on the bridge are swung through the air at an average velocity of about ten feet a second, and the mere effort to keep equilibrium is extremely exhausting. Even to these hardened mariners sea sickness is common, and so are broken limbs. Rest and sleep, of course, are not to be had, and when human nature can endure the strain no longer a shipwreck is the result.

These experiences often come to passenger ships which are sent out with short or badly stowed cargoes, especially when the vessels are not equipped with bilge keels. The whole situation shows the necessity of taking authoritative steps to check the practice of forcing ships to sea when in such unseaworthy condition.

Gambled But Once.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, tells the following story of his only experience as a gambler: "My first and only experience was in San Francisco in the spring of 1850. I was a youngster, and had wandered into a resort called the El Dorado, at which all sorts of games were in progress, and on the tables were piled up huge sacks of gold and silver coin. I looked on as a green youth would, and was attracted to a roulette wheel. A miner was betting $100 at every turn, and luck seemed to come his way. I didn't have much money, but concluded I'd take a chance, and started in with a silver quarter, following every bet of the miner. I ran this twenty-five-cent piece up to $25, and though elated with my fortune, obeyed the prompting of prudence and quit.

"As I went out of the place I heard an old gambler say: "He'll be back inside of an hour and lose it all.' That remark, for all I knew, had a great influence on my after career, for I not only resolved not to go back, but never to fight any game of chance in the future. So I quit the gambling then and there and kept my resolution."

The New Evolution.

"Have you noticed that the pretty girls are the ones who get seats in the cars, and that the unhandsome ones generally have to stand up?" asked the man who doesn't know whether he had rather be Schopenhauer or Mark Twain.

"Yes, but what of it. I don't quite understand what you are driving at."

"Well you may not know it, but that condition is going to bring about the salvation of the race."

"Oh, I know. The women are beginning to take a decided stand on matters and a more elevated point of view."

"Don't be an idiot. I'm in earnest. You know the law about the survival of the fittest and the process of evolution. Well, it is evident that the only way in which an unhandsome lady can get a seat will be to grow handsome. Now this will have its effect on the third and fourth generations, and finally all our women will be beautiful and able to get two seats on the cars if they want them. They simply have to get handsome, or they won't get a chance to sit down."

The Noise Habit.

A man who had been in New York steadily for a year spent last Sunday at a little resort on the coast of New Jersey. It took him two hours to get there, and the ride through the country was refreshing and invigorating, and when he reached the little place he found it very rural and pretty and quiet and life-giving. But his nerves had become so used to trolley cars and noise that the quiet irritated him and made his back ache. He was nervous and half ill until he had returned to New York. As he rode up Broadway in a cable car his aches passed away and his nerves grew steady and calm.

A Little Matter Among Friends.

Two boys were in fighting attitude like bantams; another and a smaller one stood watching them, wiping his eyes, sobbing the while.

"What did yer hit him for?" said one.

"'Taint none of your business."

"Yes, it is; he's my friend."

"Well, he's my friend, too."

DAVID B. HENDERSON

A Long Career In the Army and In Politics.

Politics is a game of chance to a large extent; that is, the outcome is always uncertain. A little while ago the chances of David Bremmer Henderson, of Dubuque, Iowa, to succeed Thomas B. Reed as Speaker of the House of Representatives appeared to be slight. But now he looms up as the dark horse of the contest, and there seems but little doubt that he will win in a walk.

Public interest is, therefore, concentrated upon Mr. Henderson at present, and it is believed in Washington that he will be nominated for Speaker upon the first ballot, when the Republican caucus meets just before the beginning of the session.

Nothing short of a complete revulsion of public sentiment against him in the next six months can prevent his success.

The career of Mr. Henderson, therefore, has a special interest at this time. He is a naturalized citizen of the United States, for he was born at Old Deer, Scotland, on March 14, 1840. His parents emigrated to America when he was six years old, and finally settled in Iowa, in 1849. He was educated in public schools and at the Upper Iowa University. Subsequently he studied law and was admitted to the Bar in 1865. Meantime he had enlisted in the army, in 1861, as a private. He was wounded several times and lost a leg, but entered the army again upon his recovery as colonel of the Forty-sixth Iowa infantry, and remained with his regiment till the close of the war. From 1865 until 1896 he was collector of internal revenue for the Third district of Iowa, resigning his position to become a member of a law firm in Dubuque. For about two years he was Assistant United States District Attorney for the northern division of the district of Iowa, which position he resigned in 1871.

For the last sixteen years he has served in Congress continuously, and almost from his first term has taken an active part in the business of the House. The most important piece of legislation with which M. Henderson has been chiefly associated in recent years is the Bankruptcy law, which he, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, reported and carried through the House. He advocated the bill for the election of Senators by the people, and in debates on the Civil Service law he has been one of its strongest supporters on the floor of the House. His position on the money question is satisfactory to sound money men generally.

Mr. Henderson is personally popular among his colleagues in the House, irrespective of party, but he is a strong partisan, and his impulsive manners have frequently brought him into sharp clashes with his political opponents.

In Washington and in Iowa "Dave" Henderson, as he is known among his friends, is a noted and popular character—noted because of his oratorical gifts, his good nature, his love of humanity, and his love of song and of singing. Mr. Henderson possesses a voice of such power at to make itself heard in any chorus. His singing has been described by a rival in that accomplishment, former Representative Warren B. Hooker, as very strong in wind but very weak in tune. But this may be a case of professional jealousy, for at any rate everybody is fond of hearing Mr. Henderson sing. It was he who led the chorus in the Doxology sung before the Speaker's chair at the close of the Fifty-first Congress, and his voice is in constant demand at social gatherings.

Traveled Incog.

President H. G. Burt, of the Union Pacific system, adopted the time-honored tactics of Haroun al Raschid last week, and took a trip incog. among his employes. He entered a baggage car at Clinton, Iowa, with the conductor of a flyer, and being introduced as a friend, rode 300 miles in the character of a bummer. He sat on a Saratoga, and handed around cigars to the smashers, who, after 10 miles of his company, voted him the most agreeable fellow who had ever ridden with them. It is probable that no railroad magnate had ever succeeded in getting into such close touch with his hands. He steered the conversation around to their work, drew from them their ideas on improvements in the line, and gave his own pet theories on unionism, strikes, etc. in return. He had ridden almost to Omaha before a chance official, getting on to ride to a station, discovered him. The smashers were somewhat embarrassed when they saw to whom they had been confiding their thoughts, especially as some of the conversation had bordered on the danger line, but President Burt put them all at their ease in a twinkling. His true character known, he rode to the end of the line, with his feet on a trunk, talking railroad, and enjoying himself hugely. And when they reached their destination, he performed that pleasant duty which, according to the Governor of North Carolina, no gentleman would avoid.

The Cornfed Philosopher.

"This is the time of year," said the Cornfed Philosopher, "when a man can send his wife out in the country to save expenses and can then loaf around downtown and get lots of sympathy and have a good time."

JABE HAWKIN'S LUCK

THE EFFECT PRODUCED BY A PAIR OF FINE BLUE EYES.

A Tale Showing How the Homliest Man in the Village Won the "Purtiest" Girl—A Traveling Hypnotist Proves a Benefactor.

"I reckon Jabe Hawkins was about the ugliest man the Lord ever let live," said Uncle Ben, as he meditatively whetted his knife upon his boot leg. "I've knowed strangers to foller that man around for a half hour jest to git another look at his race, an' then go right off an' take a drink of licker. Seemed to kind of give em a relish for it. I've knowed fool women to scare their children into spasms by threatin' to give 'em to Jake, an' they do say he's been the cause o' more than one runaway. He was jest pizen ugly an' that's all they was to it. It was a pity, too, because he was a mighty nice man if you happened to meet him in the dark, and he had money in the bank at Maple Run, and eighty acres of as fine bottom land as ever felt a plow.

"Well, in spite o' him bein' so blame homely that he dassent look a women in the face, this yere cuss was always wantin' to git married, but, o' course, they wan't no way to get at it. He advertised some in the city paper, an' writ letters to lots o' women that way, but he was honest to the core, an' when the thing got along fur enough so's they might anything come of it, he always sent his photograph, an' that ended it. Oncet they was a mighty likely widow from way back East that got to likin' Jabe purty well through his letter writin', and I must say he was a good hand at that, before he sent his pickshur. After studyin' over his lineaments for a couple o' months she made up her mind to come on, anyhow, but when she ackshully saw Jabe in the flesh she backed out an' married Si Peters, an' she made him a mighty fine wife, barrin' the fact that she had twenty-year-old son that bobbed up after the ceremony an' turned out to be as shiftless as it's possible fur a man to get an' live.

"Then Jabes gits desperit, an' he up an' offers a hundred dollars reward to anybody as will git him a partner. But that didn't amount to much. Ole Dud Harris 'lowed he'd make his oldest girl, Mirandy, the one that had a hare lip, jine him, and Jabe, knowin' his own shortcomin's, was satisfied to git anybody most, but Mirandy took epileptic fits an' died before the weddin' come off, and folks all around said it was a judgment on Dud.

"Things was this-a-way when there was a hypnotizer come through Maple Run an' give a show an' he asked for people to come up on the platform an' be hypnotized. Everybody most was afraid to go till Jabe made the break, sayin' it didn't matter much what become of him, nohow, an' then five more went up like they alluz do.

"Well, the minit this here hypnotizer took hold o' Jabe's head an' tilted it back to git a good look in his eyes he give a funny little jump an' says:

"'I can't do nothin' with you. Why, man, you may not know it, but you got more power than I have. If you fix them fine blue eyes o' your'n on anybody they just nachelly have to do what you say.'

"Then he let Jabe go, an' made Wash Diffins fight bumble-bees an' preten' he was a dog an' do the most outlandish things you ever heard of. Golly! it was funny, an' he made some o' the others act up, too, but none so much as old Wash, an' the next day he went away.

"But he made a mighty big change in Jabe's life. Y'see up to this time Jabe allus dropped his eyes every time he see a woman comin', an' women allus looked the other way. But now Jabe made up his mind to try it, an' looked, an' all the women knowed about it, so they looked, an' they found out them eyes was mighty fine if you looked at 'em so keen you couldn't see the rest of his face. They was mostly scared, too, since they heard as how Jabe was a hypnotizer if he only wanted to be that-a-way, but, of course, that only made 'em look all the more.

"First off, Jabe didn't have the sand to look at the best lookin' girls, but only the homely ones, an' it wasn't two weeks till he could of had his choice of a dozen girls. You see, they got to talkin' to him an' studyin' them eyes o' hiss'n, an' fust thing they knowed they were hankerin' after 'em. But Jabe got partic'lar. They was a time when he'd been tickled to death to have any girl that wore dresses keep comp'ny with him, but he kep' raisin' his idees every day till fin'ly he got his mind on winnin' Hetty Allen that was the blamedest purtiest girl in the whole county, an' had a dozen fine-lookin' fellers with good horses an' buggies an' some land tryin' to court her, an' blame if he didn't git her. An' the funniest part of it all is that there ain't no purtier young uns anywhere than them seven children o' Jabe's. An' they all got blue eyes."

Wars Caused By Salic Law.

Nearly all the historic wars that have taken place in Europe since the days of the first crusade may be attributed to the existence of the Salic law, and even in the present century sanguinary struggles have taken place on its account. Great Britain and Russia are the only two countries where it has never secured any foothold and neither the one nor the other has ever had any reason for regret, since the sovereigns who have contributed most largely to the glory of the country have been women.

But it is still in force in Denmark, in Sweden, in Prussia and all the other Federal States of the German Empire, as well as in Belgium, Italy, Roumania, Servia, Bulgaria and Greece, the national constit

AMONG THE STEPPERS.

A number of local sportsmen went to New Brunswick today to witness the races on the track of the New Brunswick Driving Association.

If conditions are favorable there will be good racing at the Plainfield Driving Park next Saturday afternoon, when an interesting programme will be presented.

Very few Plainfield horses will enter the races to be held at New Brunswick tomorrow and Thursday. So far as can be learned C. L. Wright is the only Plainfielder who will enter.

Today and tomorrow lovers of good horse racing will have an opportunity to attend some fine races at the Driving Park, New Brunswick. Nothing now remains but fine weather to make the affair a great success. Good programmes have been prepared and some very fast horses will be on the track both days. Today is ladies' day and no doubt a large representation of the fair sex will be in attendance. Thomas Brantingham, of South Plainfield, has entered his trotter, "Myrtle Twig," and some good results are looked for.

CYCLING COMMENT

The Brunswick Bicycle Club is arranging for a "hobo" run, similar to the one held by the Atalanta Wheelmen last year. The participants are to dress as tramps, in the most tattered clothing possible. Prizes will be awarded to the most villainous looking of the riders.

Jack Townsend, of Bayonne, who is spending the summer with his sister at Cranford, will ride a match bicycle race with Simmons, the Plainfield colored rider, this afternoon. The race is said to be for $10. The Westfield sports are backing Townsend to win.

Charles Embleton, of Westfield, got second place in the second heat of the novice race at Vailsburg Sunday, being beaten in the sprint by Stuart Robinson, of Jersey City, who rode second to Embleton in the fifteen-mile road race held at Westfield July 4th. The time was 34 and 1 5 seconds. At the same track Charles Ransom, of Netherwood, who rides under the name of Charles Anson, rode from the 60 yard mark in the third heat of the "J. W. Pointer" half-mile amateur handicap.

Legend of the Silk Worm.

The Chinese have a legend that the silk worm was discovered by the little daughter of the Empress Hoang-Ti, nearly six thousand years ago. The little Princess watched the worms at work on a mulberry tree in the palace gardens and finally interested her father, who, as a result of his observations, became the founder of the silk industry.

BIG AIR COMPRESSOR

THE LARGEST OF ITS KIND IN THE WORLD.

Built for Supplying Companies—An Air Compressor Is an Exact Counterpart of a Steam Engine—Flasks Filled Under Enormous Pressure.

The latest important application of compressed air is to traction. For years it has ben put to other uses, and satisfactorily. It runs small engines, operates drills for blasting purposes, has an extensive popularity in mines, furnishes the high pressure needed in caissons for submarine work, is employed in airbreakes and railway signalling, propels mail and merchandise through pneumatic tubes and drives a great variety of other machinery. It has also been used to hurl dynamite shells from cannon where ordinary gunpowder was likely to harm both projectile and gun.

The attempt to use compressed air in operating street cars dates back ten or fifteen years, but until two or three years ago the venture was not attended with reasonable success. Certain difficulties peculiar to that class of work were overcome only after prolonged experiment, so that this particular development is a distinctly modern one.

It is only after recognizing these facts that one is in a position to appreciate the beauties of the big air compressor that has just been installed in West Twenty-fourth street, New York, nominally for the American Air Power Company, but really for the Metropolitan Traction Comapny.

When power is stored for future use by compressing air it is a higher pressure than that which is used. The higher the pressure the more work is obtainable from a given volume. Accordingly, when any wholesale job, like running a heavy stret car for several miles, is about to be performed, it is desirable to employ much greater pressure, at least for storage purposes, than in any of the other common applications of compressed air. The gas enters the cylinder of the motor at a pressure of 150 pounds to the inch, perhaps, having first passed through a "reducing valve."

But the huge flasks or bottles that are placed under the cars to carry the compresed air are charged at the station at a pressure of 2,000 pounds to the inch or more. The compressor that charges these flasks and the stationary storage tanks at the power house, then, must be capable of squeezing the air down to about 2,300 or 2,500 pounds to the inch.

The plant just installed in West Twenty-fourth street is exceptional in being the first combination ever made of an engine of 1,000 horse power with a compressor that develops 2,500 pounds to the inch.

The air compressor is an exact counterpart of a steam engine. In the latter vapor, already under high pressure, pushes a piston along and develops power thereby. In a compressor power from another source pushes the piston, and thus squeezes up air from a low to a high pressure. Just as the expansion of steam is often divided into three or four stages, so the compression of air is usually effected by degrees instead of all at once. The compressor has four cylinders. The biggest has a diameter of 46 inches, and carries on the first part of the work. The next has a diameter of 24 inches, the third one is 14 inches across and the fourth only 6. But the pistons on them all have strokes of the same length—60 inches.

Character in the Walk.

Obstinacy is indicated by the slow, heavy and flat-footed style of walking while miserliness may be suspected from short, nervous and anxious footsteps, says an exchange.

Turned-in toes generally characterize the absent minded, and a stoop the studious and deeply reflective, whose thoughts are anywhere rather than with themselves.

Sly, cunning people walk with a noiseless, even and stealthy tread, resembling that of a cat. A proud person generally steps even, holds the figure upright, and the head a little back and turns the toes well out.

A gay and volatile person trips lightly and easily in sympathy with his or her nature. Character is shown by all sorts of oddities in gait, but for grace and elegance no civilian's walk will bear comparison with that of the man who has received military training.

Militarism Fits Badly.

How awkwardly the military helmet fits modern Germany is shown by an incident in Baden. The public dispensary physician received an order to report at a certain hour for military duty, being in the reserve. The next morning he excused his non-appearance on the ground of having received an urgent call. He found a telegram from military headquarters had already arrived, ordering him to remain under arrest in his room two days. During this period the man shot himself. No other physician is available in the small village, and the major assumed personal responsibility for the physician's breach of arrest long enough to extract the bullet from the man's head.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World

Manager Maze Edwards promises his patrons a novelty in the engagement of the Boston Serenaders, an organization of recognized lyric players presenting their own farcical operettas. The Boston Serenaders is a new organization, and the first of its kind in this country. It does not claim its productions to be light operas, but modestly announces them as farcical operettas. They are said by competent critics, who have seen them, to be a happy medium between light opera proper and the higher class farce-comedies. Tuesday, Sept. 5th, this company will present Fred Miller's latest work, "Davy Jones," a nautical musical novelty.

• • • •

John W. Isham's Octoroons will be the next engagement at Music Hall tomorrow night. The Octoroons appear in the most novel and interesting entertainment ever before attempted. Originality will predominate from beginning to end. Mr. Isham has been lavish in expenditure on scenery and costumes. Everything being new, rich and striking. The company embraces the very piece of high class colored artists, each selected for special excellence in their own particular line, and includes such artists as Miss Belle Davis, late of Brown's In Town Company, and the only individual who enjoyed a sixteen weeks' run at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, New York city. Smart and Williams, comedians, Hampton and Johnson, the Brittons, Billy English, Miller and others also help to roll the fun along. The scenic portion of the enterprise is elaborate, and the costuming and ensembles all that could be desired. The programme is a varied one, opening with an original sketch. The olio is an exceedingly strong one, and the remainder of the entertainment concludes in "Thirty Minutes Around the Opera," with a chorus of forty voices. One is amazed at the work these singers do, even in comparison with white vocalists. To many it is a revelation. Don't miss the Octoroons performance. It represents an epoch in the advancement of an already musically famous race. The Octoroons were the Madison Square Garden attraction at New York city all summer.

IN THE INTEREST OF RED MEN.

Entertainment at South Plainfield Was a Great Success.

The entertainmen at Higgins' Hall, South Plainfield, last evening, in the interest of the proposed tribe of Red Men, proved a great success. The hall was crowded with visiting Red Men from the Plainfield tribes and with interested people in South Plainfield.

William Hamilton, of South Plainfield, acted as temporary chairman and introduced Deputy Great Sachem W. A. Westphal, of Plainfield, as chairman of the evening. After an overture by Naylor's orchestra a varied programme was given which included clog dancing by John Fritz, of Mauch Chunk, German dialect sketches by John H. Carney, a talk on the benevolent features of the order by Deputy Great Sachem Westphal, sword dance by M. R. Brown, talk on the origin, growth and beauties of the order by Great Senior Sagamore William Newcorn, of Plainfield, cornet solo by M. Sorenson, baritone solo by John Higgins, and violin solo by Bert Naylor.

There were twenty-four charter members on the list who have paid. There are also thirty more applications to go on the charter list. The new tribe will be instituted Sept. 18th.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Groton, S. D. "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in eight bottles. It has cured me and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at L. W. Randolph's Drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

THOUSANDS OF SMITHS AT ANNUAL PICNIC

Held on Farm of Late Peter Z. Smith at Peapack.

TWENTY-FOURTH REUNION.

EXERCISES AND SPEECHMAKING TOOK PLACE DURING AFTERNOON.

The Famous Smith Picnic Held Under Clear Skies—Big Attendance—First Smith Came to Jersey in 1686 and There are Now Three Thousand Descendants—Clergymen Spoke of the Reunion.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Peapack, August 31.—There were Smiths and more Smiths and still more Smiths assembled yesterday to do honor to the annual gathering of the representatives of that illustrious family in New Jersey. It was the twenty-fourth annual reunion and picnic of the Smith Family Association and its friends and was held in the Smith picnic grounds in the old orchard of the late Peter Z. Smith.

Since September 6, 1876, when the Smith Family Association was formed, for the purpose of celebrating the memory of their ancestors, the Smiths have regularly set aside the last Wednesday in August as a day on which to gather together, and, in reminiscent mood, recount the deeds not only of the Smiths who have preceded them, but also to plan for the future Smiths, who are to shed lustre upon the family name, and incidentally add to the pages of history.

The first Smith of whom the family history gives an account is John Smith, who, with his wife, Christian Hassel, emigrated to this country from Holland in 1686. There are now in New Jersey some 3,000 descendants of John Smith, and in New York there is a collateral branch of the family which numbers some 400 members.

Smith Day, in New Jersey, is proverbially a day on which the skies are clear, and all nature seems to be at her best. Yesterday was no exception, and the picnic grounds on the north branch of the Raritan river, surrounded by the hills of Somerset county, with its large crowd of picnickers in holiday attire, presented a pretty scene. From an early hour all the roads leading to Peapack were crowded with vehicles of all descriptions, and conservative estimates place the number of those present at not far from 8,000.

At the exercises held in the grove at 2 o'clock, Isaiah Smith, of Millburn, president of the society, presided, assisted by the vice president, Abraham Smith, of Peapack. After prayer by Rev. Dr. Howard C. Hasbrouck, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church, of Peapack, Rev. Dr. T. Walker Jones, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church, of Bedminster, spoke on "The Importance of the Family Reunion."

Rev. Dr. C. R. Kuebler, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Hackensack, made a speech on family reunions and their aims.

Addresses were also made by President Smith, Rev. Dr. Cayman, paster of the Methodist church, of Gladsone, and others.

In the evening the Smiths and their friends attended the annual fair and festival of the Reformed church at Gladstone and Peapack.

Union Democrats' Outing.

Congressman William D. Daly is to be one of the guests at the outing of Union County Democrats today, but it is rumored that he will not be allowed to expound his views on the financial question. It is understood that the only talking to be permitted will be by former Assistant Secretary of the Navy William McAdoo, who is expected to outline the Democratic plan of campaign in New Jersey and strike the keynote for the campaign in Union.

Linemen Removing Western Union Wires.

A gang of linemen of the Western Union Telegraph Company are in the city at present removing their wires from such poles belonging to the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company that the latter company is going to take down. The removal of a number of the now useless poles has been delayed owing to the telegraph wires that were still strung on them. When the telegraph wires go, the poles will be taken down at once.

Plainfield Represented.

A pleasant trio of handsome young ladies at the Albemarle are Miss M. L. Coly, of Jamesburgh, N. J., and Miss Florence A. Becker, of New York, both pretty blonds, and Miss Adelaide M. Elsberg, one of the finest piano performers of Plainfield.—Asbury Park Press.

IMPROVE ALL STREETS.

F. E. K. BELIEVES STREET REPAIRS SHOULD BE BETTER DISTRIBUTED.

Thinks Division of Advantages Would Benefit the Whole City—Would Better Conditions of Residents of Neglected Streets.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There is no end to the laudable efforts which are being made by churches, charitable organizations, etc., to elevate and otherwise improve the condition of the poor. In that connection we frequenly hear the workingman spoken of in terms of commiseration and condescending sympathy. The subject of the education of his children, and the improvement of his surroundings, has been the study of philanthropists and kindly disposed people from time immemorial.

I would not attempt to pass judgment upon the sincerity of those who put their hands in their pockets in response to a popular subscription or public charity, or who inveigh against the degenerating and obnoxious influence of the saloon or other places, where those who are unfortunate enough to be placed among uncongenial surroundings, find temporary relief in the brilliant and sometimes costly furnishings of such places; but it seems to the writer that the sentiment wasted in these most worthy attempts at opposing the natural longing for improved surroundings, would result in a much greater benefit if put to more practical use.

It would almost seem as though the officials of so progressive and beautiful a city as Plainfield, would discern their duty and fulfil their promises, and instead of spending many hundreds of dollars in improving already perfect streets like Seventh and Eighth streets, as has just been done, would turn their attention to the improvements of such streets as Second and Third streets, thereby instilling into the residents of those streets the spirit of improvement and self-elevation, which is not so much needed by people living on the more elegant thoroughfares. There has already been more money spent on the two first mentioned streets in super-fineing them, then would fill the mud holes and clean the gutters of all the streets in the poorer parts of the city.

How can the hard-working housewife be expected to keep cleanly, when the dust from the street is blown into every window and crevice of a poorly-constructed house. She walks up through the more elegant parts of the city and says to herself, "if I could only live under such conditions, what a tasty home I could provide for my growing children and husband," who now prefer to spend their evenings away rather than in their home with a discouraged wife and mother.

The city of New York has discovered the secret of elevating the more unfortunate members of society by making parks and improved streets in the vicinity of such homes. It is true philanthropy of a kind which cannot be too quickly and firmly impressed upon the minds of our Street Commissioner and City Council. "God help the poor, the rich can help themselves." Respectfully yours,

F. E. K.

Shopp, August 22d, for issuing bogus money orders, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Whitehead yesterday. He waived examination and was held in $2,000 bail to await the action of the Federal Grand Jury.

It is alleged that Bartles paid debts with money orders and made no return to the Government.

Suspicion of irregularity was aroused by the presentation of orders for large amounts at the Somerville, Dover, Washington and Clinton postoffices, it being known that Pottersville was a small village unlikely to do business of this nature on a large scale.

Tramps at Lake Hopatcong.

Several of the detectives of the Jersey Central Railroad have been on duty at and near Lake Hopatcong lately. That region has been infested by a large gang of tramps who have a habit of making themselves at home on the freight trains. The railroad officials are bound to break it up as much as possible, and the railroad detectives have been laboring toward that end.

REPRESENTATIVE MEN AT THE BIG CLAMBAKE

The Affair a Great Success in Every Respect.

PRAISE FOR PLAINFIELD.

BRIEF TOASTS RESPONDED TO BY PROMINENT GUESTS.

About 250 Present, Making it Necessary to Serve a Second Table—Plenty of Everything to Eat and All Enjoyed a Very Pleasant Time—Names of Some of the Prominent Guests.

The long looked-for clambake, given under the auspices of the Plainfield Advancement Association, came off yesterday at the Mountain Park Inn. Probably never before was there such an assemblage of representative citizens of Plainfield and surrounding towns and cities together on a similar occasion. The committee, of which Mayor Smalley, as president of the Association, was chairman, ably assisted by W. F. Williams, City Judge Wm. N. Runyon and Assessor Elston M. French, evidenced to the satisfaction of all present that the bake was arranged and given in true style. There was an inconvenience experienced for the fact that provision had been made for about 150 people and there were nearly 250 guests present. This the committee could not help, but they did all in their power to overcome it, and provided a second table.

The bake was called for 1 o'clock in the afternoon, but it was nearly 2:30 o'clock when the festivities commenced. In the meantime the guests arrived and made free use of the spacious hotel rooms and broad veranda, and found the cooling breezes welcome.

In the parlor Rogers' orchestra was stationed and from the time the affair started until the close popular airs were discoursed. As an extra attraction Fred Sebring was stationed on the veranda, where he manipulated one of the latest phonographs from the store of W. H. Rogers. While all this was going on and guests were becoming acquainted with each other, preparations were rapidly being made to serve the dinner. Back of the hotel in the woods several men were employed under the direction of William Brown, who had charge of the bake, and when the various things in the bake were ready a corps of waiters served the dinner.

First came the clams in abundance, then sweet and delicious green corn, followed by crabs, lobster, chicken, watermelon and plenty of soft drinks. Everything seemed cooked to suit the tastes of all, and the guests partook of the feast with a relish, for it was late for dinner, and most of those present had had nothing to eat since breakfast. All could not be seated at the first table and a second table had to be set, where the remainder was provided for.

Among those who helped to make everyone feel at home was James E. Martine, and he did his best in this direction and gave all a cordial greeting, while he made it a point to see that all were introduced and became thoroughly acquainted.

After the inner man had been provided for all gathered around the veranda, where the dinner was served, and listened to some good speeches. That most excellent toast-master, Col. John I. Holly, presided, and in his usual happy manner brought forth the talent that was to entertain the guests. J. E. Martine called for attention and after introducing Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough, who made a few happy remarks, Mr. Holly took charge and opened the speech making by saying that if Plainfield did not advance all would move into North Plainfield.

The first toast was "Plainfield's Interests," and Mayor George W. Rockfellow responded in a pleasing manner. He said that Plainfield wished to advance and he congratulated all upon the earnest effort made to help the movement. "Our Neighbors," was the subject assigned to Hon. J. J. Bergen, of Somerville, former speaker of the Assembly, who thought Plainfield such a beautiful place that she needed little advancement. He said that neighbors do not usually quarrel, their only difference being a feeling of superiority. He remarked still further that it was Somerville that grantd North Plainfield her licenses, built her bridges, punished her criminals, furnished her with courts, but he was a little fearful lest Plainfield swallow the borough up. He understood that the hat industry was the principal one until commuters came here from New York with swelled heads.

"The Combined Interests of Plainfield and North Plainfield" was the toast handled by Senator Reed in his usual masterful manner. He thought the interests of both places could be advanced if there should be two or three first-class funerals, but then there would be a question as to who should take the principal part. "There is too much fault finding," continued Mr. Reed, "and the residents should praise instead of decry."

"The Sanitation of Cities," was the toast given to Col. Chas. W. Fuller, of Bayonne, who is a member of the State Sewage Commission. He considered it a dry after-dinner subject. He said Plainfield has fine roads, fine women, healthy location and a magnificent attempt at sewage disposal. He spoke of the appointment of the commission, and told how the Legislature had conveniently forgotten to make an appropriation for it. However, the commission is endeavoring to solve the difficult problems assigned to it. He felt sure that with Plainfield's wealth brains and energy she would overcome the sewer trouble.

District Attorney Hiram Steel, of Kings county, Brooklyn, was the next speaker on the subject of "Suburban Interest and the Trolley." He extolled Plainfield to the skies and said he thought it was the finest suburban place within easy reach of New York. He thought so well of it that he had built a house here. He did not believe that trolleys should be given the best roads, and he said he would like to see a fountain where horses could water.

In connection with the latter remark, Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, the next speaker who responded to the toast "Plainfield's Prospects," said a few pleasant things and remarked that the Plainfield Water Supply Company would furnish water free for a fountain and give a handsome subscription for the fountain. This offer brought forth hearty applause.

Editor Chas. McBride, of Elizabeth; Councilman Walter L. Hetfield and Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, failed to be present and respond to their toasts. Mayor Silas Dewey Drake, of Lincoln, spoke on the subject of "How to Build Greater Towns and Cities." He offered a number of original suggestions and created considerable enthusiasm. He was followed by J. E. Martine, who spoke on the subject "What can be Accomplished for the Advancement Association." The "Farmer Orator" received a hearty ovation and his spirted talk awoke great enthusiasm. He informed Mr. Bergen that Plainfield would soon control the water works and supply and would not pay tribute to President Bergen or John Kean. He also said that the city would own its gas works and supply it at a minimun price.

The last speaker was Lawyer W. A. Codington, whose toast was "The Judiciary and the Law." His remarks were pointed and apropos. City Judge Runyon who was to respond on behalf of the ladies, was unable to speak owing to a sudden illness, and after a few closing remarks by Mr. Holly, the joyous affair came to an end.

In the midst of the festivities Mayor N. B. Smalley furnished a little excitement by arranging for three blasts at his stone quarries. The blasts were successful and the guests were interested in watching the explosion on the distant hills from the Inn.

Among the distinguished guests present were: District Attorney Hiram Steel, King's county, Brooklyn; Frank Bergen, Elizabeth; James J. Bergen, County Clerk Frank Somers, Sheriff Selah Schoonmakerr, ex-Sheriff W. H. Wyckoff and Postmaster Cooper, of Somerville; Hon. Charles A. Reed, of Washington Park; Col. Charles W. Fuller, of Bayonne; Mayor G. W. Rockfellow, of this city; Mayor N. B. Smalley, of the borough; Hon. W. A. Coddington, Postmaster E. H. Bird, City Clerk MacMurray, Councilmen F. H. Smith, J. F. Buckle and Henry Leifke, City Judge Wm. N. Runyon, of this city; ex-Assemblyman VanDoren, of Millstone; Surrogate H. N. Spencer, Collector G. F. Brown, Borough Physician Dr. J. H. Buchanan and Clerk Frank Rowley, of the borough; ex-Sheriff and Mayor George Kyte and Assessor William R. Stanbery, of Fanwood; Mayor S. D. Drake, of Lincoln, and many other greater and lesser lights of this city, borough and vicinity. Responses were received from Editor McBride, of Elizabeth, and Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, stating that owing to unavoidable circumstances they could not be present.

A commendable feature of the bake was the absence of any intoxicating liquor in connection with the clambake.

BANK HAS NO CLAIM ON MORTIMER ESTATE.

Plainfield Creditors Unable to Force Their Agreement.

JUDGE RUSSELL SO DECIDES

THE PRINCIPAL POINTS IN THE DECISION OF THE COURT.

He Says That it is the Duty of the Court to Effectuate the Intent of His Mother, Who Left the Property in Trust, and Therefore He Rules That Trust Fund Cannot be Touched.

Justice Russell in the New York Supreme Court yesterday decided that creditors of John Mortimer cannot establish a claim upon a trust estate of $50,000 left by his mother, the late Frances R. Mortimer, to Mortimer and his family. He dismissed a suit brought by the First National Bank, of Plainfield, against Mortimer and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company to establish a lien both upon the principal and income of the trust fund.

The facts in the case were printed in The Daily Press two weeks ago. Justice Russell said in part:

"It is argued with diligence and ingenuity that by the scheme of the will John not only has the beneficial enjoyment during life of the share bequeathed and devised in trust, but the same power of disposition which any owner would have, and therefore the combination of the entire benefits of his share, with the power of transmitting it by will, gave to him in the theory of the law the absolute estate, at least so far as the claims of creditors are affected. . . . . It must be remembered that the effort of the courts of this State is to ascertain and effectuate the intent of the testatrix, who has the power of disposition accorded to all owners of property and construe the provisions of her will in accordance with such intent, unless they transgress some rules of public property. She had the power to say that John Mortimer, her son, should receive no part of her estate. She was mindful of the situation of a son brought up in an affluent family in the city of New York, accustomed to the liberal receipt of money for his own uses, and at the time of making her will, with a wife and three children dependent upon him for maintenance. Knowing him full well, she may have had entire confidence in his intention to honorably conduct his life and make a just disposition of the property she gave, to take effect at his death, while at the same time she may not have felt the same assurance of his ability to deal with business judgment with the income as to make such a wise provision in the future as to the corpus of the estate during his life."

In defending the suit against the estate trust fund Mortimer entailed something over $400 expenses, and for this he has secured a judgment against the plaintiff—the First National Bank. But inasmuch as the bank is protected against loss by the fact that the syndicate of creditors endorsed his note, which was discounted to raise the money to distribute among them in the liquidation of the debts that Mortimer had created, the final loss will fall upon the creditors who will now be in the position of not only losing the amount of their credits, but will also be called upon to pay a share of the court expenses entailed in the case.

COLORED RIDER WON

MATCH BICYCLE RACE OVER PUMPTOWN COURSE.

Peter Simmonds Won Race From Jack Thompson, of Bayonne, Yesterday Afternoon—A Loafing Match From the Start.

A match race between Peter Simmonds, Plainfield's crack colored rider, and Jack Thompson, of Bayonne, was held yesterday afternoon over the Pumptown course. The race started on Park avenue beyond Randolph road and was to Pumptown and return, a distance of eight miles.

The race turned into a regular loafing match. At the start both men maneuvered to keep out of the lead until they nearly stopped. Then Simmons took the lead and held it to the end. After riding to within a few hundred feet of the finish, the colored rider made a jump and left his antagonist behind. He crossed the tape with a lead of five lengths. The time was 36 minutes. Considerable money changed hands on the result. The start and finish of the race was witnessed by several hundred people.

Seriance comes of a wealthy family in one of the larger cities of Austria. He returns at the instance of a rich aunt who has secured for him a place in a bank in her native city, and has also signified her intention of making him heir to her fortune, which is said to be about 400,000 marks.

Seriance is well educated, speaking half a dozen different languages fluently. He worked for a number of years as a day laborer on a dairy farm near New Brunswick, and while there he met and married Miss Annie Dahill, of New Brunswick.

He never communicated with his family until about a year ago when he wrote to his aunt. Within a month he received from her the letter inviting him to return. She sent passage money for the family. He had been in this country fourteen years.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, August 31—The trial of Charles P. Winans, of Mountainside, charged by G. Wyte Smith, state agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, with having neglected a sick horse, came up before Justice of the Peace Collins, in Etta Hall, yesterday morning but Constable Todd had such a hard time getting a jury that it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before the trial got under way. Both sides had many witnesses and Paul Q. Oliver for the plantiff, and L. E. Hart for the defendent had plenty to do in cross examining them. The jury took the case at 7 o'clock and after staying locked up for one hour and a half brought in a verdict of guilty and placed the fine at $1.00 and costs. The extreme penalty is $100.

KISSED WIFE THEN TRIED TO KILL HER.

John Kucklo Shot His Wife and Afterwards Himself.

MARRIED SINCE JULY.

BULLET STRUCK HER BEHIND THE EAR BUT WAS NOT FATAL.

Kucklo Locked Himself in Another Bed Room and Fired Two Shots Into His Mouth—Trouble Over the Fact That He Married Under an Alias—First Gave Name of Smith But Wife Discovered Deception.

An attempted murder and a possible suicide, which took place early this morning caused a sensation at the West End of the city. The scene of the tragedy was at 24 Clinton avenue. The principals were John Kucklo, alias John Smith and his wife, who was the widow Childs. Kucklo made a desperate attempt to kill his wife about 6:30 o'clock.

He arose early and did the deed. His wife was still in bed when Kucklo fired at her. The bullet hit the woman behind the right ear. She jumped from the bed and a desperate struggle for the posession of the pistol ensued. The woman finally escaped from the unfortunate man's clutches and ran from the room and out upon the roof of the porch, clad only in her night clothing.

Her screams for help aroused the neighbors and a Mr. Benton ran into the house. When he reached the stairs two pistol shots were distinctly heard, the sound coming from a front room upstairs.

The woman had been shot by her husband who, she said, had chased her upon the roof. The police were notified and Acting Roundsman Mattox hastened to the house. The officer burst in the door and found Kuckio lying upon the floor unconscious. Blood was streaming from his mouth and a small pistol lay beside him. The ambulance was sent for and the injured man was removed to the hospital.

In the meantime the neighbors had given their attention to the woman, who was also bleeding from a wound back of her right ear. Later Captain Grant sent Dr. Curry to the scene of the tragedy. The woman was afterwards removed to the hospital in a carriage. She is not believed to be seriously injured. The physicians at the hospital have removed the bullet.

The couple lived in a cozy two-story cottage, comfortably furnished. Mrs. Childs, who was the widow of John Childs, married Kuckio last July. He represented to her that his name was John Smith, and it was under that name that they were married. The ceremony was performed by a minister in New York.

Recently Mrs. Smith learned that her husband had deceived her and that his true name was John Kucklo. When she intimated to him that she was going to look up his record, Kucklo flew into a rage and destroyed the marriage certificate.

Yesterday Mrs. Smith, as she was known to the neighbors, went to New York for the purpose, it is understood, of procuring a new marriage certificate. She did not return until late.

It is believed Kucklo intended to murder his wife and then leave town. Before shooting his wife the fellow had darkened the room by drawing the shades in the bedroom, after carefully dressing himself.

Then Kucklo approached the bed and leaning over kissed his wife. The next thing the woman knew was when she heard the report of the pistol and felt a sharp pain on the side of her head.

She then realized that her husband was attempting to take her life, and she made efforts to protect herself. It was in another bedroom that Kucklo shot himself. The weapon was a small affair of 22-calibre.

Mrs. Smith or Kucklo is a respectable woman, and has a son 14 years old. She has lived on Clinton avenue but a few months. Her first husband, John Childs, was a florist, and the firm of Childs & Stanley was well known in this city and Netherwood, where they had a greenhouse. Mr. Childs died last September.

Kucklo or Smith also followed the business of a florist, and had partially constructed a small building in the rear of 24 Clinton avenue to be used as a hothouse.

Mrs. Kucklo is now out of danger. The physicians succeeded this morning in extracting the bullet that entered her head behind the right ear. Her husband is in a more serious condition. He has not been conscious since he shot himself, and the hospital physicians have been unable to re-

VACANT SEATS IN COURT.

The Attendance at the Dreyfus Trial is Somewhat Diminished.

THE PRISONER FAVORED.

A Rumored Rupture Between Dreyfus' Accuser and a Possible Plot to Sieze France.

Many Persons of Influence and Authority Who Believe Such an Attempt Would Be Successful—The Forces Behind the Army Are Powerful.

Rennes, Aug. 31.—The Dreyfus trial was resumed at the usual hour. There were plenty of vacant seats in the court room, the public having become pretty well satiated with the long-drawn-out hearing and finding it easier to take the dramatic incidents from their favorite newspapers. But the comedy of yesterday had the effect of bringing more spectators than those who came yesterday morning. A Frenchman will drop work any time and in any circumstances if there is promise of a good laugh.

There are rumors of a rupture between the accusing Generals, which may at any time become an open one. If this should happen it would greatly weaken the force of the conspirators, who so far have, seemingly at least, worked together in harmony.

Gen. Boisdeffre is the man believed to be at odds with his co-conspirators. He has really shown signs of decency, and unquestionably the temptation is strong within him to get out of bad company and do something which will restore self-respect. He has, unfortunately for his present peace of mind, a conscience, and that is a bad piece of baggage for a General in the French army to carry nowadays.

It is known that since the Henry forgery and suicide Gen. Boisdeffre has taken no active part with Gens. Mercier and Roget and the others who are so frantically seeking to mock the course of justice. He scarcely conceals his disapproval of their policy, and his personal relations with them have recently become strained.

Nearly three hours were occupied by the testimony of MM. Meyer, Giry and Moliner, three experts for the defence, who repeated with considerable amplification the testimony they had given before the Court of Cassation.

Each ascribed the bordereau to Esterhazy. The Judge followed each of the witnesses closely, and the cross-examinations by Colonel Jouaust, Captain Beauvais and other judges were keen.

M. Labori is suffering from his wound. It keeps him awake nights when he ought to be sleeping, and he is showing signs of breaking down under the strain of this insomnia.

It is openly stated here that Generals Mercier, Gonse and Boideffre will attempt to seize the Government if any effort is made to arrest or prosecute them for their illegal course in connection with the Dreyfus case.

And there are many persons of influence and authority who believe the attempt would be successful. The Generals, these men say, would have the army back of them, and that the Government would be powerless to resist. The bourgeoise would stand, and with them would be the powerful Catholic element in the country and four-fifths of the newspapers, according to this theory.

A bitter and disastrous war is predicted if the military leaders do not succeed in accomplishing their object at once and without resistance.

Major Carriere made an application to have the court sit behind closed doors to-morrow, declaring that he desired to submit to the court certain documents prepared by the Gunnery Bureau containing information which it was not desirable to discuss in public. The court, after deliberation, granted the application.

Gen. Wood Holds Jiminez.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 31.—Jiminez the aspirant for the Presidency of Santo Domingo, has not been able to surmount the difficulties in the way of his reaching Santo Domingo in time to head the revolutionists there. Gen. Wood refused to allow him to proceed on a Haytien steamship. Two other Haytien steamships are in port. It is believed that it was planned that they should carry men to aid Jiminez, who will be compelled to remain on the vessel which brought him here until orders regarding him are received from Havana. He is greatly incensed by his detention.

Dispute Over Cuban Troops' Pay.

Havana, Aug. 31—The supplementary lists of the Cuban army now seem to have no standing in court. Governor-General Brooke says that he never had any intention of paying the men on the new lists. He knew nothing about their being made. He expects to divide what is left of the $3,000,000 given by the United States for the payment of the Cuban troops among needy and deserving Cuban officers. Gen. Gomez says that if the men are not paid he will issue a manifesto declaring that the United States has broken its promises.

Killed His Whole Family.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 31.—At Gilbert Plains Frederick Johnson shot his wife, his baby, whose head was blown completely off; his boys, Arthur, five years old, and Clifford, three years old. He had to load his shotgun for each victim. Both of the boys' heads were blown partly off. The murderer was found lying near by with his throat gashed in two places and a charge of the gun just below the left ear. A razor and his gun were lying near.

Ocean Steamer On Fire.

Boston, Aug. 31.—The giant Warren line steamer Kansas, which sailed for Liverpool, has returned to port with her refrigerator house on fire. The crew were exhausted when the vessel reached here, having been fighting the fire all night. Coolness of officers and men saved the big ocean liner.

A NEW CURRENCY LAW.

Congress Likely to Pass the House Caucus Bill.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 31.—The controller of the currency, Charles G. Dawes, who is in Chicago, said:

"It is my opinion that congress at the next session will passs the house caucus bill now in the hands of the senate finance committee, which embodies the President's recommendations on a gold reserve fund. Under this bill from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 in gold will be set aside as a fund for the redemption of greenbacks. The effect of that will be to place about $125,000,000 between us and the danger of trouble. It amounts to putting the currency of the country on a good basis and cannot be construed any other way. It is not a contraction of the currency or a retirement of greenbacks, as some men argue, because for every greenback turned into the treasury an equivalent in gold is issued and put into circulation.

"The condition of the banks the country over is more prosperous than it ever has been, and particularly in the west and south. That is due to good crops, which have resulted in the liquidation of many farm debts and to the general prosperity of the country."

Roosevelt Speaks to Veterans.

Hornellsville, N. Y., Aug. 31.—This place is greatly excited by forceful language used by Governor Roosevelt in his address to veterans. He said a demand should be made that public servants should be honest.

"If any man under me in my administrataion fails to do his duty in that respect, I will wring his neck, and in doing that I will be doing the greatest service to my party."

Replying to a question about the canal scandal, he said two of the ablest Democratic lawyers in the state had been unable to find any dishonesty.

Result of a Wink.

Columbus, Ga., Aug. 31.—There was a sensation in the North Highlands Casino when one of the male members of the Kiefer Diamond Company jumped from the stage and ejected from the building a well-known young man named Luetje. A large audience was present. The soubrette was singing one of her favorite songs but before it was finished she left the stage hurriedly, and in an instant several members rushed on the stage, all pointing toward Luetje, and he was taken by the collar and dragged from the building. The soubrette alleged that Luetje, who is popular here, winked and made other insulting signs to her.

Fishermen's Luck.

St. John's, N. F., Aug. 31.—The Governor of Newfoundland, Sir Hugh McCallum, said that on his recent visit to the French Treaty Coast he ascertained that the number of French fishermen there this year is less than ever ebfore; that the French lobster fishery is a failure, and the French cod fishery much below the average. He believes that the practical abandonment of the region by the French is merely a matter of a few years. Already one of their stations has been closed and several others narrowly escaped the same fate, owing to bait "striking in" recently.

Passed Into Receiver's Hands.

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 31.—The Manchester Telephone Company has been placed in the hands of George H. Warren of this city and Albert W. Worthly of Boston as temporary receivers. Mr. Warren says the company is to continue, and it is hoped it can be sold within a few days. Eastern stockholders filed a bill to have the receivers appointed, with an intention of having the plant sold at a fair price and put it on a paying basis.

From the Atlantic to the Pacific.

New York, Aug. 31.—Quietly, but positively, the Vanderbilt policy of dominating a line from the Atlantic to the Pacific has been pursued and perfected, and the lines they control from Missouri River to the Pacific coast have been merged into one. The deal required an increase of almost $200,000,000 in the capitalization of the Union Pacific, as that line absorbed the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, which in turn, all with the same end in view, had swallowed and digested the Oregon Short Line.

$5,000,000 Fire in Japan.

Yokohama, Aug. 18, by way of Victoria, Aug. 31.—The greatest fire in the history of Yokohama occurred on Aug. 12, when a square mile of buildings was destroyed and sixteen lives were lost. The property loss is estimated at between five and six millions. The famous Theatre street was destroyed from end to end. The owner of the house where the fire started was killed by a mob.

Balloonist Falls to Death.

Dubois, Pa., Aug. 31.—N. E. Crissey, an aeronaut, fell 600 feet to instant death on the Punxsutawney Fair Grounds. Five thousand persons saw the accident. Crissey was an experienced ballonist, and resided in Johnstown, Pa.

Demand Jiminez for President.

Cape Haitien, Aug. 31.—Advices received from the cities of Santiago and Puerto Plata, in Santo Domingo, say that both have proclaimed in favor of General Juan Isidro Jiminez, the revolutionary aspirant to the Presidency.

Earned, Not Bought.

Staying Power Counts In A Long Race.

Plainfield people need not be told how hard it is to earn and maintain a good reputation, and how easy it is to lose one. After such a loss it is well nigh impossible to recover the ground and the majority of those who have slipped by the wayside have been forced to stay there. As with a man's reputation, so it is with medicinal preparations. Some achieve a reputation which stays with them. It is founded on intrinsic merit and not sustained by elaborate advertising. It faces the public backed up by honesty and works its way quietly but thoroughly. Plainfield people want no better proof of the reputation earned by Doan's Kidney Pills than the following experiance from a citizen:

Mr. C. E. Hepburn of 123 Duer street, formerly of Canada, where he first heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, says:-"Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement for they cured me of a long standing case of backache which annoyed me very much, especially if I took cold, for at such times I was in pretty bad shape. I heard different people speak very highly of Doan's Kidney Pills and concluded to try them. I got a box from my druggist, Mr. L. W. Randolph, and used them according to directions, with the above good results. I do not hesitate to give my endorsement of a preparation like Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know they can be relied upon and possess the merits claimed for them."

FILIPINOS TO ATTACK IMUS

Aguinaldo Has Ordered His Generals to Surround the Town.

AMERICANS PREPARING.

Native Troops Reported to be Concentrating Around the Place From the Lake Country.

Our Troops Not Worried Over the Preparation of the Filipinos to Give Them Battle—Rear Admiral Bradford Tells How to Put an End to Philippines War.

Manila, Aug. 31.—It is reported that Aguinaldo, the Filipino leader, has ordered the native generals in the province of Cavite to close in on and attempt to take the town of Imus, and it is added that troops are concentrating around the town from the lake country.

The Filipinos, it is asserted, have an outpost of 700 men on the Das Marinas road and an equal force in the town of Anabo. The Americans are intrenching the town and they have no fear of the result of any attack by the native troops.

The mayor of Imus delivered the town to Gen. Lawton June 14, saying that the people desired peace and to be friendly with the Americans. The Fourteenth Infantry and one battery of artillery were stationed in the place as a garrison. Tons of concealed saltpetre and thousands of pounds of antiquated artillery ammunition and powder were discovered in the powder house, and large quantities had been thrown into the river.

How to Stop Philippines War.

Turner, Me., Aug. 31.—Rear-Admiral R. B. Bradford chief of the Bureau of Equipment of the United States Navy, who is visiting his old home here, says a complete blockade of Luzon would speedily end the Philippine war and that the blockade is to be made. The Filipinos' munitions of war are mostly smuggled in by Japanese and Chinese. If that was stopped and the other source of supply cut off in due time Aguinaldo would be willing to treat. Other islands would follow Luzon and surrender. The outcome would be the same as though accomplished by a series of battles and much bloodshed. Admiral Bradford added:

"I have never seen a moment when I doubted the wisdom of obtaining those islands. I have been there three times and I know their great value."

Blew His Home to Pieces.

Shelbyville, Ind., Aug. 31.—Louis A. Burkher, a farmer, 70 years old, came to this city and settled up in business, after which he purchased several sticks of dynamite. He went home, quarrelled with his wife and then drove her from the house. Buckher placed the dynamite under his house and blew it up. After watching the destruction of the building, Burkher sent a bullet through his brain.

American Route to Circle City.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 31.—James W. Fisch, chief clerk-at-large of the railway mail service, is here on his way to Valdez, Alaska, to take up the matter of opening an all-American rail route from Valdez, by way of Eagle, to Circle City, Alaska. He will have the services of a detachment of United States troops now at Valdez to blaze a road over the route and to build supply cabins.

Big Clean-up in Klondike.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 31.—Late Dawson arrivals say there was a big clean-up Aug. 13 on claim No. 2, on Bonanza, which is owned by an English syndicate. The clean-up included $50,000 in six days, beating the previous best record for a weeks' work. One pan was worth $9.75, and a twenty-eight-ounce nugget was found worth almost $460.

Body Found in Convent Ruins.

Nyack, N. Y., Aug. 31.—Search at the ruins of St. Agnes's Convent, Sparkill, for the remains of those missing since the fire has resulted in the finding of a skull and small portions of the remains of Jane, the poor old cripple who perished in the fire. The remains of Theresa Murphy, who is missing, will also, it is now thought likely, be found in the ruins.

No Strike on the Lackawanna.

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 31.—An agreement has been reached between the Delaware, Lackawana and Western Engineers' Grievance Committee and President Truesdale. The mileage system of wages on the Rock Island basis takes the place of the per diem system of the old Lackawanna management, and the day's work will be twelve hours.

Fighting in Nicaragua.

New Orleans, Aug. 31.—Advices from Nicaragua state that Gen. Luis Mena, the bravest fighter of the Reys revolt, who has placed himself at the head of 100 refugees in Salvador, defeated the troops on the frontier and is now pressing on to Leon. He hopes to raise an army there to attack Zelaya at the capital.

Will Honor the 20th Regiment.

Boston, Aug. 31.—A grand military ball is to be the feature of the program of entertainment which Mayor Quincy is arranging to give the 26th Volunteers. The regiment will pass through Boston on its way to the Philippines next month, and the city is to honor the men appropriately with parades receptions and banquets.

Planning to Lynch a Murderer.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 31.—Joseph I. Jefferson, tenant of the late Capt. Calvin Barnes, who was murdered near Wilson, N. C., has confessed to the crime. Arrangements are making to lynch him. He has been taken to Raleigh for safe-keeping.

FATAL WRECK ON THE ERIE

Two Runaway Cars Crash Into a Passenger Train.

Arlington, N. J., Aug. 31.—One man was killed and eleven were injured in a wreck on the Erie road six hundred feet from the railroad station here. The train from New York was struck by two heavy freight cars loaded with cut stone, which broke away from the train of which they were a part.

The dead: William Nurie, of Arlington.

The injured are: Charles Shepard; Captain Doyle, of Arlington; Alfred A. Long, of New York; P. Black, of New York; Bertram Ast, of New York; Dexter Ball, of Caldwell, N. J.; John B. Todd, of East Orange, N. J.; J. J. Connell, of Bloomfield, N. J.; William Osborne, fireman of train, Pompton Junction,; A. Curry, engineer of train, East Orange; A. W. Newbold, of Roseland, N. J.

Connell is the most seriously hurt. His injuries are internal and he will probably die.

When the crash came the stone laden cars withstood the shock and wrecked the engine and the cars immediately behind it. The most damage was to the smoker. A call for doctors was immediately sent out and several responded. Among these was a doctor of the Soldiers' Home. The wrecking trains were also called and the work of clearing began at once.

All the injured were furnished with transportation to their homes. The scene of the accident is not far from Passaic River, where the road runs through a deep cut.

When the passenger train rounded the curve before Arlington, the engineer saw the two runaway cars coming. He reversed his engine and stopped the train.

Before he could back up the freight cars crashed into the engine and it was smashed and derailed.

The smoking car, loaded with passengers, was crushed and thrown high into the air.

Turning over and over in the air, it fell to the side of the track, only to roll down the thirty foot embankment, almost in shreds.

Those who escaped from the wrecked smoker set to work rescuing the injured and in a short time had them all out. Those who were on the train say it seems a miracle that there were not at least a dozen killed instead of one.

British Reply Sent to Boers.

Pretoria, Transvaal Republic, Aug. 31.—The British diplomatic agent here, Comyngham Greene, has handed to the Secretary of State, F. W. Reitz, the reply of the British Secretary of State of the Colonies, Joseph Chamberlain, to the Transvaal's alternative proposals to the Joint Commission suggested by Great Britain to inquire into the effect which the proposed franchise reform measures will have upon the Outlanders. Mr. Greene afterward had a long interview with the State officials. The nature of the dispatch is not disclosed, but was subject to the consideration of the Executive. It is understood that another conference may take place at Cape Town. The result is awaited anxiously.

Increases Its Capital Stock.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 31.—The American Iron and Steel Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia has filed notice in the State Department of an increase in its capitalization from $1,000,000 to $20,000,000. The company is comprised of the steel plant of J. H. Sternberg and Sons, and the National Bolt and Nutt Works, both of Reading, Pa., and the Pennsylvania Bolt and Nut Works of Lebanon, Pa.

Still After the Cotton Mills.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 31.—William M. Wood, treasurer of the American Woollen Company, admits that he and Charles R. Flint have prepared to make an offer for those Fall River mills which are profitable as well as other paying cotton mills in New England, with a view to forming a combination on a basis similar to the woollen mill trust. Bids are not to be made for any unprofitable mills.

Boycott to be Called Off.

Chicago, Aug. 31.—It is probable that the boycott against the Kansas City, Pittsburg and Gulf road is to be called off. Counsel for a number of the Chicago-Missouri River roads have, it is said, advised the officers of the companies to obey the injunction issued by the United States Circuit Court restraining them from cancelling joint tariffs and pro-rating arrangements.

Escaped Convict Located.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 31.—Warden Coffin, of the Ohio Penitentiary, is now positive that his clerical friend, Rev. C. F. B. Howard, the great Tennessee land swindler, who escaped from the prison about one year ago, has been seen in Chicago in the last few days, and believes that he will soon have the wily Englishman behind the bars again.

Big Mining Plant Burned.

Deadwood, S. D., Aug. 31.—Fire, which started in the coal bins, entirely consumed the chlorination plant of the Golden Reward Company. The small building occupied as an office, and containing the books of the company, was the only thing saved. Loss, $150,000; insurance, $75,000.

Outrage on Negroes in Illinois.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 31.—Two of the three negroes injured in an altercation with white men employed on the Illinois Central tracks, near this city, are dead. The third negro who was injured has not been brought to this city, and his condition is not known.

Steamer Burned at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug 31.—Thomas E. Luther's steamer Alice was burned to the water's edge at Saratoga Lake. Loss $5,000, insurance $2,000.

Carrier Pigeons for War Service.

London, Aug. 31.—A consignment of carrier pigeons for military service has been sent from Dover to the United States.

Fired By Burglars.

Celina, Ohio, Aug. 31.—John Wolf's saloon and grocery was burglarized and then fired. Stock total loss. No clew.

TEETH.

If you have any to be extracted remember you will not be hurt in the slightest. My local anæsthetic is the best that can be obtained and is not known to the other dentists in this city. Gas strictly fresh administered by an expert if you want that. If you need artificial teeth you may rest assured that the greatest care will be exercised in selecting shape and color to harmonize with the face, also to restore the features to their natural expression and fullness. This is most important.

I find Ripans gentle and natural in their action and I would not be without them in the house.

My children are generally troubled in the summer time with a variety of complaints, chiefly arising from a disordered stomach. This year I have given them the chocolate coated Tabules, with the result that, even during the hot spell their health has been unusually good.

Ripans Tabules are, I think, the best possible family medicine, and I have lately heard many friends speak highly of their wonderful curative properties.

A new style packet containing TEN RIPANS TABULES in a paper carton (without glass) is now for sale at some drug stores—NOW FIVE CENTS. This low-priced sort is intended for the poor and the economical. One dozen of the five-cent cartons (120 tabules) can be had by mail by sending forty-eight cents to the RIPANS CHEMICAL COMPANY, No. 10 Spruce Street, New York—or a single carton (TEN TABULES) will be sent for five cents. RIPANS TABULES may also be had of grocers, general storekeepers, news agents and at liquor stores and barber shops.

LABOR WORKS WITH CAPITAL

New Feature of Trade Alliance on Co-Operative Plan.

Washington, Aug. 31.—E. J. Smith, a manufacturer of Birmingham, England, who will attend the conference on trusts at Chicago, Sept. 13 to 16, is the originator of a trade alliance which for seven years in one industry has proved to be satisfactory alike to capital and labor.

Seven years ago, when the bedstead manufacturing interest was in a desperate condition owing to competition and strikes, he succeeded in having his plan adopted. Since then the condition has improved 25 per cent., and the business is now as prosperous as any in England.

The initial work in forming an alliance is to take some standard product of that particular trade, ascertain its actul cost of production, and use that as a basis. A certain kind of bedstead, a dozen plates of a certain kind, a wheel, or anything is used.

To this cost a certain percentage of profit is added and all the manufacturers bind themselves not to undersell. Rebates are allowed every six months to purchasers of large amounts.

The employes are given a certain interest in the work. The first increase in selling price carries with it a wage bonus for the workmen in proportion to the amount of the average advance. The bonus is allowed on any further advances.

As the Alliance is a union, none but union workmen are employed. Their representatives meet with the manufacturers at what is called a "Wage and Conciliation Board," where all disputes arising are settled.

There can be no strikes, for the employers stand upon the same plane as their employes.

Canton Welcomes McKinley.

Canton, O., Aug. 31.—For the first time in nearly a year President and Mrs. McKinley are among their relatives, neighbors and friends in Canton for a few days of rest. The special train arrived to meet a great concourse of people ready to extend a hearty welcome and to escort the Presidential party to the Barber home, where they will be guests during their stay in the city. To all the demonstrations in his honor the President returned an acknowledgment with pleasant smiles and bows as the party drove along the streets.

May Cause Serious Trouble.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 31.—Ex-Congresman W. C. P. Breckinridge, replying in the statements of William Goebel at Bowling Green, in which he associated Breckinridge's name with that of the poor young woman who caused Breckinridge's retirement from Congress, declares the "attack vulgar, coming from the mouth of a blackguard." Trouble is looked for between some of the men attacked and Mr. Goebel.

Window Glass Combine Collapses.

Anderson, Ind., Aug. 31.—Notice has been given that the option on window glass plants; which expires on Sept. 1, will not be renewed, and that the combination which was to have been made has been abandoned. The capital had been fixed at $37,000,000. The promoters say that the injunctions granted by the courts have killed their project, and that the window glass combination is out of the question.

Five Arrests Under Curfew Law.

Chelsea, Mass., Aug. 31.—Five boys under sixteen years of age were arraigned in the District Court on the charge of evading the curfew law. They were reprimanded and let go on their promise to obey it hereafter. The boys were arrested as they were coming from the gallery of a theatre. This is the first move for a rigid enforcement of the city ordinance.

Ohio Democrats Name Him For Governor on First Ballot at Zanesville.

PLATFORM FOR SILVER.

Kilbourn Defeated in the Convention By Nearly 200 Votes—Nomination Made Unanimous.

The Chicago Platform is Reaffirmed and the Renomination of Bryan in 1900 Demanded—Opposition to Imperialism Declared—Trusts Are Denounced.

Zanesville, Ohio, Aug. 31.—John R. McLean was nominated for Governor of Ohio by the State Democratic Convention in session here. The nomination was made on the first ballot, which stood: McLean, 402½; Kilbourne, 222; remainder scattering. The nomination was then made unanimous.

The convention assembled to nominate a state ticket, and Memorial Hall was packed when the Hon. W. S. Thomas, Chairman of the State Committee, called the convention to order. Judge W. P. Mooney, temporary chairman of the convention, was next introduced and spoke at length.

The platform adopted reaffirms the Chicago platform. The financial plank is especially emphasized and the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 is demanded. "The Hon. William J. Bryan still retains our confidence and we demand his renomination in 1900." The platform says:

"We are radically and unalterably opposed to imperialism in the United States of America. We have solved some of the race problems that confront us at home; by example we can proclaim the blessings that flow from free institutions and thus procure benevolent assimilation without 'criminal aggression.' The party is opposed to entangling alliances with foreign kingdoms and empires."

Congress is commended for declaring the war with Spain to have been for humanity and not for conquest. The soldiers are praised. It is demanded that the Cubans and Filipinos be allowed and encouraged to establish independent republics. The Hanna-Payne shipping bill is denounced. A large standing army is declared to be a menace. The initiative and referendum are favored, as well as the passage of an eight-hour labor law, the prohibition of sweatshops, and the abolition of prison contract labor. The plank against trusts is as follows:

"We declare that all unlawful combinations of capital are the legitimate fruits of a gold standard and other corrupt Republican legislation on questions of the tariff and we demand that all articles, the prices of which are controlled by trusts, be placed on the free list. We denounce the Attorney-General of the United States for his refusal to enforce the statutes against trusts."

A constitutional amendment providing for the election of the President, the Vice President and United States Senators by a direct vote is favored.

Populists Meet in Iowa.

Cause of the Increase.

What is the cause of the rise in Plainfield's tax rate and just who is responsible for the increase in the taxes that will be felt by every property owner in the city? Naturally the people wish answers to these questions and they are justly entitled to them. From one of the leading city officials who is thoroughly conversant with the running of the city machinery and is prominent in forming the policy therefore comes a statement which, though informally made, may be regarded as an expression of opinion of the present Republican administration now in control.

He first calls attention to the fact that the Common Council, of which he is a member, is not responsible for all the increase of fourteen points in the city tax rate. There is an increase in the county tax of two points. The jump of three points in the library tax was the result of increased appropriations by the trustees of the Public Library. The Board of Education was responsible for a rise of three points in the city school tax.

The Council, he points out, can really be held accountable only for six points of the increase, two in the fire tax and four in the city and city lights demand. Last year the tax rate, he says, was reduced from $2.50 to $2 42. It was too great a drop, he declares, and has resulted in the necessity of going above the old mark in order to put the city in a sound financial condition. Had the tax rate remained stationary, or dropped only a point or two, there would not have been the increase this year that has caused so much unfavorable comment of the local administration.

Furthermore, he points out the many advantages that Plainfield has over and above the surrounding towns and cities where the tax rate is just as high or even higher than $2 56. Many of them are scarcely better than country villages, with practically no modern improvements at all, while Plainfield has many advantages that are not to be found outside of the great cities.

GUARD AT ENTRANCE TO THE LYCEE.

The spirit of militarism in France is accented at the Dreyfus trial. Generals of the army who are the prosecutors claim that the honor of the army is at stake. The presence of soldiers in extraordinarily large numbers in Rennes, guarding the officials of the court martial and the plan of the trial, tends to intensify this phase of the situation.

Politics was laid aside yesterday afternoon and the Republicans and Democrats forgot their political animosities to enjoy the clambake of the Plainfield Advancement Association and incidentally talk over how they might best advance the interests of this city. Even if the association fades away as have its predecessors without accomplishing anything else, the organization buried the political hatchet for a time and showed a strong band of Plainfield's citizens united in one cause. Let it be hoped, however, that practice will follow the preaching.

The changes in the Plainfield postal system which have been exclusively noted in The Daily Press, will be inaugurated tomorrow. There will be an improvement in the service all over the city and the agitation for better postal facilities, in which the Daily Press has taken an active part, will have accomplished its object. Postmaster Bird has been indefatigable in his efforts to carry out the wishes of his fellow citizens and he is now to be congratulated on the success which his efforts have finally won for Plainfield.

The Smiths are a sociable family even if they are rather numerous. Yesterday the members of that family in Somerset county gathered for their annual picnic which has now became one of the principal events of the year in the county. This year, however, the Smiths took precautions against trouble with fakirs and carried their own lunches, ruling out all sutlers from the grove where the camp was held.

An evidence of the prosperity of Plainfield is to be seen on every side in the many new homes that are springing up all over the city. Since the first of the year over a hundred building permits for new houses have been issued. Surely Plainfield is growing.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

A local wheelman collided with the steam roller the other evening. The roller had been at use in repairing Park avenue beyond Ninth street and was stabled for the night at the side of the road. The middle of the roadway was covered with loose stone and was also wet where it had been sprinkled. The cyclist therefore chose the side of the road. He rode along without glancing ahead, when he suddenly came to a stop and he and the wheel heaped up against the rudder wheel of the big steam roller. Luckily neither the wheelman nor his wheel were injured by the tumble, but it was a decided surprise for the young man.

If there is one day above another that the horses in the Plainfield livery stables dread it is Labor Day. Naturally Saturday and Sunday are the busiest days for the liverymen in the ordinary course of events. Holidays are always exceptions, however. Labor Day always falls on Monday so there is a great demand for horses for three days straight. Unless an unusually hot spell happens to arrive just in time for Labor Day, this season of the year is quite cool and driving is consequently pleasant, indeed. Already there is quite a demand for rigs that day and another day or so will find it impossible to get one for the holiday for love or money.

Among the collection of articles recently seen on the wagon of a gatherer of old rags, bottles, etc., was a broken bicycle of uncertain age; two baby carriages that at sometime had held the precious offsprings of some of Plainfield's citizen's; what was left of a boy's express cart; two doll carriages that not so long ago had been the pride of some little girl; a roll of zinc, length of garden hose, broken down dining table, one hoop skirt, which must have seen service at least a decade ago; a half worn clothes wringer, cane seat rocker, three pairs of rubber boots, and a miscellaneous collection of old hats, shoes and well-worn trousers.

The residents of one of the suburbs of Paterson, seem to have been victimized very adroitly by a Swedish laborer, who prophesied a caterpillar crop of unusual dimensions and offered to keep them away for a consideration. His prophecies were at first received with incredulity and his prospects for doing business looked bad until the caterpillars began to arrive in large numbers, and then he rapidly made contracts with many householders to remove them and commenced to acquire a bank account. Now a boy whom he employed and failed to pay says the Swede hired him and others to go into the woods and gather caterpillars at 5 cents a quart and that at night these were sprinkled around where they would be most effective in terrifying the inhabitants.

NEW JERSEY KNIGHTS TEMPLAR.

Field Day to be on Labor Day at Asbury Park.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Asbury Park, Aug. 31—The Knights Templar of New Jersey will hold their field day at Asbury Park next Monday, when it is expected that Vice-President Hobart, who has recently become a Knight Templar, will be present. He has promised to come if he feels well enough to do so, but there are so many conflicting rumors concerning Mr. Hobart's health that it is not likely he will be able to attend.

Fifteen commanderies will be represented. It is thought there will be 1,000 men in the parade, which will start from headquarters about 1:30 p. m.

There will be music and reunions at the different hotels, and as the Templars will bring their families a great crowd is expected.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, August 31—Inquiries are made when, if ever, the Avoca Villa is to be rebuilt. The place was a great convenience to the traveling public, especially in stormy weather. The trolley companies would serve the interests of those who patronize the roads if they would cause the erection of a suitable building. In the winter months it will not be very pleasant to have to wait at the terminus of the trolley lines without some protection from the weather.

When Larry Reidy's dwelling was discovered on fire Tuesday morning there was a considerable amount of cash in the house. The amount is said to have been $950. Fortunately the money was saved. Mr. Reidy expects to rebuild as soon as possible after settling with the insurance company.

Prof. C. R. Clawson, who has been attending the general conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at Ashaway, R. I., has returned home, as have several others from this place who were in attendance.

Rev. and Mrs. Martin Sindall have returned from the general conference of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, held at Ashaway, R. I.

The handsome residence on Front street of John Brokaw, a trainman on the Central Railroad, is being treated to a coat of paint.

W. L. Larrabee, the hardware dealer, has returned from a trip up New York State.

The public schools will open Tuesday, September 5th.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Scotch Plains, August 31—The new Fanwood Club was launched last evening at the adjourned meeting held in the clubhouse. A constitution was adopted and a board of governors, consisting of five members, were elected as follows: C. E. Braine, E. C. Fancher, George T. Carter, C. H. Kyte and R. L. Thomae. The club start out with brightest of prospects, thirty members being on the roll. The social life in the borough this winter promises to be very gay and pleasant.

There seems to be a renewal of petty thieving in town. Several evenings ago Samuel Tainor's porch was cleaned of three porch chairs and some window screens, which had been left out.

Work was started on the trolley extension in earnest yesterday morning. ContractorSerrell put a gang of several hundred to work and the work will be pushed with all possible haste.

Rev. Mr. Shott's popularity in the pulpit is drawing upon the neighboring towns. Nearly every Sunday he is greeted with a number of Plainfield faces in his congregation.

Rev. Mr. Shott and family, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hoppell and Wm. D. Johnston's family are spending the day together at Boynton Beach.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, August 31—Township Attorney Paul Q. Oliver is receiving congratulations, his engagement to Mrs. R. S. Wiggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Sergeant, of the Boulevard, having been announced. The date of the wedding has not as yet been made public.

The time for closing the entries for the big 15-mile road race to be run on the Westfield-Fanwood course has been extended to Saturday evening and all entries received up to that time will be attended to by the official handicapper.

The Westfield sports lost about fifty dollars as the result of the race between Peter Simmons, of Plainfield, and Jack Townsend, of Bayonne, which took place at Plainfield yesterday.

J. W. ISHAM'S OCTOROONS

WILL OPEN AT STILLMAN MUSIC HALL THIS EVENING.

First Dress Rehearsal Last Night—A Creditable Performance by Excellent Talent—Chorus of Pretty Octoroons.

John W. Isham's Octoroons will open their season at the Stillman Music Hall this evening and then make a tour of the principal cities of the country. The organization is not a new one. Its excellence has been demonstrated in past seasons, and Mr. Isham has won for himself an international reputation in the direction of his Octoroons. Last night the company held its final dress rehearsal at Music Hall. The troupe has been enlarged and a new and thoroughly up-to-date entertainment arranged, as was evidenced in the rehearsal.

The performance consists of a musical farce entitled "7-11-77," an olio, and closes with an operatic selection. Miss Belle Davis takes the leading part. Smart and Williams are a strong team of comedians. Miss Alberta Ormes and Miss Marion Henry are clever actresses, who figure prominently in the farce.

Of course, the rehearsal was not the finished performance, but it passed off without a hitch and was decidedly encouraging to the management. The entertainment itself is a good one, better than a vast majority of those that appear behind the footlights. The singing is particularly good.

The chorus is composed of pretty young women, who are, many of them, hard to distinguish from their Anglo-Saxon sisters. They are real Octoroons. Pretty costumes and effective stage settings add to the success of a really able cast of performers. Most of the talent has been appearing on the New York roof gardens during the summer.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

SUMMER CLOTHES.

SIMPLE WAYS OF KEEPING GARMENTS SWEET AND CLEAN.

The Great Secret Is to Change Frequently and Air Thoroughly—Adopt a System of Rotation For Fabrics Injurable By Perspiration.

How many women know how to preserve sweet and clean their summer dresses, shoes, corsets, and so on? Not many, I fancy?

As soon as the corset is taken off it should be sprinkled with peroxide of hydrogen and allowed to lie in the sun and air for several hours. Ribbed corsets are more difficult to manage, but at no time should they be rolled up, nor flung in a heap into some tight shut drawer.

There should be an alternation of corsets, to do away with the putting on of the same one each day, and two or three inexpensive ones treated this way will help to make the summer endurable in spite of the sun.

Shoes, if they are high, should, when taken off, be placed, inners out, on the window sill or in some breezy place to get the sun and air. The tops should be turned back, and the air allowed to circulate in the crevices and into the soles as far as it possibly can. This will not only preserve the shape and contour of the shoe, but it will help to keep it from getting "leathery." Shoes are porous skin themselves and wonderfully susceptible to influences of climate and heat.

Blouse waists should have the shields ripped out at once, after removing from the body, and they should be sponged with alcohol and water and hung in the air to dry. The sleeves of the waist should be turned wrong side out and allowed to air at some screen near a draught and not put on again for some days.

A system of rotation will be found convenient for such fabrics as are liable to be hurt by the absorption of perspiration and should be sparingly treated on particularly hot days.

A sprinkle of orris root in the lining of a dress, to be shaken out before the dress is worn again, will be found an excellent thing

Ribbons should be rolled up immediately when taken off the neck and waist, and if treated this way will last a great deal longer and look a great deal daintier.

Care of the skirt is most important. Skirts should have small loops sewed in under the ruffles, where the heels of the boots or slippers will not catch, and they should be hung up upside down every night, or as soon as they are taken off. If trimmed with long farthingale flounces, the flounces will have to be carefully pinned to the foundation and they will, by hanging twelve hours in the opposite direction from which they are worn, regain some of their original freshness and charm.

Hats will retain their spruceness and elegance if carefully placed in their own box, after blowing the chiffon and laying the feathers several times over the fingers in the direction they are disposed to lean. The ribbons' shafts can also be straightened and the hat will be ready for use at once.

Hose should be filled with crumpled tissue paper and hung in pairs in the most excluded window to let the air blow through them.

Gloves must be blown up by the breath immediately after stripping from the hand, then filled with a light shake of glove-powder and laid away unfolded, and not palm to palm, but separately, in tissue paper.

The Dress For Flower-Picking.

This picture was made to show a handy dress in which to go gathering flowers. It has nothing to do with the pretty style of lace petticoat disclosed on second glance.

Table Talk.

Of course, you know all about it, but don't forget when the time comes to take your hard-boiled eggs to the picnic resting in a bed of crisp lettuce leaves. First you have taken out the yolks of the eggs, powdered them fine, and mixed them with a little mayonnaise dressing, just enough to moisten the mixture, and then replace it and put the egg together. Or, if you do not care for your eggs in this form, make sandwiches of them, and chopping the egg or cutting it in small pieces with a silver knife, lay two or three sprays of watercress in each sandwich. They are refreshing.

Very delicate sweet butter sandwiches are delicious, but they are better for an afternoon tea than for the hearty appetite of a crowd of hungry picknickers. The sweet butter placed in a damp napkin and buried in a bed of clover blossoms will acquire a delicate clover flavor, and when spread delicately on some dry, crisp biscuit is delicious.

A Wise Precaution.

"I wonder if I have everything!" soliloquized the naval hero, as he prepared to go ashore to the banquet. "Ah, yes! I had forgotten my gag, to be worn when speaking begins. Widdlecombe, hand me that little square box. Thanks."—Chicago Tribune.

Fashionable Fans and Other Accessories.

A new idea is the fan of mottled feathers in which the markings of the feathers are followed by tiny gold and silver spangles, which are so skillfully arranged and applied that they seem a part of the plumage.

Fans decorated with natural flowers were another novelty, but they were merely experimental, and the experiment did not prove successful, since the flowers soon faded and became a disfigurement instead of an ornament.

The pique parasols matching pique costumes are disappearing before the costumes themselves are laid aside and are being replaced by parasols of bright silk, more appropriate for cool weather.

Taffeta petticoats are trimmed with nainsook or muslin flounces enriched with lace. This is an odd combination, which will doubtless vanish with the last warm days.

The girl's costume illustrated is of silver gray poplin. The circular skirt is in one piece and is edged by a band of black passementerie, above which are two braids of insertion applied over blue silk. The bodice has a tucked yoke of blue taffeta, bordered at the collarless neck and around the edge by black passementerie. A lace bertha surrounds the yoke, and three bands of insertion like that on the skirt pass down the front of the bodice. The sleeves are trimmed to match and have a full epaulet, also trimmed. The belt is of blue surah.

THE LATEST MODELS.

Styles Prepared For Autumn Wardrobes.

Cloth gowns and those of the tailor made style have revers elaborately trimmed with mousseline de soie or with peau de soie incrusted with guipure, little ruches and similar decorations. The plastrons are made to match, of gathered mousseline, with ruches and applications.

If the costume is very simple and severe and nothing in the least frivolous is desired as an adjunct, the bolero or jacket is kept quite plain and is worn over a shirt waist of taffeta or cotton or linen goods. The white waist is at present preferred made of plain lawn or lawn with satin checks and plaits.

The jacket or bolero of tucked black taffeta is having a great vogue among fashionable women. The tucks run obliquely, and the large revers are covered with shirred mousseline de soie.

The illustration shows a princess gown of ivory faille. It is quite plain in form, with a train, and is trimmed with large applications of guipure, forming wide bands. A band of pink taffeta passes down the middle of the front, and other bands of the same material are threaded perpendicularly through the guipure. The sleeves of ivory taffeta are tight and plain and flare at the wrist. The hat which accompanies the gown is of cream straw, trimmed with black velvet, black tulle and black feathers.

Lowell as a Teacher.

In Lowell's college work the weakest part was his class teaching. While no teacher in the university was more willing to help his boys, his habit of doing most of the reading, when a boy labored, with friction, breaking right into his reading, was not agreeable to the boy. But even in that he at least had the courage of mastery, and never shirked the hard passages. His corrections and remarks were often lost from the want of clearness and open mouthed carefulness of articulation. When he spoke in public he always made himself heard, but to a small, almost private class, speaking without effort, his modest stillness and his smothering mustache would make us wish that men's hair had been forbidden to grow forward of the corners of their mouths.—"James Russell Lowell and His Friends."

MOURNING IS UNHEALTHY.

Physicians Give Warning to Those Who Wear It.

Outward and visible signs of woe, ordained by custom and conventionality, are veritable shackles for women. Crape bombazine and other sombre fabrics shroud the feminine mourner until her garments are a greater burden than the mental anguish she has been forced to endure.

Few if any women have had the courage to emancipate themselves from the ironclad rules which have governed society on this particular subject. Many women claim that mourning is a protection to their grief; that if clad in habiliments denoting recent bereavement the world at large tenders them a deference which protects them from the jars of unseemly mirth and gayety.

That is all very well in theory, but there are many other points to be considered. First in importance is the health. Doctors are loudly warning women that the black garments are unhealthy, and have a most depressing effect upon the entire nervous system.

When the mind is constantly impressed with a sense of sadness and solemnity, the spirits flag, the system becomes inert. The feeling of lassitude effects the appetite, and soon the mourner finds herself losing in health and strength. Medical experts have traced many cases of melancholia directly to the wearing of heavy mourning.

The custom of wearing black is a relic of barbarism. Shocking to the sensibilities is the way fashion decrees just how long the different periods of mourning shall extend. The heart-breaking sorrow caused by the loss of our dear ones is too sacred to parade before the public by an ostentatious display of mourning paraphernalia. Think of grieving for your child or husband by swaddling not only yourself in crape, but by putting the lackeys of the household into mourning garb also!

In a recent discussion a well-known New York physician said:

"The widow is undoubtedly the greatest martyr to this senseless custom. She is compelled to envelope herself from head to toe in the impenetrable veil which keeps out all light and air. If she abbreviates this badge of woe one tithe the world whispers that she is not sincere in her grief; that within a frivolous soul is rejoicing in her freedom. So the poor woman hides her face until it grows pale and thin. Depressed in spirit she is not able to brighten the home for the little ones who are saddened by the continual sight of the sombre robes.

"A movement is on to do away with the senseless custom entirely. The first stages of the reformation show such slight changes that as yet they are scarcely noticed. The widow is allowed to put back her veil and wear a tiny face veil of Brussels net bordered with crape. Other members of the family are no longer required to wear the long mourning veils.

The latest widow from Paris, while garbed most conventionally in black, wears garments of light weight. Her bonnet is but a tiny frame; a short veil pinned on in butterfly fashion falls to the shoulders. This is at least one step in the right direction.

But the reformation should be swift and sure. Melancholia and insanity go hand in hand, and to follow a fashion which courts such dread disease is absurd. Consumption has also been superinduced by keeping the air from the lungs. The veil is responsible for this, as it is impossible for the lungs to get enough pure air through the thick material.

Scientists and physicians point out the gravity of the custom and resulting evils. They cannot do more. Women should follow their advice, sure that they will not be misjudged by the enlightened members of society.

Famous Women.

Miss Brennan, M. A., is the first woman in Australia to hold three degrees in science and arts. She recently gained the B. S. in the Sidney University.

Frau Petersen-Dan, the noted woman sculptor, has completed a bust of Princess Frederick of Schaumburg-Lippe and one of Prince Christina of Denmark.

Mme. Carnot, the widow of the martyred President of France, is living quietly in Paris, and few sovereigns pass through the city without calling on her. She has arranged a chapel in one corner of her apartment, and here she has placed around a portrait of her husband the various souvenirs sent to her after his assassination.

Queen Victoria is said to be extremely fond of the crisp Italian breadsticks known as grassini. Whether it is owing to the royal example or to the natural fondness of Americans for everything "good," these breadsticks are being adopted throughout the United States.

Pioneer Woman's Rights Advocate.

Mrs. Matilda Joslyn Gage, who died recently in Chicago, aged 72 years, was one of the earliest champions of woman's rights in America, having identified herself with the cause in 1852. For some years she was President of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association, and in 1875-76 she served as President of the National Woman Suffrage Association, with headquarters at Washington.

An Effective Textile.

An effective and inexpensive textile much in use now for the wall background of a cozy corner or divan, is the Japanese cotton. This is a stout, durable calico, of quaint design, woven exclusively by the Japenese women.

WOMEN'S REALM

WHAT TO WEAR AND HOW TO MAKE IT

May Manton's Hints Regarding Seasonable Toilettes.

No one feature of the season's styles is more marked than the Russian or one-sided effect shown in this comfortable and tasteful gown for morning wear. As illustrated, the material is tan-colored poplin, showing a bayadere stripe, the trimming a frill of ribbon and bands of brown braid, with collar and sash of brown velvet ribbon.

The pattern shows front, back and side gores besides the fitted front for lining, and two pieces of the sleeve.

The back has no forms, simplicity being the characteristic sought. The lining is cut to a trifle below the waist line and should be fitted with care, closing at the center. The full front is adjusted over it and laps at the left shoulder, the line being continued to the edge of the skirt, a feature which renders it peculiarly well suited to stout or short figures. The bottom of the skirt is left plain, simply faced with a fitted facing of the material. The sleeves are in two pieces, the slight puff and the close portion being cut in one.

For home wear during the summer, lawn, gingham, organdy, lappet lawn and percale all are suitable. For steamer use nothing rivals cashmere and light weight flannel, the latter having the advantage of laundering perfectly, if average care be taken.

To make this gown for a lady in the medium size will require seven yards of forty-four inch material.

Big Fans for Summer Girls.

The little Empire fan, so popular all winter and so convenient to handle, seems to have had its day. Fan fashions have suddenly jumped to the other extreme, and the fan of the spring is nearly three times the size of its predecessor. Closed it is full twenty inches in length, and spread out it forms a truly huge expanse for the summer girl to simper behind and blush.

Big fans will from now on be all the rage, and no one knows how large they will grow before the fashion changes. As it is, the woman who wants to be in good form can hardly get too big a fan.

The new fan is being displayed in every variety, though it is too new a fashion to have gotten into all the shapes yet. The popular fans will be of feathers in every shade of color, spangled, for tinsel on everything is to be the fad of the summer, and gauze painted.

Ladies' Shirt Waist Sleeves.

Many of last season's shirt waists are quite up to date with the sole exception of the sleeves. The pattern here shown is especially designed to remedy just such defects, and includes the latest styles, one sleeve showing pleats, the other gathers at the arms, edges. Both are one-seamed. Both are in regulation shirt style, and with them are included the two prevailing puffs, one straight, the other rolled over and rounded at the outer edges.

To make either these sleeves for a lady of medium size one and one-half yards of material thirty inches wide will be required.

The Queen of Rumania has been made an M. D. by the University of Budapest. The diploma was written in four languages and inclosed in a beautiful case.

THE ENGLISH CRISIS.

CARDINAL VAUGHAN ON THE "MOVEMENT TOWARD ROME."

His Eminence Makes an Earnest Appeal For Prayers, to the End That the Harvest Which Is Now Ripe May Be Gathered to Catholicism.

His eminence Cardinal Perraud, bishop of Autun, France, recently celebrated the thirtieth century of the giving of the pallium to St. Syagrius and his own silver jubilee as a bishop. Cardinal Perraud invited his eminence Cardinal Vaughan of England to participate in the double celebration. This invitation Cardinal Vaughan was unable to accept, but he sent to Cardinal Perraud a touching letter of congratulation and sympathy, in which he also spoke freely of the fierce controversy that is now raging in the Episcopal church in England over the movement in that body toward Roman Catholic practices and which is making converts to Catholicism by the thousands. He wrote:

"England is at this moment in the midst of a most serious religious crisis. A large number of Anglican ministers and laics are trying to restore the religious practices of the church by professing certain Catholic doctrines. They publicly hold that the doctrines and discipline of the Catholic church do not depend solely upon men, but on God, and that the civil tribunals have no right to settle these questions.

"They go still further and declare that they will not recognize the decisions of the Anglican bishops except so far as these decisions are in accord with the doctrines and practices of the Catholic church. In other words, they reject in principle the autonomy of a national church and profess to believe in the Catholic church beyond the seas. All these declarations have been made publicly, without any restriction and without fear, and it is impossible to question the sincerity, the piety, of these men and the desire they show to follow the attraction and inspirations of grace. The only germ of Protestantism which they retain is their absolute refusal to recognize the authority of the head of the church.

"It is not for us to struggle with them, to hold controversy in persuasibilibus humanoe sapientioe verbis. What is wanted is a flood of divine grace, and this we can only obtain by prayer. But what is to be done? Alone we can do nothing. At such moments we turn instinctively toward the successor of Syagrius and cast suppliant glances toward Autun. By these appealing looks we confidently ask for special help from Catholic France—that of establishing for our intention in all the French dioceses the archconfraternity of Our Lady of Compassion. We shall be pleased also if all the French clergy join in the movement formerly started by Mgr. de Quelen, archbishop of Paris, who generously suggested to his clergy that the holy sacrifice of the mass should be offered up every Thursday for the conversion of England. What we need and seek most earnestly during this religious crisis is, I repeat, prayer—prayer—prayer.

"While I am on this subject, will your eminence permit me to recall the following incident? At the time of the conversion of Cardinal Newman and his followers the whole French church was praying for England. My venerated predecessor, Cardinal Wiseman, had addressed a circular letter to the bishops of France, and at this moment I have before me over 50 pastoral letters written by the French episcopate in reply to the request addressed to them by the English cardinal. I learn from these letters that they ordered masses, novenas, special prayers and expositions of the blessed sacrament for the conversion of England, which was once the 'island of saints.' It is well known that Dr. Pusey himself attributed Newman's conversion to the prayers of Catholic France. Will that Catholic France, that country of heroes of the church, that land which has given to the world so many generous souls, allow those whom it can succor by its prayers to languish and then to die? No, my Lord Cardinal, it cannot be, for if France, even at the most critical moments, does not hesitate to take the first place among the nations whenever there is question of proving its devotion and its charity it will not fail to take the first place, and it will maintain its position when there is question of the apostolate of prayer.

"Of the 72,000 missionaries who give their life at this moment for the evangelization of foreign lands two-thirds are French. Of the contributions received for the propagation of the faith two-thirds are given by France, and, according to statistics supplied by The Guardian, a Protestant journal which cited as an example for the Anglican church the zeal manifested by the Catholics of France in favor of religious teaching, I see that the French Catholics have subscribed over 60,000,000 francs to meet the expenses of the purely Catholic schools, and this in spite of the crushing taxes which are demanded by the state and which burden the Catholics as well as other Frenchmen. If today it adds to these generous works the apostolate of prayer, prayer for the harvest which is already ripe in England, it will often be said with affection of the French nation, 'Remittuntur ei peccata multa quoniam dilexit multum.'"

Cardinal Perraud, speaking after this letter had been read, said that the continual good understanding which had always existed between the churches of England and France could not fail to be strengthened and increased by the cordial communication of the archbishop at Westminster. He was convinced that his appeal for prayers for the conversion of England would be understood and responded to in France.

THE LAST LAY CARDINAL.

A Pen Picture of the Late Papal Vice Chancellor.

Old Cardinal Mertel, who has just passed over to the great majority at the age of 96, was the only member of the sacred college who wore whiskers, and, as these almost to the very last retained their red color, he presented a rather odd appearance in all the great ecclesiastical ceremonies in which the cardinals were called upon to play a role. He was the last of those lay cardinals of whom the most famous in modern times was the late Cardinal Antonelli, secretary of state to Pius IX.

Like Antonelli, Cardinal Mertel was not a priest and had never received ordination as such. He was a lawyer by profession, and the rank of cardinal was conferred upon him partly as a reward for his services as chief law officer of the papacy and likewise as minister of the interior of the holy see in the days prior to 1870, when the pope still enjoyed temporal sovereignty.

Since Leo's accession to the tiara Cardinal Mertel held the office of vice chancellor to the papacy. I can only remember him as a very bent and broken old man, who used to walk almost doubled in two and with the aid of a stout stick.

In former times it was quite a common thing for popes to confer the rank of cardinal upon laymen, either by way of compliment or else as a recognition of some purely temporal services to the church. Leo XIII has only appointed one layman as cardinal—namely, the late Cardinal Cristofori, who was regent of the apostolic penitentiary and renowned for his genius as an administrator.—Washington Post.

AN OPPORTUNE HONOR.

The Coming Canonization of John Baptist de la Salle.

The holy father has solemnly promulgated the decree of the congregation of rites for the canonization of the blessed John Baptist de la Salle, founder of the Institute of the Brothers of the Christian Schools, the first in date and importance of the French congregations devoted to instruction of the young. In the terms of this decree all the preliminary forms of canonization have been observed, and the ceremony itself will, it is expected, take place during the year 1900.

The honor is opportune. Prejudiced and reckless writers are fond of applying the term "obscurantists" to the Catholic clergy, and of suggesting that they are the enemies of enlightment, but whenever the origin of any great educational movement is inquired into it is found that it has been begun or largely furthered by the Catholic clergy.

The Abbe de la Salle took the initiative in training teachers for the instruction of children at a time when popular education did not exist. There were in France but few schools, and these were kept by the clergy. John Baptist de la Salle set on foot a system of training which quickly developed and led to the provision of a network of schools throughout the country.

He is more deserving of a monument than a successful statesman, and no monument could be so noble as the honor of being raised to the altars of the church.—Catholic Times and Opinion.

Queen Margherita's Vow.

Queen Margherita of Italy has promised to climb Rocca Melone, one of the highest peaks of the Italian Alps, to take part in the dedication of a statue of the Virgin of which she is the sculptor. About two years ago a company of Alpine militia were marching over Rocca Melone when an avalanche started, and nearly all were buried beneath a vast mass of snow. Assistance was summoned quickly from the nearest military post, and all the entombed men were rescued. The queen was strangely moved by the incident. She composed a thanksgiving prayer to the Virgin and resolved to make a statue and erect it on the spot of the rescue. A verse of this prayer is engraved upon the pedestal of the statue.

Patience.

The crown of patience cannot be received where there has been no suffering. If thou refusest to suffer, thou refusest to be crowned. But if thou wishest to be crowned thou must fight manfully and suffer patiently. Without labor none can obtain rest, and without contending there can be no conquest.

GRAINS OF GOLD.

Endurance is nobler than strength, and patience than beauty.

Religion is the fear of God; its demonstration is good works, and faith is the root of both.

The patient heart is a willow, the impatient heart a dry reed; when the storm of sorrow comes, the reed breaks, but the willow yields and recovers.

Home love is the best love. The love that you are born to is the sweetest you will ever have on earth. You may not know it now, but you will know it some day.

I have read in Plato and Cicero sayings that are very wise and very beautiful, but I never read in either of them "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden."

There is no despair so absolute as that which comes with the first moments of our first great sorrow, when we have not yet known what it is to have suffered and be healed, to have despaired and have recovered hope.

It is God who gives thee thy mirror of imagination, and if thou keep it clean it will give thee back no shadow, but the truth. Never a cry of love went forth from human heart but it found some heavenly chord to fold it in.

CAUGHT AT HIS TRICKERY.

How a Flour Dealer Thought He'd Bunco a Shrewd Irishwoman.

"There are tricks in all trades but ours," remarked one member of a group seated in the lobby of a South Broad street Hotel "and I must add there are a few in ours." The speaker is the head of a well khown firm of wholesale grocers. "Not so long ago," he continued, "when I was still in the retail trade, we had a shrewd Irish woman for a customer. One day she ordered a barrel of a certain brand of flour. We happened to be out of the brand, but I told her we could send her a barrel of another brand equally good. She assented and the flour was delivered. A week or so after she came into the store and declared that she didn't like the flour and insisted on having it taken back and the brand she wanted sent instead. Well we hauled the flour back to the store, and being still out of the brand wanted, filled up the returned barrel, put in new head and carted it back to the woman again. We heard nothing more about the matter for three weeks, when one day she came into the store in a highly indignant frame of mind. 'I want you to sent up to my house and haul that flour away she exclaimed.' 'I told you that it was no good.' 'No good,' I replied. 'Why, you know it is the brand you ordered.' The woman glared at me. 'It is no such thing!' she blurted out. 'You sent me back the same barrel I had.' Of course I denied it, laying particular stress on her value to us as a custumer and how we would not risk losing her trade on account of a measly barrel of flour. 'Why, madam I ejaculated, eloquently, 'how could you think such a thing? Ours is too honorable a house to cheat its customers or to ask them to accept a substitute for something they liked!' Then the woman grinned at me. 'Huh!' she retorted, 'that's all very fine. But I had two bakin's out of the first barrel before I sent it back.' 'Yes' I assented, and you got a full barrel in return. Doesn't that prove——' 'Prove nothing!' she interrupted. 'The first two bakin's out of the barrel I got the second time were all right. But I want you to know I always take my flour out with a saucer. When I got down to the third bakin' out of that barrel I——' 'Yes I interposed, weakly, 'what did you do?' 'I found my saucer,' was the answer. Then she swept out and it was well she did, for I came near falling in a faint. It was months before the woman would condescend to trade with us again.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Extending His Sphere of Affluence.

The young physician was tired when he returned from his evening's calls, but as he settled back in his easy chair, and his pretty wife of only a month or two took a seat beside him, he asked affectionately:

"And has my little wife been lonely?"

"No, no," she said animatedly; at least not very. "I've found something to busy myself with."

"Indeed!" he said. "What is it?"

"Oh, I'm organizing a class. A lot of young girls and married women are in it, and we're exchanging experiences and teaching each other how to cook."

"What do you do with the things you cook?" he asked, interestedly.

"Oh, we send them to the neighbors just to show what we can do. It's great fun."

"Dear little woman," he said, leaning over and kissing her. 'Always thoughful of your husband's practice. Always anxious to extend it."—Tit-Bits.

He Had Reason to Run.

The man came out of an office building on the run and started down the street.

"Here! Here!" cried the policeman on the corner. "What's your hurry?"

"There's a man back there trying to sell me a book on twenty-eight weekly instalments of $2.33 each!" cried the victim.

The policeman instantly released his hold.

"Run!" he cried. "Run like a whitehead! Maybe you can get away from him yet!"—Chicago Post.

He Had Been There.

Blimbus—Well, here's another housecleaning joke. This is the sixteenth housecleaning joke that I've seen in this paper within a week.

Hamby—Impossible, my boy, impossible. There is no such thing as a housecleaning joke. It's a tragedy.

Just a Gentle Dig.

"A man," said her dearest friend, "will always give up his seat in a street car to a pretty woman."

"I never have to stand," she asserted promptly.

"Yes," went on her dearest friend, "most men also have the same regard for age."—Chicago Evening Post.

The Consistencies.

"Accordeon plaiting went out of style long ago," she said severely.

"Of course," answered the man who calmly displays his ignorance; "a quiet little thing like an accordeon wouldn't stand any show among riotous loudness of current styles. It ought to be something in the orchestrion or brass band line."

Too Much of a Good Thing.

Parson Howlett—Mah tex' fo' dis ebenin's disco'se am toe be foun' in Philippians, chapter——

Deacon Goode (arising and making for the door)—Sorry fo' toe cause talk, but I hears dis Philippines question six days in de week, an' I doan' sit fo' to hear it on Sundays nohow. (Bangs the door).—Judge.

Earned the Reward.

"Ma, Mrs. Smith gave me a big piece of cake."

"Jimmie, I've often told you not to ask for anything to eat when you are over there."

"But ma, she gave me the cake because I told her who was here to dinner last night."—Chicago Record.

A Delicate Task.

"I see a light in your study late every night," said the politicans neighbor. "You must be working hard.'

"I am."

"Geting up another party platform?'

"No, indeed. I could dash off a party platform in ten minutes. I'm at work, now on a conditional acceptance of a political dinner invitation."

A SHRELOCK HOLMES.

A Sharp Eyed Individual Whose Deductions Were Logical.

"The last man who used this 'phone," said a New Orleans Sherlock Holmes, preparing to wrestle with the instrument in a public station, "was a short little fellow in a deuce of a hurry, smoking a cigarette. He asked for the Illinois Central freight office, was told they were busy and repeated the request five times, getting madder at each call. Meanwhile his cigarette went out, and after vainly searching for a match"——

"Hold on there!" exclaimed a friend, who had accompanied him to the booth. "What kind of a fairy story are you giving me, anyhow?"

"No fairy story at all," replied the amateur sleuth, blandly. "I was merely stating a few facts."

"But how the dickens did you ascertain them?"

"Plain as A B C, my boy. To begin with, the adjustable mouthpiece of the instrument is pulled down, as you see, to its fullest extent, indicating clearly that the last user was very much undersized. Isn't that evident?"

"Y-e-e-es, I guess so; but how about the rest?"

"Well, look at that ledge, and you will observe five charred spots and an equal number of small piles of tobacco ash. What do you infer? Why, obviously, that the gentleman was smoking and laid down his cigarette each time he called. The piles of ash are still undisturbed, showing they were recently deposited, and they are small, proving plainly that the intervals of calling were brief.

"My logical conclusion was that the 'phone he wanted happened to be busy, and I looked instinctively for a memorandum of its number, which most men make under such circumstances. I found it, as I anticipated, on top of the box, scrawled in pencil and recognized the number of the freight office. Such memoranda are almost always rubbed out by the sleeve of the next customer, and as this one is still fresh and bright, it is fair to presume it was made by the last man in the booth—otherwise the short chap with the cigarette. Moreover, a freight office 'phone is usually busy at this hour, so the clews interlock and sustain one another. Not so, my dear boy?"

"But the matches?"

"Oh, deduce the match incident from those fresh toothpicks on the floor. Where a man in a hurry searches for a match he invariably finds quantities of toothpicks. I would"

"Are you through with that 'phone?" asked a short, stout stranger, appearing suddenly at the door and vigorously puffing a cigarette: "because if you are I"——

"Certainly, sir," said the analyst, smiling. "I think you will find the freight office disengaged at present."

"Well, I'll be hanged," said the friend.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Leader Led.

"Whar yo' gwine wif dat calf, Eph?"
"I dunno. He don't seem to hab made up his min' yit!"

A Slight Reduction.

"Wretch! There's a letter in your coat pocket I gave you to mail three months ago!"

"It can't be possible, my dear."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because I'm pretty sure I haven't had that coat more'n ten weeks!"

More Select.

"If I were Postmaster General, "he said effusively, "I would put your picture on every stamp.

"Oh. I prefer being kissed by just one man," she answered.

And then they began on the second hundred.—Philadelphia North American.

GOLF.

In notes from Long Island popular resorts, the golf players at Long Beach come in for favorable notice. Among the crack golf players is mentioned Miss Mary Lewis Evans, from Plainfield, a guest and cousin of Mrs. Barnaby, who is early and late on the links.

Jefferson, N.H., August 31.—A team match was played here yesterday between the women players of the Waumbeck Golf Club. Miss Louise Fisk, of Plainfield, was on the winning side. She was defeated by her opponent, Miss Barrett, however, one up. Miss Kaufman halved her match with her opponent, Miss Newbold. In another team match A. R. Fisk was defeated by A. E. Newbold, by one hole. J. T. Baker defeated F. K. Curtis by one hole.

The fall golf season practically opens Saturday. At the Park Golf Club, the contest for the Mrs. C. W. Mc Cutchen Cup will be continued during the next two months and there is every prospect of an exciting contest. It is anybody's race as yet for none of the leading candidates have gotten far enough ahead to prevent the results of one afternoon's play turning them all around. Meredith Dryden, secretary of the club, now leads with 10½ points in his favor. W. de la R. Anderson is second, one point behind him. Then Gifford W. Cooley is third with eight points. Charles E. Faber is fourth and G. W. Faber fifth. G. Faber has been absent all August but was in the lead at the time of his departure. He plays a steady conscientious game that is bound to bring him well toward the top at the end. He is likely to give the leaders a chase before he goes away to college.

—The A. V. D. Honeyman's excursion party to Europe are expected home Wednesday.

—Tomorrow evening there will be a regular meeting of the Borough Council to transact important business.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World

According to the Boston critics, "Davy Jones," the new farcical operetta which will be presented at the Stillman Music Hall Sept. 5th by the Boston Serenaders, embraces more popular melodies in its score than any of the more pretentious operatic compositions of the last ten years. There are at least eight numbers in the piece that are of that catchy nature that enable the hearers to whistle them after the first hearing. One of the most tuneful and pleasing is entitled, "Don't Get Gay With Shay."

* * * * *

New and fetching costumes, handsome scenery and a large company of extraordinary good singers, are the features which have made and are making John W. Isham's "Octoroons" such a world famous success. They will be seen at Music Hall tonight. The opening social absurdity entitled "7-11-77" is one of merriment and portrays the superstitions believed in by the average negro. Policy playing is indulged in to the fullest extent. Original rag-time tuneful songs, pretty dances, coupled with witty dialogue, and some costly and beautiful gowns are displayed in the olio. Miss Belle Davis, the star of "Brown's In Town" Company last season, who set New York and Chicago wild with her cleverness as an exponent of coon songs and as a comedienne, and who ran for sixteeen weeks at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, New York, being featured all summer, appears also. Smart and Williams, ebony comiques, Hampton and Johnson, musical mokes, the Brittons, the greatest grotesque and eccentric dancers, Wm. English, the Beau Brummel of Blackville, Billy Miller the mimic, and others. The closing portion of the entertainment is devoted to operatic selections. "A Romance of Old Venince," an original operatic, introduces an immense chorus. There are charming gavottes and the ensembles and dances are masterpieces of scenic art which the electrical effects serve but to heighten and the choral accompaniment makes superlatively effective. Miss Walker and Mr. Pankey have the lending soprano and tenor roles, and are truly artists.

Delightful Salamagundi Party Given at Mountain Home of Voehls.

The summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Voehl on the mountain near Mt. Bethel, known as "Sunset Cottage," was the scene of a very enjoyable salamagundi party last evening. It was arranged by the Misses Voehl and Miss Addie Carney in return for the many pleasant receptions tendered them by their friends during their stay at "Sunset Cottage." The cottage and grounds were prettily illuminated with colored Chinese lanterns and flags.

After the games the young people enjoyed a dance and light refreshments were served. The following guests were present: Edward F. Nuse, M. D., Harry A. Nuse, of New York; Chas. A. Coddington, Clifford Schorb, Albert Coddington, Rufus Giddis, Chauncey Martin and Eugene Giddis, of Mt. Horeb; John Lehlein, Theodore Lehlein, James Clarkson and Nate Robbins, of Metuchen; Albert Bartell and Elem Perrine, of Martinville; the Misses Bertha Beekman, Eldora Beekman, Florence Beekman, Alice Martin, Grace Martin, of Martinville; the Misses Edith Nuse, Anna Nuse, Lillian Giddes, Mattie Perrine, of Liberty Corner; Miss Cora Schorb, of Mount Horeb; Miss Ada VanHorn, of Plainfield, and Miss Jessie Preeze, of Brooklyn.

NEW GROCERY.

C. E. Gulick & Co. Will Open a Store on Duer Street and Lincoln Place.

C. E. Gulick & Co., the Park grocers, who will open a first-class grocery Saturday at the corner of Lincoln place and Duer street, have nearly completed their arrangements. The building throughout has been improved and repaired, while through the judicious use of attractive paint everything presents a pleasing appearance. The store is stocked with groceries of the first class, and it will be the aim of the enterprising and hustling firm to keep it so. People living in the vicinity will appreciate the establishment of such a grocery, and will no doubt assist in making the business a successful one. The firm is of the obliging sort, and they will study to please their customers.

No Services In Congregational Church.

There will be no services in the Congregational church Sunday. The church has been closed all August and will remain so until the second Sunday in September which is a week from next Sunday.
